NORTH POLE MYSTERY GROWS

SECOND QUAKE IN JAPAN; DEATH TOLL NEAR 1,000

TokioRocked;Towns Swept by Fire.

BULLETIN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, May 24, 2 a. m.—Tokio was momentarily terrorized shortly before midnight by two sharp vertical quakes, the majority of the people tumbling out of bed and rushing outdoors. There was no damage, but nervousness caused by the Toyooka disaster terrified the city.

The news from the scene of yesterday's quake continues fragmentary as communications are only partly restored.

Dispatches state that the death list at Toyooka is not less than 500. The Shironosaki health resort built at the foot of a high cliff is reported completely buried by landslides with deaths of 500. Kasugamura, a seaside village, was wiped out by a tidal wave. Relief planes and trains are already at the stricken district. A few were injured at Osaka and Kobe due to the panic.

TOKIO, May 23.—Earthquakes in the district around Osaka, Kobe, and [illegible], at 11:10 o'clock this morning took heavy toll. Big office buildings [illegible] and were damaged and smaller buildings fell.

Six military planes dispatched from Osaka to Toyooka report eighty dead in Kuniyama and Fukuchi, small towns, indicating the death list may prove large. As further reports came in government officials announced that they believed 300 had been killed in Toyooka and vicinity.

The center of the quake was between Kyoto and Tottori, where many structures, including the railway station and telegraph offices, were destroyed. It was the greatest quake in this region for thirty years. No reports have been received from rural parts.

Fires Doom City of Toyooka.

The worst danger is over in Oshka, Kyoto, Kobe and Nagoya, where fires did not follow the quake. The cities are in the wildest confusion, every one being in the streets and afraid to reenter the buildings.

The greatest damage was done at the seaport of Toyooka, on the Japan sea in Tango province. A fire is raging and the city is doomed. The population of 10,000 is fleeing to the country.

The hot spring resort of Konosaki was wiped out by fire. The quake wrecked the railway station and 200 houses and fire broke out immediately, trapping many. Dispatches say the town is a sea of fire.

A train due at Toyooka is missing and it is feared it was entombed in Ashiya tunnel, which collapsed. A locomotive at Toyooka was thrown off the track and another train was overturned near Geyyqyo. Ikuno silver mine, the largest in Japan, was much damaged, the tunnels caving in.

Plane Visits Quake Scene.

OSAKA, Japan, May 23.—Tyuno [illegible], once a smiling city of 600 dwellings, noted for hot springs and health resorts, is tonight a smoking ruined city of dead.

From an airplane tonight—rushed there with staff correspondents of the Osaka Mainichi—the first views of the disaster were obtained. A great cloud of smoke rolled up from the city which is a cindered pile after earthquake and fire swept it today.

Several hundred houses, many of them only frail bamboo structures, crashed down beneath the force of the terrible earth rattlings.

Later the whole city was swathed in fire. Your correspondent saw from the airplane only a few houses unscathed.

Five Square Miles Leveled.

Toyooka was the next town your correspondent saw.

This village near the Japan sea was [illegible] almost completely swept by the fire, which, breaking out in two districts, had enveloped the city and was still roaring tonight. At first 800 houses there crumpled in. Later, another 1,200, or about [illegible] the town's total structures, partly [illegible].

Refugees, terrified, were rushing out to the zones where they hoped for safety. But it is believed that the casualties must have been heavy, for within a five square mile area in Toyooka and Kinosaki virtually all towns and villages are level with the earth, snapped away by the fire.

COOLIDGE, ILL EARLY IN DAY, RECOVERS AND TAKES POTOMAC TRIP

Washington, D. C., May 23.—[Special.]—President Coolidge suffered a slight attack of indigestion shortly after he reached his office this morning, but had so recovered by 2 o'clock that he was able to leave for his regular week-end trip on the Mayflower.

A message late tonight from the Mayflower said all on board were well.

White House statements made no mention of the cause of the indigestion, but stated that shortly after he retired to his study in the White House that the attack was nothing of a "serious nature." All his morning engagements with the exception of a ten minute call from Senator Borah [Rep., Idaho] were canceled.

The attack followed closely on President Coolidge's arrival at the executive offices and before he had seen any callers.

He immediately notified Everett Sanders, his secretary, that he was not feeling well and retired to his room in the White House, where he was treated by the White House physicians.

It is believed that the extremely warm weather of yesterday and today had somewhat lowered the President's vitality.

Mrs. Coolidge was out walking when the President became ill and found him under the care of the physicians when she returned.

BOY, 11, IS KILLED BY SAND CAVE-IN; FATHER UNHURT

Grand Rapids, Mich., May 23.—(AP)—The body of 13 year old James Hoogerhyde, who was trapped in the cave-in of a sand hill in Richmond Hills suburb early tonight, was reached and removed by a rescue party shortly after 10 p. m.

Conrad Hoogerhyde, the boy's father, who went to his rescue, was taken out apparently uninjured.

The boy entered an opening in the side of the sand hill in pursuit of his dog, which was chasing a small animal. Then the roof of the cave fell in. Two boys heard young Hoogerhyde's screams for help and ran to summon his father.

Boy, 8, Dies in Sand Pit.

Minneapolis, Minn., May 23.—(AP)—Frank Rapacy, 8, lost his life and Joe Boanaski, 11, narrowly escaped death in an attempt to rescue him when they were caught by a landslide in a sand pit cave while at play here late today.

President Burton, U. of C., Said to Have Chance to Live

Ernest De Witt Burton, president of the University of Chicago, has a chance for life, said his physicians yesterday at Presbyterian hospital, where he has undergone two major operations. They characterized his condition as "slightly improved." A bulletin stated that his pulse in the morning was 100, his temperature 100, and his respiration 18.

Corner Man Suspected of Slaying Girl

BULLETIN.

Portland, Me., May 23.—(AP)—Belief that Harry A. Kirby, wanted for the murder of Miss Aida Hayward, is cornered in a barn in South Portland was expressed by Chief Fred E. Sanborn of the state highway police tonight. Aid was summoned from the Portland police department and five motorcycle patrolmen were rushed to the scene.

Winthrop, Me., May 23.—[Special.]—Searchers for some clew to the shooting of Mrs. Emma M. Towns in her cottage on Lake Maranacook, the abduction of her niece, Miss Aida Hayward, and the burning of the cottage last Tuesday found the body of Miss Hayward today hidden in another cottage on the lake.

The body, almost nude, lay between two mattresses of a bed on the second floor of the cottage of Jennie Gray at Pine Point. The woman apparently had been atacked and choked to death. The Gray cottage is situated 1½ miles from the former home of Miss Hayward.

Police Hunt for Youth.

Police immediately began a search for Harry A. Kirby, 20 years old, of Watertown, Mass., who for two weeks had occupied the cottage in which the body was found.

Until the body was found it appeared that every conceivable clew had been run to earth. But the search was continued, stimulated by the offer of a reward of $1,000 by Fred Moulton of Lexington to any one who would find his sister-in-law dead or alive.

Death News Kept from Aunt.

Meantime no word of the finding of the body has been given to Mrs. Towns, who has been in a hospital since she was shot.

The shooting and abduction occurred Tuesday night, the assailant having hidden himself in the cottage occupied by Mrs. Towns and her niece. The two women had been to an entertainment in Winthrop village. Returning, they entered their cottage, only to be met by two quick pistol shots, both directed at Mrs. Towns. When aid reached the wounded woman it was discovered that Miss Hayward had been spirited away and the cottage set on fire.

Constable Shot When He Stops Booze Suspect

Constable M. R. Smith of State's Attorney Russell Hanson's office in La Salle county was shot in the right leg last night north of Streator by an alleged bootlegger whose car he had stopped.

When Joe Latino of Ottawa was told by Smith to stop his auto and submit to arrest, Latino stopped, but opened fire as the policeman approached. Smith was felled by the bullet in his leg, but quickly got up and returned the fire as Latino drove away.

CHECK SUSPECT IS LINKED WITH BANK ROBBERY

Police believed last night that a man who gave his name as Leo Harrison, and who was arrested on a charge of passing some $2,000 in worthless checks on hotels, may be the Leo Harrison wanted in connection with the $31,000 robbery of the Vandeventer Trust and Savings bank of St. Louis on Feb. 7.

LEO HARRISON.

The man also has been known as Leo Harris, John Kelsey, and Harry Leavitt. After giving several checks, since declared to be worthless, to haberdashers in Davenport, Ia., Harrison directed the Blackhawk hotel there to send his trunk, express collect, to the Edgewater Beach hotel, Chicago.

When the trunk reached the local hotel the charges on it were $68 and the hotel refused to accept it. Later Sergts. Murphy and McSwiggen of the detective bureau arrested him.

With the man was arrested a woman, who said she was Mrs. Harrison, but the police say she is Iva Gowen.

Miss Loretta Taylor, 5758 Dorchester avenue, said to be a former sweetheart of Harrison, told the detectives last night that the man they have in custoday is not Harrison.

TORRID SPELL KICKED OUT BY BOREAL BLAST

City Escapes Storm; Lakes Swept.

Lakes Huron and Ontario yesterday reported an extraordinary tidal wave which rose to seven feet and, receding, left the shoreline farther out than was ever before recorded.

Reports current yesterday that the weather bureau had forecast abnormal weather for early today caused special orders to the police and fire departments to be ready to aid any who might be injured or rendered homeless and resulted in thousands of telephone calls to the bureau and to newspaper offices.

Last night the bureau's final forecast said the disturbance would be confined to storms on the great lakes, warnings of which were sent to all shippers. The lake disturbance was expected to be most severe on southern Michigan, southern Huron, Erie and Ontario. The wind was lashing Lake Michigan last night, and pleasure boat owners expressed gratitude for warnings which caused them to forego cruises yesterday afternoon and evening.

Temperature Here Drops.

Until 3 o'clock in the afternoon the course of the temperature in Chicago indicated that the 94 degree mark reached on Friday night almost would be equaled before the day was over. But between 3 and 4 p. m. the mercury plunged from 85 degrees to 62, and by 8 o'clock it had dropped to 48—a decline of 37 degrees in five hours.

The weather bureau predicted last night that there might be showers in this immediate region today and that it would continue cool. The lowest temperature this morning probably would be between 40 and 45 degrees, it was said.

Denies Tornado Forecast.

Because of the report that a tornado might be expected, the bureau last night issued the following special bulletin:

"No forecast of a tornado, nor any forecast that could possibly be construed as indicating tornadic conditions, has been issued by the Chicago weather office, and any special warnings circulated and distributed have been unauthorized indicating alarming conditions for the Chicago area."

Earlier the bureau had reviewed conditions as folows: "Between the cool wave in the north and the warm wave in the sections farther south a storm of considerable intensity has developed, accompanied by showers, scattered thunderstorms, and shifting gales. The situation as a whole is quite abnormal; in fact, remarkable."

Michigan Buildings Wrecked.

A severe wind struck Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., late yesterday and at Trout Lake, fifty miles away, reached the proportions of a tornado. It uprooted large trees, tore a veranda off Birch Lodge, a summer hotel, and ripped the roofs off barns. The wind was preceded by an electrical storm and accompanied by snow. Snow fell also at Harbor Springs, Mich.; Marquette, Mich., and Alpena, Mich.

Storms late yesterday also caused damage mounting into hundreds of thousands of dollars in northeastern Ohio, central Minnesota and eastern North Dakota. Six persons were injured in Minnesota and North Dakota, and the property loss was estimated at from $500,000 to more than $1,000,000.

Telegraph Wires Down.

The Western Union Telegraph company last night reported that many of its wires in the northwest were down, but that no points were cut off.

Rochester, N. Y. reported that at 7:20 o'clock yesterday morning a seven foot tidal wave swept in from Lake Ontario when there was no wind. Alpena, Mich. reported a seven foot fluctuation in Lake Huron Friday night, the change in the level being the greatest in the memory of living persons.

TIDAL WAVE HITS 2 LAKES

Alpena, Mich., May 23.—[Special.]—A seven foot fluctuation in the lake level, the greatest in the memory of any persons living and without precedent, according to the records of the Alpena station of the U. S. weather bureau, occurred along the Lake Huron shore of the lower peninsula of Michigan last evening.

The greatest change was probably at Rockport, where the water rose four feet and fell seven feet leaving one of the largest steel freighters on the bottom in a loading slip.

At Calcite the water variation was

Evolution Suit Started as Test Plot by 2 Pals

Dayton, Tenn., May 23.—(AP)—Dayton tonight was dusting off its best bib and tucker in preparation for the first phase of the court test of the constitutionality of the recently enacted Tennessee law against the teaching of evolution in public schools.

JUDGE JOHN T. RAULSTON.

Presentment of an indictment to the Rhea county grand jury, called in special session Monday, will start the revolution of the wheel that is expected eventually to decide whether evolution is a theory, a science, or both, in Tennessee, and whether it can form a part of school courses, as the recent legislature has said it cannot.

John F. Scopes, science teacher in the Rhea county high school, was formally charged with a violation of the law and May 9 was given a preliminary hearing before three justices of the peace. They held that he was technically, if not intentionally, guilty, and held him for action by the grand jury. His bond was placed at $1,000, but he was not required to post sureties.

Scene of Historic Trial.

Dayton is a small town of 2,000 souls. The courthouse where the trial will be held if Scopes is indicted, regarded as certain, is a building of the orthodox courthouse type, sheltered by scores of trees, a dozen varieties of maples. An immense lawn surrounds the 25 year old building and here it is planned to have most of the crowds expected to gather for the trial, hear the argument, mechanical loud speakers being installed in the courtroom.

The town itself is in the center of a rich section. Rhea is well at the head of the class as a strawberry producing county and there are only some half dozen minerals known to the United States that cannot be found within fifty miles of Dayton.

Dayton also runs largely to scenery. Half a dozen mountain peaks look down on the town. The Tennessee river, with its many famous bends, is a neighbor.

How the Case Began.

The present case, in a fair way to be heard round the world, was started one night when a crowd of congenial spirits had gathered in a drug store.

In a discussion of the legislative edict against the teaching of evolution Scopes remarked that he was teaching it in the biology courses.

Then it was the ball was started rolling that may land the Dayton case in the United States Supreme court. Dr. George Rappleyea, a chemical engineer, manager of an iron and coal company in Dayton, at once suggested that Scopes submit to arrest that a test case might be had.

Scopes acquiescing, Dr. Rappleyea went before a justice of the peace and swore to a warrant for the school teacher's arrest. He was charged with teaching evolution.

FAIMAN, EX HEAD OF GERM SCHOOL, SUED FOR $10,000

James Boylen, former student at the National University of Sciences, where William D. Shepherd is charged with having acquired the art that enabled him to poison his millionaire ward, yesterday brought suit for $10,000 damages against C. C. Faiman, former head of the university and chief witness against Shepherd.

Attorney Jay J. McCarthy, Boylen's lawyer, declared Boylen was unable to obtain the course at the university for which he paid $185 tuition fees, because Faiman had no live germs at the school.

NO WORD HEARD OF AMUNDSEN AND HIS PLANES

Fear Flyers Were Forced Down.

BULLETIN.

New York, May 23.—(AP)—The North American Newspaper alliance announced through the Associated Press at 9:30 o'clock tonight that no news had been received from the Amundsen-Ellsworth north pole expedition. The alliance further announced that the weather at the Spitzbergen base of the expedition continues perfect, with moderate temperature, summer sunlight, no wind, and ice free seas.

OSLO, May 23.—[United Press.]—Strained hours have now turned into two days and beyond—and there is still no definite word of Capt. Roald Amundsen and his arctic aviators.

Whether the brave men who set out Thursday in their Dornier "Whale" planes to reach the pole for the first time by the air route have accomplished this enormous feat and are lingering for scientific observations is not known.

Friends of Amundsen and his American colleague, Lincoln Ellsworth, who was born in Chicago, hoped that they had.

But as the clocks marked night again in this northern region where the summer is one long day without darkness, there were fears that perhaps all was not well with the air pioneers. As the hours since Amundsen's hopoff from King's bay, Spitzbergen, piled up to more than 48 there began to be some wavering of the faith.

Weather Favors Flyers.

One big thing, though, buoyed those waiting at Spitzbergen and elsewhere, and that was the arctic weather. Reports showed it continuing excellent. Hence the thought that Amundsen might have been swept down in a storm was eliminated.

If anything has befallen his expedition, it must be due to defects in the powerful motors, his friends thought. They sought to console themselves with the thought that Amundsen himself set no definite hour for his return.

So, they argued, it might be that he had stayed on some hours at the pole, or perhaps on newly discovered arctic territory to observe it and make scientific notations.

Uneasiness Grows.

If that were the case, then there was nothing to cause undue concern. Yet, the uneasiness grew with the span of hours. People recalled words of some arctic explorers, who scouted Amundsen's chances of reaching the north pole.

Will he come back? That was the question Norsemen asked one another. And, only conjecture was the answer, for the elements, the silences of the unanswering north do not heed the curious.

Arctic experts said he had a fighting chance to sledge his way back to civilization should his plane fail, but, they did not count too much with his luck in the event that, somewhere near the pole, he and his unfearing fliers have come to grief.

[Capt. Amundsen's two planes carried sledges and skis and sufficient emergency provisions to last the party a month. They are also supplied with guns and ammunition to enable them to kill game, which abounds in Greenland.]

Not Worried Over Explorer.

[Copyright: 1925: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, May 23.—Dispatches from Copenhagen state that little or no anxiety is felt there regarding the Amundsen expedition. Amundsen increased his benzine supply to such an extent he had to discard his wireless apparatus and news from him cannot be expected until he either is back at Spitsbergen, if the flight is successful, or if a failure, until he and his companions can make their way across the ice to North Greenland.

One dispatch says: "While awaiting news it is worth remembering that it would take five hours for a wireless message from the expedition ship Fram to reach Copenhagen and five for retransmission. Those whose arctic experience warrant expression of opinion appear to think the absence of news of Amundsen's return to Spitsbergen indicates either he landed at the pole or that he discovered an intermediate land where he descended for investigation and may thereafter have encountered difficulties reascending or found it necessary to wait for better flying conditions.

"Capt. Godfrey Hansen doubts that Amundsen will attempt to land and believes he will remain in the air at the pole until he has ascertained all that is possible and then will drop the Norwegian flag and begin the return."

The airplane engines used by Amundsen are both 370 horse power of the Rollys Royce IX Eagle type and if they succeed in getting to the pole and back it will be great proof of their reliability.

The geographers of Great Britain are waiting with anxiety for news of Amundsen, although they have no special knowledge of his flight. For some years relations between Amundsen and the Royal Geographical society have not been close and he did not inform it of his plans for the polar flight.

From one point of view, his venture is considered here more in the nature of a feat of travel than anything else. He has planned to make such a short stop at the north pole, if successful, that it is quite impossible to make any observations of scientific value. At the same time in two points, both important, it is considered probable he would by the mere fact of traversing the polar regions be able to bring back interesting information.

Hope for Land Discovery.

In the first place, he should be able to throw much light on the controversy concerning the existence of undiscovered land in the polar basin. It is possible the low lying land, covered, it is presumed, with ice and snow, might not be detected from a rapidly moving aeroplane, but if the land had any elevation it must be identified. Even in Greenland districts covered with permanent ice fields there are such rugged rocks that the snow and ice cannot rest on them and so they crop out bleak and bare through the prevailing white of snow.

Secondly, even a rapid flight to the pole and back will determine a point much discussed by meteorologists regarding the so-called inversion temperature of the air. That is, it is believed in the polar basin the higher strata of air is warmer than the lower, in consequence of the latter being continually cooled by ice floes. Such an inversion, if it exists, must have an important effect on the air currents and would help to explain meteorological phenomena.

Explorations in both the Arctic and ant-Arctic regions in the past have been very helpful to weather prophets.

Prepared to Hunt Party.

Boston, Mass., May 23.—(AP)—All the plans of Capt. Donald B. MacMillan's arctic expedition will be subordinated to the relief of Roald Amundsen if Amundsen is not heard from before the MacMillan ships, Bowdoin and Peary, leave this country late in June, Capt. MacMillan announced today.

Commander MacMillan believes the chance of finding Amundsen in northern Grant Land will be good. If, when the MacMillan expedition reaches Etah, Greenland, in August, the Amundsen party has not been heard from, Capt. MacMillan will dispatch airplanes to Old Fort Conger, on the shore of Grant Land, where he thinks it possible Amundsen may be found.

At Fort Conger there are three small huts, a big coal mine, and game is plentiful. Commander MacMillan said musk oxen, seals, reindeer, arctic hares, ducks, and ptarmigan would afford sufficient food.

Cache Has Week's Supplies.

Contrary to published statements, there is no cache of food at Cape Columbia, but there is a small cache at Ward Hunt island, twenty miles west of Cape Columbia, with supplies sufficient to last five men a week. Commander MacMillan left it there in 1909 with the idea that it might be of use to Admiral Peary in his polar expedition.

ACCUSED GERM CASE FIXER HELD IN $2,500 BAIL

Defense Lawyers Flayed by Crowe in Court.

Climaxing a week of alleged attempted jury fixing, bribery, coercion and the disappearance of a principal state's witness, State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe in a heated session in open court yesterday accused Attorneys William Scott Stewart and W. W. O'Brien of the William D. Shepherd defense with "trying to get a lot of crooks on Shepherd's jury."

The charge was made in the midst of contempt proceedings before Judge Thomas J. Lynch, in whose court Shepherd is on trial for the alleged killing of his millionaire ward, William Nelson McClintock, by inoculating him with typhoid germs for the purpose of obtaining young McClintock's $1,000,000 estate.

Politician Is Accused.

James C. Callan, a north side ward politician, who said he was employed as an "investigator" by the attorneys for the defense, was cited for contempt by Prosecutor Crowe on the grounds that he tried "to fix" Phillip Barry, a prospective juryman, last Wednesday.

It was during a torrid 25 minute session when Crowe put Barry on the stand, and Attorney Stewart kept demanding the right to cross-examine him on his story, that heated words and bitter accusations passed between the prosecutor and the defense lawyer.

Crowe insisted that since Stewart did not represent Callan he had no business in the case, that Stewart stood before the court as merely a spectator.

Basis of Stewart's Demands.

Stewart demanded fairness from the court. He insisted on his hand that his good name and integrity and that of his partner, Mr. O'Brien, were being impugned and that he ought to have an opportunity to cross-examine Barry to "show that he does not tell the truth."

Once State's Attorney Crowe asked the court to have Stewart forced out of the lawyers' circle and back among the spectators in court. Several other times he demanded that Stewart be held for contempt because Stewart insisted on interrupting the contempt proceedings.

Callen Held Under Bail.

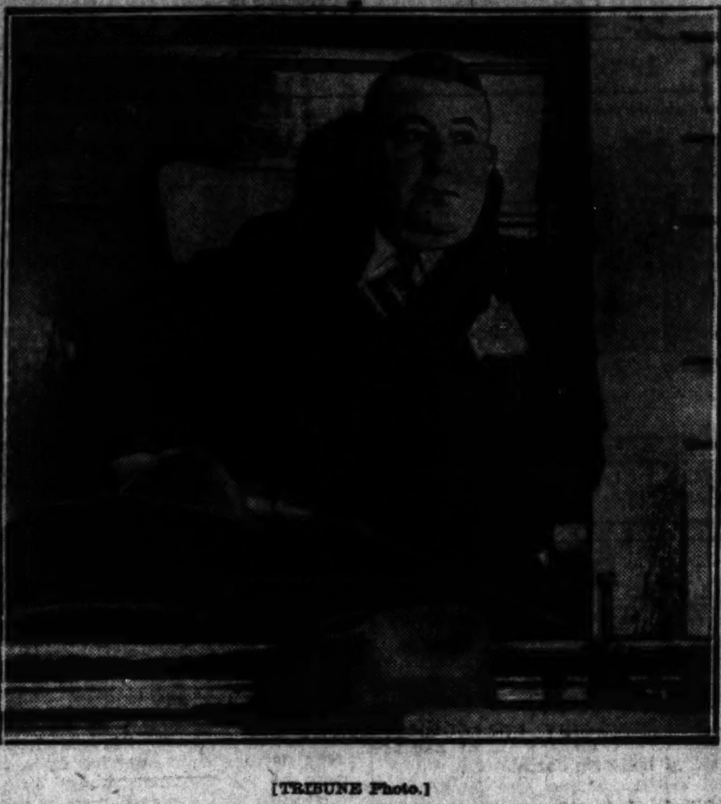
Judge Lynch warned Stewart several times, ruled with the state's attorney, and in the end held Callan under $2,500 bail while he prepares an answer to Barry's charges. He must file this answer with the court in three days.

The clashing between Crowe and Stewart began as soon as Barry took the stand. It ended only when the prosecutor finally walked out of the courtroom with Stewart still demanding the right to cross-examine Barry, demanding of Judge Lynch that Crowe be called back.

The judge was leaving the bench as Stewart said:

"Your honor, this will be broadcast in the Sunday and Monday newspapers. People will get the impression that Stewart and O'Brien are responsible for this stuff." Then he pleaded, referring to Crowe: "Make him bring Barry and come back here, your honor."

Tells of Attempted Jury Fixing



[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Phillip Barry, a prospective juryman in the Shepherd case, took the stand in Judge Lynch's courtroom yesterday and under State's Attorney Crowe's questioning testified to an alleged jury fixing attempt by James C. Callan, a north side ward politician.

Crowe Dashes Back.

"I can't make him do anything he doesn't want to do," Judge Lynch was saying. When Crowe dashed back into the courtroom with a third request that Stewart be made to "keep out of this proceeding and held for contempt."

As Barry ascended the stand Stewart said: "I am glad to see an investigation at this time. I believe I can develop, if I am allowed, that this venireman was not spoken to through any authorization of ours."

Then Crowe for the first time demanded Stewart keep out of the matter and the court warned Stewart, and ruled with the prosecutor. Barry was examined by Mr. Crowe.

Barry Points Out Callan.

Q.—Do you know Callan? A.—Yes, sir, I do.

Q.—Point him out. Barry did so.

Q.—How long have you known him? A.—Seventeen or eighteen years.

Q.—Did you see him in this building since you were called for jury service? A.—Yes, sir; in the lobby facing the elevator.

Q.—Tell the court what was said. A.—It was during the recess Tuesday forenoon. I met him in the hall and shook hands with him. He said to Callan: "Are you on this jury too?" He said he wasn't and I said I had been called for service. He said: "You ought to make a good juror for Shepherd." Then he asked me: "Phil, who is your closest friend?" and I said: "My mother, my mother-in-law, and my wife." And he said: "No, I mean a man friend," and then he asked me about my brother, Dave, and where he could get in touch with him. I asked him why he asked such an unusual question, and he replied: "O, I'm not a —— fool, and I know I am not talking to one." I then asked him what he was doing and he said he was working for Stewart and O'Brien, and he added: "There will be nothing to this case, it will go up in smoke anyway."

Stewart Interrupts Crowe.

At this point Attorney Stewart attempted again to say something. Mr. Crowe entered a strenuous objection saying he had no business in the proceeding.

"Not unless you want to claim fathership of Callan," the state's attorney shouted.

And Stewart shouted back: "I certainly would not claim fathership of Faiman!"

He referred to Dr. C. C. Faiman, the state's chief witness against Shepherd, who confessed he sold the deadly typhoid germs to Shepherd.

Then Stewart continued: "They are slandering us with this. I am here for the protection of the defense. I am interested in this because this proceeding will be broadcast. It is all a part of their plot." He pointed an excited and wavering arm at Barry on the stand. Here we have a detective—a private detective——"

Downed by Crowe.

But State's Attorney Crowe drowned him out with his objections, and the court made Stewart be quiet again. Bail was then set for Callan and again Stewart demanded a right to cross-examine.

"This is for the purpose of inflaming the public mind," he pleaded.

Then came the clash in which Mr. Crowe made his most serious charges.

"Mr. Stewart is violating the rules of law," he said in a rasping tone. "He has no more business here than an outsider. He is trying to talk for the purpose of spreading propaganda."

"Why," interrupted Stewart, "I wouldn't want Barry on the jury. I don't believe he would be fair. I don't think he's honest."

And Crowe shouted: "No, you don't want any honest men on the jury."

"O, you'd like to have honest men on the jury I suppose," rejoined Stewart.

Crowe seemed beside himself with rage. He stopped and gazed with smoldering eyes for a moment at Stewart. Then he said slowly and with venom:

"Well, I know this; there's a lot of crooks around here you'd like to get on the jury."

Should Callan, as he probably will, deny the charges of Barry, that will probably end the contempt proceeding.

Three more jurymen were tentatively accepted during the morning session of the Shepherd case proper.

JUROR'S WIFE IN DESPAIR

Judge Lynch yesterday also ruled that Ralph Sedgwick of Maywood, sworn in with the first panel of four jurors, must remain on the Shepherd jury despite the fact that Mrs. Sedgewick threatened to "end it all" if her husband remained among the men who are to hold Shepherd's fate.

Mr. Sedgewick's mother reported to the court that Mrs. Sedgewick was in a morbid and nervous state and that she might commit suicide, as she had threatened. Dr. Allison Burdick, 17 North Crawford avenue, was sent by the court Friday to make an examination of Mrs. Sedgewick. A portion of the physician's report said:

"I found Mrs. Sedgwick suffering from self-induced hysteria due to the absence of her husband. She is in a mental attitude of despair."

Blast Kills Pirates Who Try to Rob Powder House

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, May 23.—A party of coastal pirates was killed, their launch blown to bits, several houses were demolished and a lighthouse was seriously damaged by a terrific explosion last night when the robbers attempted to raid the government dynamite station on the small island of Jocqueta off Acapulco harbor. The wounded lighthouse keeper and the dead bodies of the robbers this morning told the story of the attempt.

FATHER NAMED BY HIS SON AS GIRL'S SLAYER

Confession May Solve E. Chicago Murder.

Information furnished East Chicago Ind., police by an 11 year old boy involving his own father may result in clearing up the brutal murder last November of Florence Guazea, 15 years old, whose body, the head almost severed by a razor was found in the rear of a foundry in the Indiana town.

The boy giving the information is Steven Yasovich. He came into the police station early yesterday morning and, whimpering pitifully, approached Capt. Timothy O'Neill.

"My dad killed her. I know he did He told me so," wept the lad, swabbing his eyes with a dirty coat sleeve.

Draws Story from Boy.

"Killed who, son? What are you talking about?" demanded the bewildered captain.

"Florence—Florence Guazea, our neighbor. Don't you remember?"

Then the captain remembered and in a few minutes had drawn the story from the boy.

According to Steven, his father, Jack Yasovich, a 52 year old laborer, came home the morning after the murder with his shirt bespotted with blood. He forced the boy, Steven said, to heat water to wash away the tell-tale stains.

Says Father Confessed.

"I've just killed that Guazea girl. But don't you tell. If you do I'll kill you, too," Steven quoted his father as saying.

Frightened by his father's threats, the boy declared he had kept quiet throughout the furor of investigation that followed the finding of the body. He explained his visit to the police station by saying that his father had recently beat him continually and he feared longer to remain at home.

Capt. O'Neill hastened to the Guazea home at 4901 Perry avenue, Indiana Harbor, which is a shack in the rear of where the murdered girl lived. A search revealed, it is said, a blood-stained coat and a blood stained razor. The elder Yasovich was promptly arrested, but stoutly denied any knowledge of the killing.

After an all day grilling, in which the father was repeatedly accused directly by his young son, Yasovich continued to assert his innocence. But Capt. O'Neill declared he is confident he has the murderer of the girl in custody and that perhaps a formal charge would be placed against Yasovich today.

The Guazea girl disappeared after leaving her home alone to attend a neighborhood movie. A criminal attack had occurred, physicians said, previous to the murder.

UNCLE SAM NOW DUNS FOR DEBTS MADE AFTER WAR

Cites Agreements When Loans Were Made.

Washington, D. C., May 23.—[Special.]—Within the last few days the government has advised all debtor nations which borrowed after the war for reconstruction and relief purposes that this country expects them to make arrangements for funding their post-war debts at once.

This information called the attention of the governments to the agreement made at the time the credits were granted which guaranteed that the United States would not be discriminated against when their relief debts were repaid.

Violate Agreement.

It was pointed out that with the exception of Jugo-Slavia all the borrowing nations had made some settlements with other creditors, but had failed to negotiate settlements with the United States. This, it was pointed out, is in direct violation of the agreement.

Greater firmness was noticeable in the administration's attitude today concerning both war and postwar indebtedness.

The plain speaking was the obvious outcome of comment by prominent Americans in this country and Europe in the interest of having the United States cancel its war claims, or, at least, suspend for the present its policy of pressing its allied debtors for settlement.

French Attitude Angers.

The unofficial attitude of debtor nations, and especially the reports that France claimed that there was a distinction betwen political and postwar debts, with the construction placed upon the contention that the United States should cancel the political or war debts, is believed to have added to the spirit of resentment that flared up in official quarters today.

Administration officials are clearly angry over the comment critical of the government's policy, and feel that the attitude of the United States is being misrepresented abroad. More important, however, was the flat accusation that most of the allied governments which obtained money for postwar purposes from the United States treasury had been guilty of violating their guarantee, that there should be no discrimination against the United States.

View All Debts Alike.

It was learned at the state department today that this government holds there is no distinction made between post-war and pre-war debts as far as the obligation to repay is concerned. They are all governed by the debt funding law, it was said.

It was indicated no more leniency would be shown in settlement of the relief and reconstruction debts than will govern the settlement of the war debts.

Senator Borah [Rep., Idaho] conferred on international questions with President Coolidge today, and it is understood the foreign debt question was discussed.

ASK 8 YEAR LEASE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 23.—The Caillaux-Briand preliminary draft proposals for the payment of the French war debt to the United States provides for an eight year moratorium. The first annuity will be due in 1933, and then there will be amortization over seventy-two years at 3 per cent.

The French expect that if the Dawes plan is working at all it will be paying the maximum reparations in 1933.

NATHAN LEOPOLD FACES OPERATION FOR APPENDICITIS

Nathan F. Leopold, in the state penitentiary with Richard Loeb for the murder of Robert Franks, will go under the knife tomorrow or Tuesday in an operation for appendicitis, it was learned at Joliet last night.

Leopold was stricken during the last week for the second time since he started his life sentence and his condition was so serious that prison officials summoned relatives from Chicago. The young slayer rapidly recovered from the attack, but it was decided to operate in the hope of relieving him permanently.

His relatives were offered an opportunity to call in an outside doctor, if they desired, but refused and will allow Dr. J. A McKelvey, prison surgeon, to perform the operation. It was stated that their refusal to import specialists was in keeping with their policy not to have their wealth interfere in the slightest with having the boy pay the penalty for "the perfect crime," as he termed the slaying of the Chicago schoolboy.

U. S. Finds It Owns 415 Acres of Wisconsin Land

Washington, D. C., May 23.—(AP)—The interior department just has discovered that the government owns 415 acres of Bayfield county, Wisconsin.

Previous surveys showed the area to be under water, but it lies along the shores of a lake. The land will be thrown open to homestead entry on July 15, with world war veterans having a preference.

STRAUS PREDICTS SIX BILLION IN BUILDING FOR 1925

A prediction that the nation's 1925 building program will exceed $6,000,000,000 was made yesterday by S. W. Straus, head of S. W. Straus & Co., investment bankers, in the course of an industrial review.

"Building activities this year are already proportionately ahead of last year's record of $5,750,000,000," said Mr. Straus. "All trades and industries are materially benefitted by this increase in building. The general outlook leaves small room for comfort on the part of the business pessimist."

Mr. Straus is of the opinion that the constant demand on the part of the people to live better is largely responsible for the boost in building operations. "The luxury of yesterday is the necessity of today," he pointed out. "People by the millions are going to the suburbs because they like living that way better."

Des Plaines Camp Meeting to Be Held June 11-July 19

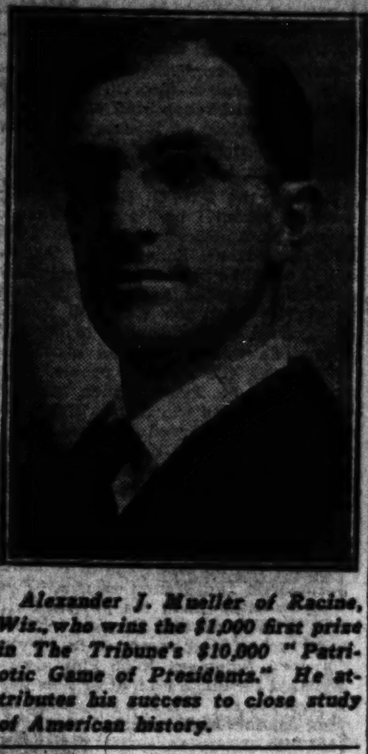
WISCONSIN MAN FIRST IN "GAME OF PRESIDENTS"

Wins Over 90,000 for $1,000 Tribune Prize.

"Presidents" Victor



Alexander J. Mueller of Racine, Wis., who wins the $1,000 first prize in The Tribune's $10,000 "Patriotic Game of Presidents." He attributes his success to close study of American history.

Know America.

That is the moral of THE TRIBUNE'S $10,000 "Patriotic Game of Presidents." The first prize of $1,000 goes to a man who credits his success to diligent research in American history.

The man is Alexander J. Mueller of Racine. "It was thorough study of America," he puts it, "that made me so familiar with the story of the Presidents and their faces."

Two universities, Northwestern and Illinois, contributed to this training of Mr. Mueller; it was at one of these schools in particular that he dipped most deeply into the national background.

The Money? Spent!

And what will he do with the money?

"Oh, that's already spent," he replied to the query when he had been told of his good fortune.

"Yes," chorused Mrs. Mueller, the only other member of the household, "spent it on our home. It will help pay off the mortgage."

It's an attractive home, at 320 Shelley road, Racine; a pretty cottage among other pretty cottages in the district known as Maple Grove, in sight of timbered hills.

It wasn't knowledge alone that won for Mr. Mueller, of course. To that may be added care and skill with shears and paste; weeks of labor, and the patience of Job.

Weeks and Weeks of Work.

"I thought he would go crazy before the last picture was pasted in," Mrs. Mueller says. "For weeks and weeks we spent our Sundays and evenings studying them out. Once Mr. Mueller was all but ready to give up before he had the last two Presidents cut and pasted together."

In almost every case the thousands of other entrants had failed because they were unable to decide how much of Andrew Jackson's face should be severed and combined with the remainder of President Coolidge's face. A straight cut across was not correct; and Mr. Mueller discovered that.

Mr. Mueller is a native of Racine, where he has spent the greater part of his life. By profession he is a minister, but at present he is doing clerical work, for ill health compelled him to give up the ministry a year ago. His last pastorate was with a rural community church at Mitchell, Ia.

A Simple Volume.

The prize winning entry is not elaborate. It is a small album bound in suede, with "The Nation's Pride" lettered upon the cover. Inside, on a background of brown, the pictures of the Presidents are mounted immaculately, and with perfect exactitude. The only decoration is supplied by a picture of the national capitol on the cover and small crossed flags of paper on the pages inside.

In striking contrast to Mr. Mueller's simple volume were elaborate entries from scores of contestants. Some devoted their attention to splendid bindings, some to highly decorated mounting; still others combined both features in unique displays.

It was no easy task for the judges to settle upon the winners. The first elimination was easy, for all entries that were untidy or incorrect were discarded at once. If George Washington's head was found resting on the nose of President Roosevelt, for example, there was not the shadow of a doubt that the entry did not deserve a prize.

Better and Best.

The next elimination demanded the selection of the better and best from survivals. Still there remained thousands to be considered. More than 90,000 sets of pictures had been received when the contest closed. Every one of these, with its representation of twenty-nine Presidents and their years of administration, was checked and filed according to its merits and demerits.

Entries came from every state in the union, in all sizes and shapes. They came from Canada, and even from faraway Czecho-Slovakia. They came from grade schools and colleges, from hospitals, private homes, and organizations. All possible representatives of families competed, from small sons to grandfathers.

With the name of the first prize winner made public, there still remains the selection of 1,537 other successful entrants. THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE next week will announce the names of others who are receiving awards.

3 AIDS OF RAJAH FACE DEATH FOR NAUTCH MURDER

BOMBAY, May 23.—(AP)—Three of the nine men charged with the murder in January of Abdul Kadir Baula, rich Mohammedan merchant and protector of Mumtaz Begum, the dancing girl who was once the favorite of the maharajah of Indore, were sentenced to death today.

The men sentenced to death were Svafi Ahmed, sergeant major of the Indore mounted police; Sham Rao Dighe, captain of the Indore air force, and an officer of the maharajah's household, named Ponde.

Anand Rao Phanse, adjutant general of the Indore state forces, and three other men were sentenced to deportation for life.

FLED FROM PRINCE'S PALACE.

Mumtaz Begum tired of the attentions of the Maharajah of Indore and escaped from his palace. She came under the protection of Abdul Kadir Baula.

On Jan. 12, at Malabar Hill, near Bombay, as Mumtaz and Baula were riding in an automobile, they were attacked by a gang of men for the presumed purpose of returning the girl to the household of the maharajah. A group of British officers who were passing went to the assistance of Baula and the girl. The assailants were finally routed, but during the stiff fight Baula was killed and the girl painfully wounded.

INSULL FINDS BRITAIN ON WAY TO NORMALCY

Great Britain and her colonies are well on the way to a normal, prewar basis, Samuel Insull, recently returned from a European trip, declared yesterday.

Mr. Insull was the principal speaker at a luncheon in the Hotel La Salle attended by 700 members of the Daughters of the British Empire. The meeting was in honor of the birthday anniversary of Queen Victoria.

"England has at length emerged from her troubles," said Mr. Insull. "She still has immense debts to liquidate but a normal basis will soon be reached."

Today, it was announced, dedication ceremonies will be held at Riverside when the new $250,000 British Old People's Home is opened. Mrs. G. Cooke Adams, vice president of the D. B. E., told of a $6,000 yearly pledge made by an anonymous donor for the maintenance of the home. She asserted that $30,000 a year will be needed.

Spectacles and Peddlers

The earliest spectacles were sold by peddlers, who went up and down the country with their packs and trays, fitting glasses hit or miss; caring for nothing but to sell their wares.

They wheedled, coaxed and tricked, telling many an amazing tale, no doubt.

That lasted for two hundred years—and we still have "peddlers" in stores and out.

Now the making and selling of eyeglasses is one of the most responsible of modern businesses, and the prescribing of proper lenses is—or should be—under the direction of competent eye specialists.

FIRST DIVISION OFF TO FRONT IN INFERNO OF ICE

"Only Death Could Be Worse," Says Bullard.

BY GEN. ROBERT LEE BULLARD.
Who commanded the First Division, then the Third Corps, and finally led the Second Army of the United States.

[As these are personal memories or experiences, the pronoun "I" can never be out of sight. I am not offering these memories as absolute fact, but as my impression and belief at the time.—R. L. Bullard.]

SECTION 8.

"I saw Gen. Pershing yesterday [diary, Dec. 28, 1917]. He is looking for results. He intends to have them. He will sacrifice any man who does not bring them."

GEN. DEBENEY.
[K. & H. Photo.]

With many inevitable delays, sacrifices, and changes my division had been preparing for this since August. It was to be business without compromising or without regard to persons or to things. The Russians were at this time surely proceeding toward a separate peace with the Germans. That, when accomplished, would enable the Germans to bring enormous reinforcements against the allies in France. It would be a threatening condition for the allies in the early spring. The American forces in France were gaining some in organization, supply, equipment, and training. But to me and to many these gains at that time seemed disproportionately small to the coming threat of the enemy in the spring of 1918.

Good Officers Hard to Get.

"I have [diary] much difficulty in getting officers who know anything. All are untrained and many of even our regular officers can never be worth anything in this war, unadaptable and immovable."

Many of these officers had learned the old set methods of requisition and supply of our times of peace and it was extremely difficult to move these out of the old rut. It was easier in some cases to remove the officer entirely and supply his place with a more adaptable, though less trained, one.

At the end of 1917, and even in the first two months of 1918, many of our supplies were still coming from our allies. Though good, our men were not used to them and could hardly be made to accept them. How quickly, on what slight things, human inadaptability is developed! We are things of habit.

"Jan. 8, 1918 [diary]. Am engaged in a hate making campaign against the Germans. I am trying to imbue our soldiers with a determined hatred of them, their method, their purposes and acts. I believe that I shall succeed."

Americans Not Easy Haters.

I felt justified by German conduct in Belgium and France. It was besides a part of the preparation, necessary. Long years of observation of American soldiers had taught me that they are never haters; that they are, even in warfare, very considerate and kindly toward their enemies. This history of the conduct of the Germans during the war showed the cruelty and brutality unnecessary in all cases and inexcusable in many cases. The enemy had thought, no doubt, that he could shorten the war by cruelty and frightfulness. His cruelties had tremendously roused both English and French, the English more than the French.

During the last half of 1917 rumors were reaching the American force of almost no "quarter" given by certain British troops in their raids against the Germans and in retaliation for German excesses. According to these rumors, Australian troops were especially fierce. While the French were very vehement in declaring their hostility to the Germans and their intention to seize upon every occasion to retaliate with cruelties, as a matter of fact when Germans fell into French hands they were never treated with cruelty. The Frenchman was too kindhearted. Nevertheless, the hatred of both French and British against the Germans seemed justified and made the fighting fierce.

Teaching Yanks to Hate.

The frightfulness inaugurated by the Germans could only be met by frightfulness by the allies. Hatred preached by the Germans could only be resisted by giving like for like. I deemed it, with our men, especially necessary because, without such teaching, many of our soldiers being in the United States quite accustomed to Germans as citizens and not finding them cruel or brutal, would here think that the Germans as an enemy had been lied about greatly by English and French and there was a consequent danger, that, upon coming in contact with the Germans, American soldiers would be almost ready to fraternize with them, or, if not this, at least to expose themselves to the danger of being fired upon unexpectedly at any time according to the German inaugurated system of individual killing on sight.

The great German offensive promised for next spring needed besides every force of determination that could be brought to bear to resist it. Hate, a determination to kill and resist men who had introduced this system of frightfulness, was one of the forces of resistance.

German Misdeeds Proclaimed.

Accordingly, I had published to the troops during a long period of preparation and training every recent instance of German frightfulness and cruelty that came to my knowledge. This was done upon my own initiative and according to my own ideas and without any suggestion or pressing upon the part of our general headquarters in France. Of course, it had its effect, yet I was conscious always of meeting in the average American soldier a considerable amount of incredulity, for the simple reason that I have above mentioned, namely, that in his association with Germans in the United States he had not seen the cruelty and frightfulness which had unquestionably been exercised by the German forces in this war. So hard is personal experience to overcome.

But two or three instances of unnecessary harshness with which Germans had treated some half a dozen Americans captured in their first raid in October had some strong effect. These cases were the unnecessary stabbing to death of one American soldier and the caging of others and exposing them to public observation and contempt in certain places in Germany.

"Fight for Democracy" Good Slogan.

More powerful and of wider reach as a hate maker was the impression produced by the President's far-published idea that the war was nothing else than a life and death struggle of democracy on the side of the allies, against autocracy on the side of the Germans. Though I could never so see it myself nor divine its truth from the origin of the war, it was nevertheless a catching idea. It was widely heralded in the press and had a great effect among all the allies and especially among Americans as something American, proposed by an American.

Altogether the hate making produced some effect upon our men. Nevertheless, in the following months of fighting we had little use of it. Beyond instant fire upon individuals exposing themselves, we encountered no German frightfulness or cruelty in warfare where I was. Poor psychologists of all but their own people, the Germans had perhaps found that it did not pay and quit it. There was no other consideration to influence them. Their purpose to win the war shut out for them, we know, all lighter considerations of humanity in its conduct if inhumanity were found to contribute to success; and they were always, until the very end of the war, in position to inflict on their enemies more cruelty, brutality and frightfulness than they could themselves be made to suffer in retaliation.

Unfriendly French General Soothed.

"Jan. 4 and 5 (diary) went with our chief of staff in France up on the French sector, where my division is to be sent. Our party was quite large: The chief of staff (Gen. Pershing's) and two officers of his operations section, two French mission officers, myself, and my chief of staff.

Our party had considerable misgivings about how we would be received by the French general who commands and who was known to be hostile to Americans. Well, with a lot of French talk I slipped up on that fellow's blind side and we had little difficulty with him. It was French and Americans in better understanding." The "lot of French tlak" referred to was not official. The French commander, who had been quite unyielding on a demand made by Gen. Pershing as a sine qua non of agreement, invited us to dinner.

Of course, during the meal all official subjects were taboo, but probably there is no people who as much as the French nevertheless decide business questions over dinners. They regard a dinner as the old saying does play: "You learn to do more with a man in a half hour of play than you can in a day of work." Knowing this, I devoted my whole attention to the French commander, with whom we were having the difficulty of agreement and to whose army my division was to be attached.

Uses His Phonograph French.

I gave him my best phonograph French. Gen. Pershing's chief of staff after the dinner remarked, "Gen. Bullard, with your French talk you played up to him bully and you have settled or helped to settle this question favorably." And so in effect it proved. There was no further difficulty; all American conditions were complied with.

The First division, and I commanding it, served under Gen. Debeney for six months without the slightest friction, ever with the greatest good will and consideration upon his part and upon the part of his staff.

In anticipation of our going into the trenches with the French, the French authorities were very insistent upon our having a great number of liaison French officers. The American authorities, including myself, never quite understood the need of any great number of such officers and we were trying to dodge them.

Found French Officers Tactful.

It was a suggestion, most of us thought at the time, of espionage upon the American line of action, and we rather resented them. But subsequent days showed, at least to my satisfaction, that no unworthy purpose but protection of themselves and helpfulness to us were contemplated by the French. It is true that always the French war office kept itself through its liaison officers accurately informed about American feeling and American methods and line of action. But near me at least the French liaison officers conducted themselves with such discretion and tact as never to render themselves or the French war office in the least disagreeable to me. They served a great purpose in helping to maintain good relations between the French authorities and people and the American soldiers, and in bringing Americans to understand the best way of living among the French without annoyance upon both sides.

In many cases, also, in the beginning, trained French staff officers rendered assistance of inestimable value to the Americans.

Scheresse, of the Café de la Paix.

Among the French liaison officers was one whom I had, against French as well as American orders, asked for by name—Henri Scheresse, a reserve officer who had been two or three times seriously wounded, and when he came to service with me was still unable on account of his wounds to do field duty. He was a business man who knew well the French people. His knowledge of French men and of French customs was very valuable to me. Scheresse served for more than a year and a half as my personal aide. I felt as sure of his loyalty to me and to the American cause as I would have felt if he had been American. Always tactful, and with perfect control over his feelings and his tongue, without being of the highest class of educated Frenchmen and French officers, he yet very valuably filled his purpose with both Americans and French. With a body broken and wounded in service, his good judgment kept him always prepared for duty, no matter how hard or unexpected. His fine judgment, discreet conduct and control of his tongue kept him always agreeable, always unoffensive, always in tune with the people about him.

I know no officer, American or French, near me who served the common cause with more faithfulness and merit in his own way and humble grade than Lieutenant Henri Scheresse. Today, in 1920, in peace, before the passing world, he is a greater man, director of the Café de la Paix, the most noted perhaps in the world.

Tactical Officer Helpful.

Regarding us still as very much in need of tutelage the French rather pushed on us a tactical officer to help the tactical officer of the 1st Division in billeting and laying out the route of march of the 1st Division up to the trenches. For this we really needed and accepted him; but we did not want him "for good and all." Once with us, however, we could not at first and would not for any consideration at last "shake" him. We found that we liked and needed him, and he, like almost all other French liaison officers that I saw, proved valuable help. Between these officers and us there grew up fine and lasting comradeships that since the war have helped to keep French and Americans close together.

"January 8 (diary)—Finished yesterday's five days' trench maneuvers by brigade and division. Worst weather in which I ever saw troops work. The temperature was near zero (Centigrade) most of the time, and on the last day it snowed, thawed and rained. We were wet and muddy all over. How our soldiers ever will escape sickness I do not know."

These last five days constituted, on account of the weather, the fiercest strain to which I ever saw troops subjected outside of the hardest battles. I have often since thought that nothing but death could be harder.

Army Endures Great Hardships.

Trench warfare is not a warfare of movement. In these maneuvers men stood in the trenches and animals in the open, in mud, water, snow, slush, rain and beating winds, and were stiffened and benumbed into stocks. Ears, fingers and toes were frozen. Men were saved by hot food from the rolling kitchens. Horses had no such luck; already weakened by three weeks' short feed, many fell and perished.

Why did we do it? Because we had to, in order to save ourselves from a worse fate at the hands of a hard enemy who we knew—the whole world now knew—would, long before spring could give us weather for drilling in comfort, be driving his victorious, veteran troops in greater numbers than ever against our Allied front. Serbia, Russia, Roumania, and Italy had all been beaten. What next? We knew, and when. Time was not ours. Besides, nine months had now passed since we put ourselves in the war and we were still there by declaration only. General Pershing and his entire staff were driving now to "make good."

Thus finished our training. We were ready to go.

To the Front—at Last!

The day of the start of the 1st division to the front the ground was covered with snow that had melted and then at once frozen. The roads were a solid sheet of ice. Then came rain which smoothed this ice to a glassy surface on which neither the feet of animals nor the wheels of vehicles could take any hold.

Falling men broke, wrecked, and scattered the columns. Entire teams went down at the same time upon the ice, struggling, panting, tangled in their harness, and almost uncontrollable. Vehicles by their sheer weight dragged, pushed, or hauled the teams backward, forward, or sideward down hill in confusion and danger. Vehicles, animals, and men were a struggling mass in blockade and delay along the road. Half of them for the first day of the march were continually in the ditch. It was raining still and the snow was melting.

Upset wagons were unloaded, righted and reloaded by men up to the knees in snow and water, soaked in the rain; the loads on wagons were soaked because almost every wagon slid off the road, upset, and had to be unloaded and reloaded in the rain. It was a sight I never expect to see repeated.

The night came upon the first detachment and the tail of the train had made about a mile and a half. Men of perhaps one-third of the column might have slept in the houses from which they had started in the morning, so little distance had they gained.

The men with wet clothing and wet blankets and animals with bruised bodies and strained muscles suffered much, but as in the last five days' preparation there was no turning back. The strong bodies of the American soldiers and of the American mules stood the suffering well; yet I doubt not that every one of them will bear the feelings and the effects of that night and that day to his last hour.

The thing that struck me about this memorable day was that while our soldiers did not know how to adapt themselves to the condition or meet the hardships and labors encountered, and were, therefore, slow to take hold, yet when they knew that it had to be done, stolidly but manfully waded in to the slush of snow and water up to the knees, well knowing that they should sleep—if they they could—in wet, perhaps frozen, clothes and blankets during the night. It was a good sign, a fit continuation of the five days' hard training.

I felt perfectly sure that these soldiers were never afterwards to encounter anything except death that would be harder than the labors and exposure of this day. There was, however, in this movement one great relief which the troops as well as wagons appreciated. It was that for the first time in the history of the army of the United States they had not to carry the killing burden of their heavy tentage. The European system of billeting the troops upon the inhabitants saved this. This, I am sure, has always helped European armies more than they ever have known, and hobbled and weighted down almost to immobility the American.

Niceties of French Plans.

To the staff of the division a trying thing was the many changes proposed by our mentors, the French staff officers, after the original plan was drawn up for the march toward the front. This seems almost characteristic of French orders. It is one to which Americans can least adapt themselves.

The French seemed entirely willing, at any time, to change an order or a plan for any little improvement. The Americans prefer, after once adopting a plan or giving an order, to follow it out, even if it be not absolutely the best or the most convenient. This difference of habit and view seemed to me to continue to the very end of military operations in the war. The greater readiness of the French to change plans was perhaps due to the fact that they were very war weary before we even came on the scene, so war weary that perhaps they were glad to seize any pretext or excuse such as a change of plan or order to put off an action. I may here be doing them an injustice, but I am giving my impressions of them at the time.

I was taking only one-half of the 1st division into line against the enemy, the other half remaining in the Gondrecourt training area in the rear.

Germans Jeer at Americans.

The Germans, knowing that Americans were in France, had jeered us and had promised their own people to make short work of us when we should come on the line. It seemed probable that as soon as they should discover us in the trenches against them they might make a sudden, hard effort to push us out in order to justify their boast and produce the moral effect upon their own people of saying that they had knocked out the whole American force at a single blow. The halving of the division in the above manner would enable us still to have the second half, the equivalent of a French or German division, fresh and ready to take its place against the enemy in case the first half were really forced out of line. But the forcing out never took place, neither now nor at any other time up to the very last day of the fighting, nearly a year later.

As the division came to the trenches for the first time I did not see among the men any of that spirit of fierce expectation, anxiety to get at the enemy, of which writers about the war have sometimes told us. They were quiet and businesslike, almost stolid. They, even the newest of them, met the hardships with the look and spirit of regulars. I thought with pride, "They are regulars." In fact, few were.

BELASCO WILL TEACH JACKIE COOGAN FOR 3 YRS. TO PLAY HAMLET

New York, May 23.—The Morning Telegraph, in a copyrighted article, will say tomorrow that Jackie Coogan's father, acting for the boy motion picture star, today signed contracts with David Belasco, whereby Mr. Belasco will train the child three years for the rôle of Hamlet on the speaking stage.

JACKIE COOGAN.

The contracts state, that all Jackie's time, outside the hours spent at motion picture studios and the hours for study and play, will be at the disposal of Mr. Belasco.

Jackie already has fluent command of long passages from Hamlet and this fact, coupled with Mr. Belasco's discovery that the young film star possesses a voice of unusual dramatic promise, prompted Mr. Belasco to undertake his training.

Jackie is now 11 years old; by the time he has completed his course he will be between 14 and 15. Authorities on Shakespeare, place the age of Hamlet at about 16 or less.

Mr. Belasco's idea of training goes back to Elizabethan times when aspirants for dramatic honors entered a novitiate at the age of 12 to prepare themselves during the ensuing four years for the assumption of the role of Hamlet.

BOYS' WEEK ENDS, BUT INFLUENCE LIVES ON IN CITY

The closing of the first Boys' Achievement exposition at the Municipal pier last night marked the end of the fifth annual Boys' week, the most successful celebration of its kind in Chicago since the first one was held. Boys' week is over, but the interest and enthusiasm it created will bear fruit in the lives of the boys who participated until the 1926 celebration, officers of the Boys' Week federation stated last night.

"I am convinced that Chicago this year not only took the greatest step forward in its own observance of Boys' week, but that it also set a pace for the other 2,000 cities which annually give consideration to boys and their problems and opportunities," George W. Dixon, president of the federation, said last night.

HOOSIERS THANK FATE THEY WERE BORN IN INDIANA

200 Chicagoans at Culver Meet Home Folks.

BY JOHN HERRICK.

Culver, Ind., May 23.—[Special.]—Those that live in Indiana were there already of course and those that were exiled crossed the Hoosier border, gathered here today at Culver Military academy against a background of cadet blue to celebrate the fact that they'd been born east of Illinois, west of Ohio, south of Michigan and north of the Ohio river.

GEORGE ADE.
[Wallinger Photo.]

Californians and New Englanders are as conscious of state pride, but these Indianians weren't conscious of it. They just liked it. Over the Pennsylvania railroad in special cars came 200 members of the Indiana Society of Chicago.

And from all parts of Indiana came 200 more men and women, the Indiana Literary league.

Tells of Indiana Legend.

"In the ashes of their campfires the pioneers reared the state," said Meredith Nicholson at the meeting to award prizes to winners in the literary league's annual contests. "Indiana has established her own legend," he declared.

It seemed that she has. As Hoosier met Hoosier, and George Ade shook hands with "Abe Martin" and William C. Bobbs greeted Wallace Rice, Chicago, New York and other parts of the world became just clearing houses for Indiana wares.

Back in the '60's and '70's a young man by the name of Henry Harrison Culver drove a mulewagon and peddled stoves. He retired in 1881, a wealthy man. In 1883 he founded the the academy whose guests the Indianians were today.

Culver Cadets Parade.

Seven hundred cadets, including a battery of artillery and the famous Black Horse troop of cavalry paraded. The flag went past.

"It was founded to be a shrine of patriotism and good citizenship," said Brig. Gen. L. R. Gignilliat, of the academy he now commands.

Luncheon under the trees followed the parade and then came the prize awards on the steps of the library.

Play Pageant Tableaux.

In the evening the literary league's prize play was given. There were stunts by the cadets and a pageant of Indiana authors and tableaux depicting the growth of Indiana.

Col. George T. Buckingham is now the Indiana society's president, A. R. Bone, vice president; Edward M. Hollway, secretary; Frederick G. Campbell, treasurer and John T. McCutcheon, William G. Edens and John Weaver, trustees.

Dancing in the academy's big recreation hall wound up this annual day and the Indiana society piled into their sleepers about midnight.

ERSKINE-COOPER WEDDING AMID SPRING FLOWERS

Ruth Orb Is Bride of N. B. Dawes.

Soufflé de soie, a new material, similar to satin, but softer and cloudier, composed the wedding frock of Miss Marian Erskine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert de Wolf Erskine of 33 East Division street, when she was married at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Fourth Presbyterian church to Paul Fenimore Cooper, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Fenimore Cooper of Cooperstown, N. Y. Seed pearls and silver bands and embroidery ornamented the dress, which had a court train of soufflé de soie, forming a foundation for the flowing tulle bridal veil. The bridal bouquet was of gardenias.

Costumes of Bridal Party.

The maid of honor, Miss Alice Dodge of New York City and the matron of honor, Mrs. Reginald B. Taylor of Buffalo, N. Y., wore draped gowns of pale green chiffon, and beige haircloth garden hats, banded in pale green velvet ribbon and carried yellow Darwin tulips. The bridesmaids, Miss Sarah Molter, Miss Margaret Caradine of St. Louis, Mo., Miss Mary Meeker, and Mrs. Darrow B. Fulton, wore dresses of pale yellow chiffon with hats like those of the other attendants, and carried clusters of Darwin tulips of variegated colors.

Mr. Cooper and his bride are to cruise in the south seas on their honeymoon. They later are to reside in London.

Orb-Dawes Wedding.

Miss Helen Orb, who became the bride of Neil Booker Dawes, son of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Dawes of Evanston, at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the Orb residence in Evanston, wore the white satin bridal gown of her mother, Mrs. J. A. Orb, which is trimmed in duchess lace and rosepoint medallions. The maid of honor, Miss Marion Dawes, wore yellow georgette with a hat to match and carried a spray of spring flowers. The matron of honor, Mrs. John Canfield, wore a gown of lavendar georgette and a matching hat.

Mr. Dawes and his bride are to reside in an apartment they have taken at 25 East Cedar street after July 1.

GIRL, 16, HEIRESS TO A $1,200,000 ESTATE, MISSING

Miami, Okla., May 23.—Maude Lee Mudd, 16 year old heiress to an estate of $1,200,000, has disappeared from the residence of her mother, Mrs. Susan Bomberry, here and officers have been unable to find any trace of her.

The disappearance followed a writ of prohibition granted Thursday by the State Supreme court barring District Judge J. J. Smith, Mrs. Bomberry and her husband, Levi Bomberry, from attempting to interfere with William Simms of Vinita, United States probate attorney and guardian of the heiress, in the custody of the ward.

Mrs. Bomberry said she believes Maude has been kidnapped.

Simms said he was positive the mother knew where Maude was. J. L. Suffecool, superintendent of the Quapaw Indian agency, whose aid has been asked in finding the girl, also expressed the belief that Mrs. Bomberry was familiar with the details of the "kidnaping."

MORGAN PARK ACADEMY PLANS ALUMNI FETE

Plans have been made for a large turnout of alumni of Morgan Park Military academy. Alumni day has been set for Memorial day.

The annual baseball game between the academy team and the alumni will be staged, and this will be followed by a track meet between the academy and Loyola academy.

Immediately at the close of the meet there will be a memorial service for the seven Morgan Park Military academy boys who gave their lives in the world war.

The alumni dinner will follow, and in the evening there will be a general powwow and the alumni dance.

Seek $10,000,000 Fund for Industrial Museums

The National Museum of Industry, of which Samuel Insull is president, yesterday announced that it is starting a campaign for $10,000,000 for the purpose of establishing museums of industry in many of the principal cities of the country. One of the museums will be located in Chicago, according to present plans. The purpose of the museums is to provide vocational guidance and instruction for the youths of the nation.

FINE POLITICIAN AS LAW FLOUTER; CALLED A BULLY

Weisbrod Denounced by Traffic Captain.

State Representative Harry I. Weisbrod stood in Judge John R. Newcomer's court yesterday, haled in on warrants charging him with two parking violations, and heard himself described by Capt. Patrick Hogan of the traffic police as a "bully, a fixer, a Springfield politician, a bad man, and a prevaricator."

HARRY I. WEISBROD.

At the end of the hearing, Judge Newcomer found Weisbrod, who was described by Capt. Hogan as a henchman of former Senator Lorimer, guilty on both charges, and on each of them he fined the legislator $1 and $1 costs.

Dashes Past Camera Man.

Weisbrod paid the $4 and with a malevolent glance toward the police captain, strode past him. In order to escape a newspaper photographer waiting outside, Weisbrod stayed in an anteroom for some time and then made a sudden dash for the City Hall elevators.

"I object to men of this Weisbrod type bullying my officers on street corners when they go to do their duty," Capt. Hogan said when the case was called. Weisbrod was served with the slips ten days ago, and a week ago, when the case was set, there was no hearing because the files were missing. Capt. Hogan charged the disappearance was due to Weisbrod's "fixing" activities.

Judge Issues Warrants.

Judge Newcomer issued warrants for the representative's arrest, and set the trial for yesterday morning. Weisbrod immediately sprang to the defense of the clerks of the court, and insisted the files were in court last Saturday, and that he was also, and that the case was continued.

Capt. Hogan then produced six other arrest slips, served by his men in the last six months or so, in which Weisbrod was charged with three parking violations, with resisting an officer, with failure to purchase a license, and with disorderly conduct. Significantly, in each case the slip was marked "discharged" by some judge.

"It has come to a point where we want to know whether a policeman doing his duty must submit to the abuse of this kind of man," Capt. Hogan said. "Weisbrod thinks he doesn't have to obey the law—he's a state representative, he is, and why should a policeman have the nerve even to stop him!"

Hit Other Politicians.

Judge Newcomer took an attitude favoring Weisbrod, but in the end he fined him anyway.

"Lots of politicians think they have the right to park in the loop," Judge Newcomer said. "I know three of them who parked so this morning. But I'm not going to tell you who they are, Capt. Hogan."

Going back to the question before him, Judge Newcomer said, "Of course, the city prosecutor may take a nonsuit in this case if he wants to——."

COACH

A COACH IN NAME ONLY

THE New Studebaker Special Six Coach is different from all other closed cars to which the name "Coach" is applied.

No other coach within several hundred dollars of its price equals it for roominess. It has abundant room for 5 passengers. And room to enter or leave without causing occupant of folding seat to get out.

Compare it with other coaches and you'll realize its superiority in materials and craftsmanship. Doors are broad, seats full-width, with genuine mohair-and-wool upholstery. No sacrifice of quality for the sake of price. In appearance and comfort, it suggests a fine 5-passenger coupe.

Come in and see this new different coach—ride in it—test its remarkable 65 horsepower performance. Note the price: $1595, f. o. b. factory—slightly higher, because the quality is so much finer.

TRAFFIC TIEUPS COST U. S. CITIES MILLIONS A YEAR

Washington, D. C., May 23.—[Special.]—Traffic congestion is costing the cities millions of dollars annually in hampered distribution of commodities and loss of time to the industrial population. This was the conclusion of a subcommittee of Secretary Hoover's national conference on street safety, which met today. A second conference is scheduled for December.

Among those in attendance was Elmer Stevens, chairman of the city traffic committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce. F. A. Delano, formerly of Chicago, is chairman of the committee.

Study Two Problems.

Self interest and self protection, it was declared, demand that cities study the provision of traffic facilities along two lines, one for a fuller use of city streets by existing traffic and the other to meet future expansion problems.

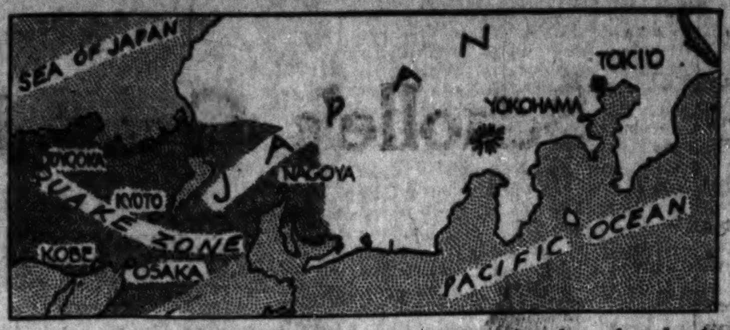
Removing standing vehicles from city streets was discussed at length. In this connection it was shown that Chicago is preparing to erect shelters for 12,000 cars, a large percentage of the number now parked downtown.

Probe Storage Conditions.

The committee will seek information as to the experiences of cities which either have privately owned or municipal storage provisions.

The experience of many cities, it was stated, shows that traffic may be slowed up by too frequent changes in signaling methods. Chicago, the committee was told, is contemplating spending $300,000 on a synchronized signal system in the loop to increase the flow of traffic by 15 per cent.

QUAKE AND FIRE RAVISH JAPAN



Folowing an earthquake on the main island of the Japanese archipelago, fire broke out yesterday at Toyooka and the whole town was reported virtually destroyed. Police at Kyoto report 10 persons dead and many injured in the town of Fumihama, where numerous houses collapsed. Kinosaki Springs, a famous resort, was burned, and a forest fire was said to be raging near the springs, which are 99 miles from Kyoto. The town of Tsuiyama, near Toyooka, was reported in flames. Latest estimates place the deaths at more than 1,000.

ROBBER FREE FOR FOUR MINUTES.

Jack Wiggens, 34 years old and colored, 5506 Vernon avenue, held up and robbed Duncan Anderson, 1015 Montrose avenue, traffic manager for the Butler Paper company, at 40th street and Indiana avenue. Four minutes later police arrested Wiggens. Anderson identified him.

LEADER OF BAND OF YEGGS FOUND GUILTY BY JURY

Charles Harris, described by Assistant State's Attorney Byrne as the leader of the band of four men who held up the pawn shop of Harry B. Swesnik, 612 South Clark street, last December, was found guilty of robbery with a gun by a jury yesterday in Judge Hosea Wells' court.

The punishment calls for a term of from 10 years to life imprisonment. The jury acquitted George Brennan.

Sergt. James Byrne of the South Clark street station entered the pawn shop during the course of the holdup. The men forced him to surrender his gun and star. Then they locked him in a room with the employés and escaped with $2,000 in cash and $9,000 in jewelry.

Harris and Brennan with Percy Pue and Henry Stevens were apprehended later and identified as the robbers.

Order 1,000 Bottles of Beer Destroyed Here

One thousand bottles of beer, taken in a raid on a cigar store at 7727 Cottage Grove avenue, were ordered destroyed yesterday by Judge Howard Hayes. However, the owners of the place, Adolphe Carlson and Charles Sugrue, were dismissed from charges of violating the prohibition law because the police had made the raid without a search warrant.

RESTRICTIONS ON JUDGE PROVE AID TO CRIMINAL

Jurists So Hedged In Justice Is Cramped.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Some of the judges say that one great difficulty in making the lot of the criminal a hard one lies in the fact that the law makes the judge little more than an umpire.

The bench is so hedged about with restrictions that the court is often afraid to open its honorable mouth for fear something may slip out that will lead to a reversal by the Supreme court. And no judge wants to hold a record for reversals. A sort of judicial paralysis is caused, they argued. It does not tend to make the way of the transgressor hard. Many excellent lawyers take the same view, and the subject is one over which it is always easy to stir the fires of debate.

Difference in Methods.

In the federal courts judges may comment upon the evidence, its weight and the amount of credence to which they deem it is entitled. They may instruct the jurors verbally.

In the state courts, however, the law prohibits the judge from any such practices. When it comes to instructing the jury he can read only instructions submitted in writing by the two sides.

"Our hands are tied behind our back," said one leading judge. "If a judge should indulge in oral instruction the chances are a hundred to one it would queer the case if it went to the upper court. The wise judge takes no such chance. If the jury sends out for an instruction he has to write it out, and that is never satisfactory, and he waits to get the lawyers for the two sides together before sending it in.

"Here's another thing: In the federal courts in the giving of instructions if objection is not taken by the defendant at the time the error is made it cannot be raised in the upper courts. But in the state courts, time and time again, the defendant's lawyers silently hear an error and raise the question for the first time in the higher courts.

Need Legislative Change.

"A legislative act to permit judges in the criminal courts to sum up the evidence and instruct the jurors verbally would be a long stride towards effective visitation of justice. As it now stands, the practice makes a judge nothing but an umpire. So far as exercising real judicial powers, he might as well be a cigar store Indian."

On the other hand, part of the bench insists the present practice is sound. They regard it as a protection against any judicial tryanny. One of the best judges on the Cook county bench, who has had long and varied experience in all branches of criminal law enforcement, voiced such a view yesterday.

Protection to the Innocent.

"Throw down the bars," he said, "and what would prevent a judge from becoming a petty despot? What would protect an innocent man from judicial oppression? The hard working judge has sufficient duties as it is, if only he performs them. The jury is the judge of the facts and of the law; the judge is the moderator and expounder of the law, which is as it should be.

"In England, of course, it is different and a judge can comment all he wants to. But the big difference is in the juries. In England the juries generally are so well versed and grounded in their fundamental rights as jurymen that the court cannot walk over them. It's nothing for them to say, 'To hell with your ludship,' if the court tries to exercise too much influence over them. In Cook county, however, we don't get that sort of juries—it would be too easy for a judge, if he were that kind, to bully them and exercise undue dominance in a case.

He Blames Continuances.

"The worst trouble spot is the continuances. I have had cases brought before me in which no less than thirty or forty continuances had been taken. And eighteen or twenty were not at all unusual. This is crime's greatest bulwark in the courts. Cases are dragged along until witnesses scatter or die and the case is weakened. What a culprit fears the most is swiftness and certainty of punishment. Decisive action against the abuse of continuances would prove the greatest deterrent to crime."

FIND SALESMAN DEAD.

Edward Hallinan, 35 years old, 533 West 46th place, a salesman, was found dead yesterday in the basement of a building at 5223 South Carpenter street. A coroner's report attributed his death to hemorrhage of the nose.

PLANES HIGH UP OBEY ORDERS OF RADIO ON EARTH

Twenty thousand men, women, and children sat in the Grant park stadium yesterday afternoon at the military show and watched with wonder and awe while three airplanes 3,500 feet up performed like trained animals at commands transmitted to the pilots by radio from the ground.

There was perfect communication by voice between the planes and the ground station all the while the ships were in the air. The voices of commander and commanded could be heard plainly by all issuing from a dozen loud speakers high up on the top of a pole.

At commands from the ground station the three ships flew from "V" formation into "line" formation and back again, dipped and ascended, dropped to 1,000 feet and then climbed back up again to 2,500, while the thousands below watched with fascinated eyes and then burst into cheering.

Makes Radio History.

Army flyers attached to the air service did it. It was a record breaking accomplishment. It was the making of radio and air history.

It was the second record of the day broken during the show by the army flyers. Until yesterday voice communication between two planes in the air has been limited to planes flying not more than five miles apart.

Yesterday Lieut. Charles Howard in one plane and Lieut. L. P. Hickey in another talked for an hour back and forth while they flew fifteen miles apart.

"Hello! Is that you, Hickey?" Howard would say, and Hickey would come back, "Yes, Charley, how are you?" and so on for sixty minutes.

Obey Commands from Ground.

It was Lieut. Howard who had charge of the ground station at the stadium, while the three planes, piloted in turn by Lieut. Hickey, Lieut. Henry Salzman, and Lieut. Arthur L. Johnson, moved about, dipped, and dropped and climbed again at his commands.

"Hello!" said Howard as the planes flew over the field at 3,500 feet in "V" formation.

"Hello! This is No. 1!" "Hello! This is No. 2," and "Hello! This is No. 3," came back the answers plainly out of the loud speakers.

"All right," said Howard. "If you hear this command you will come into line formation!"

Instantly the answer came back three voices: "Aye, aye, sir."

Then in a twinkling the lead ship hesitated, it seemed, while the two forming the triangle of the "V" speeded up and all came into line.

"You will turn to the left," commanded Howard, and at once the three ships turned to the left. "You will turn to the right," he ordered, and immediately the ships turned to the right.

"You will drop down to 1,000 feet!" and the noses dipped and the three came down. When they had descended for a short time the noses came up and out of the loud speaker came:

"We are now at 1,000 feet."

PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT.

The attempt to establish universal teetotalism by constitutional amendment and federal law involves, as we have said, issues of principle affecting profoundly the future of this country. These issues are by no means foreclosed, as the drys would have us concede, by the adoption of the 18th amendment or by the enactment of the various federal and state laws to make it effective. They enter into the whole problem of enforcement and they are going to be decisive in its solution or failure of solution. It is nonsense to hold that whether a law ought to exist is foreclosed by the fact that it does exist or that the practical task of enforcement turns upon the mere act of enactment and not upon the citizen's sense of its rightness. On this subject one of the greatest of our philosophers, Emerson, said:

"Republics abound in young civilians who believe that the laws make the city, that grave modifications of the policy and modes of living and employments of the population, that commerce, education, and religion, may be voted in or out; and that any measure, though it were absurd, may be imposed on a people if only you can get sufficient voices to make it a law. But the wise know that foolish legislation is a rope of sand which perishes in the twisting; that the state must follow and not lead the character and progress of the citizen; the strongest usurper is quickly got rid of. . . . Nature is not democratic, nor limited-monarchial, but despotic, and will not be fooled or abated of any jot of her authority by the pertest of her sons."

Dry argument ignores this fundamental truth and to the objection of anti-prohibitionists that prohibition is not merely wrong in principle but inevitably unenforceable adequately, we are given the analogy of the law against murder. The analogy has no practical force except for those who believe that there can be no justifiable use of alcoholic beverages and that there is the same moral sanction back of the law prohibiting the taking of life and the taking of a drink.

But there is the practical issue. A large part, perhaps even the majority, of the nation do not believe that the use of such beverages is wrong, whereas the sanction of the law against murder is universal in the nation and with civilized mankind. "We will not have so many murders if we will punish the murderers promptly and with a penalty that will make all men fear to murder," says the dry argument truly enough, and "in like manner we will not have liquor law violations if we will punish the violators to such an extent that they will fear to violate," which is also true but begs the whole question. Although we have a murder a day in Chicago, and a deplorably high rate in the nation, we have millions of acts of drinking and a very large proportion of our people who are as fully convinced they are right in drinking as is the teetotalist that they are wrong. Common sense ought to recognize the difference as a merely practical problem of government, wholly apart from any theory of law or individual right.

But the dry argument disposes of the practical question of enforceability by pointing to enforcement in districts in which the dry law has the support of the preponderent opinion of the community and ascribes nonenforcement where it persists to the moral depravity of a community. "Some of our great cities," says a dry editorial, "are so deep in the mud that they believe it is impossible to get out." The assertion reveals what we have asserted that dry theory or sentiment refuses to consider that any use of alcoholic beverages whatsoever is justifiable and insists that a community or an individual which demands liberty of conscience in this habit is "deep in the mud."

There is nothing novel in this problem of enforcement. The drys who refuse to obey apportionment mandates of our state constitutions because they fear equal representation will overturn the prohibition laws, are disobeying the constitution and defying the principle of equality of political privilege. The unenforceability of the 14th amendment in certain sections of the United States is notorious. But when an objector to the experiment in imposing teetotalism by law cites the foregoing facts and asserts his opinion that prohibition is not enforceable so long as a large proportion of the respectable citizenship of the nation deems it an act of oppression, he is told that he is encouraging law breaking and political demoralization.

This ignores the fundamental issue which underlies all constitutions and all laws. The responsibility for the law defiance and political demoralization, which are the deplorable consequences of the prohibition enactments, lies with those who procured the passage of laws denying a right of private judgment in personal habit regardless of the protest of a very large proportion of the citizenship of the nation. Aside from the great issues of principle involved, this is a practical question of expediency in government and on that issue alone, we think, conditions condemn and will continue to condemn the experiment in forcing teetotalism upon millions of Americans who consider teetotalism a question of private judgment not within the province of free government.

The regulation of the public traffic in liquor is another matter and the desirability of such regulation is generally admitted. As for the prohibitionist objection that regulation has not suppressed abuse, the obvious answer is that prohibition has not suppressed abuse while it has brought new and profoundly destructive evils.

WHO PAYS FOR THE HARD ROADS.

No taxation without representation has an antiquated sound about it as a political slogan; just how pressing the issue is in Illinois in 1925 may be understood by a glance at figures on road construction, which were recently made available in Springfield.

The federal government contributes toward the building of some of the hard roads in the state and the counties contribute toward others, but most of the money comes from two bond issues, one for $60,000,000 and another for $100,000,000. The interest an principal of the bonds are met through the license fees paid by automobile owners before they get their annual license plates. Thus the division of the license fees among the counties offers a neat index to what might be called the Springfield idea of justice.

Last year $11,546,000 was collected from automobile owners in Illinois, and Cook county motorists paid $4,146,000 of it. That is, of all the money collected, Cook county contributed 36 per cent. Cook county and its neighbors—Lake, McHenry, Kane, Will, and Du Page counties—together contributed 43 per cent of the total. These are the figures for 1924, but the proportions have been substantially the same since automobile licensing began.

Now for the other side of the picture. Illinois had 4,612 miles of hard roads at the end of 1924. Of these, Cook county, which had paid for 1,600, had only 343. Cook county and its neighbors, which had paid for 2,000 miles, had exactly 800.

Chicago and the Chicago region are willing to build roads downstate because the benefit from good roads reaches far beyond the lines of the county in which they are located. We would merely make the point that in the six northeastern counties nearly half the automobiles in the state are concentrated. Travel on the roads about Chicago is a hardship because of the congestion. The sure cure for their trouble is wider pavements. Both common sense and justice teach that the Chicago region, where the money comes from and the roads are most used, should be cared for first. Instead, it is being cared for last.

The principal reason for the injustice is the lack of fair representation of the urban districts at Springfield. It pays politicians to truckle to the sparsely settled communities because a vote there is worth more than a vote in Chicago or Peoria or East St. Louis.

The roads offer a glaring example of the results of taxation without representation. American history teaches the folly of attempting to force that kind of thing upon citizens who are alive to the situation.

LOVE THE FLOWERS.

Our forest preserve authorities tell us that hordes of ignorant and destructive picnickers are now ravaging the forest preserves of flowers and shrubbery. Flowers and trailing vines are being dragged out by the roots. What should be a natural garden is being slowly turned into an unnatural desert. Stupid parents of irresponsible children are aiding and abetting their offspring in a form of destruction which will ruin the natural beauties and attractions of these great public parks for the next generation, if they are not checked.

Chicago has a unique advantage in its forest preserves. No other city, in so far as we know, has anything so comprehensive. The nearest thing to them is the Interstate park on the Hudson river, across from upper Manhattan. Yet we are allowing them to be devastated under our eyes.

That must stop. The forest preserve authorities are aware of it, and are taking action. We are told that today they are making a special concerted effort to arrest and punish the vandals who destroy the flowers and shrubbery. More power to them. But their numbers are limited, while hundreds of thousands of picnickers visit the preserves on a fine Sunday. It is up to the intelligent persons among these picnickers to assist the authorities by precept and example. They can speak to the children who are laying the flowers waste, and call the attention of the adults to the numerous signs warning against such destruction. It is a good cause, in which all lovers of the beautiful can and should take part.

DEFENSE DAY.

Pacifists are raising again their cry against the celebration of the anniversary of the armistice as Defense day. They ask that Nov. 11 be devoted to thoughts of world peace and not be desecrated by a suggestion of arms.

The argumentation is characteristic of the pacifist assumption that somehow if the American people will remain unprepared for war it will remain at peace, and that if we hold the thought of peace we need not bother about being ready to deal with war. Non-pacifists do not cherish these comfortable assumptions but hold with Washington that to be prepared for war is one of the most effectual means of maintaining peace.

For those of us who do not think inability to fight will save us from the danger of being compelled to fight, there seems to be a peculiar appropriateness in selecting Armistice day for considering our means of national defense and celebrating the citizen's duty to be always ready to defend his country. Armistice day brought to an undeservedly successful close an American army's participation in a great foreign war. The nation's and the army's experience in that conflict were a bitter lesson in the waste of precious life and of public treasure which unpreparedness involves. Thousands of our best youth were sacrificed to unpreparedness, and we know of nothing more fitting or more profitable for us to remind ourselves of on Nov. 11 than that.

But whether or not Armistice day is the day chosen as Defense day, there should be such a day each year. Our system of citizen military defense is and must remain in peace largely on paper. But the mechanism of mobilizing a modern army must not be left to theory. It must be given such practical testing by trial as can be had without actually calling out great numbers of men. Defense day would be not merely a reminder to the nation that defense is a duty, but also a trial of the actual working of the skeletonized system which in case of war we should be compelled to fill up with men and supplies. When war was declared in 1917 we had to improvise such a system at an inordinate expense of time, money and material. Then fortunately the combat was far from our gates and the vast and seasoned armies of our allies stood between us and the foe while the slow process of our preparation went forward. Even so, our forces were compelled to engage the enemy before they were properly prepared for the ordeal and our losses were far heavier than they need have been, on that account.

A sensible regard for our own safety, an intelligent concern for the lives and limbs of the men we expect to fight for the nation if war befalls us, ought to save us from the folly and waste and danger of such unreadiness as the nation found itself in in 1917 and whenever war has come to it in past time. Only the pacifist mind will reject this plain lesson of experience or see in the carefully limited plans for a citizen army the bugaboo of militarism.

RELIGIOUS AUTHORITY OVER EDUCATION.

The trial of the Tennessee instructor in science under the state law prohibiting the teaching of evolution is, we believe, the first religious prosecution of an individual we have had in our country for many generations.

We have had laws excluding religious teaching in the public schools and some of them have been tested in court, but the Tennessee law is an attempt to impose a religious doctrine, a religious interpretation of fact as a restraint upon public instruction, and the prosecution of an individual under its terms is in actual effect an act of religious authority.

Previous school laws have excluded religion from the field of public, state-supported, lay education. The Tennessee law is the exact opposite. It is the invasion of education by religious doctrine and authority.

The Tennessee law is a reversal of a fundamental principle of American liberty, the separation of church and state. The American people, if they have any true appreciation of their heritage of freedom, will not be confused by the religious issue raised between "fundamentalists" or advocates of literal interpretation of the book of Genesis, and those, in the churches and out, who do not hold to literalism. This is an issue of religious doctrine and in the American system has no place in the domain of government. This distinction it is of highest importance that our people shall comprehend unless they are willing to return to the dark era of religious intolerance and war.

For this reason we think it inadvisable that the defense of the Tennessee instructor should be given over to men who are atheists or agnostics. We do not know whether there are "fundamentalists" in religious doctrine who are also fundamental Americans and willing on fundamental American grounds to resist this deplorable attempt to impose religious authority upon the public schools. If there are such, it would be well to employ them. If not, the next best defender would be one of the many distinguished church members who do not adhere to the doctrine that evolution is contrary to religious truth, to Christianity, to the true interpretation of the Bible as a work of divine inspiration. The effort of the literalists or fundamentalists is, of course, to set forth their effort as a defense of religion, whereas it is simply an effort to impose the doctrine of their own group, though that doctrine is not held by distinguished leaders in all churches and great numbers of church people in all denominations.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

Skyland, N. C.—Bob White begins calling at the break of day, from the chestnuts up on the slope of Brown mountain, from the blossoming poplars, the white pine and the locust which has shed its blossoms. His piping arises above the medley of wood thrush, thrasher, cardinal, song sparrow, chat, catbird, chewink, titmouse, and yellow hammer.

Two quail have made a little path into a great mass of blossoming eglantine and a nest somewhere in its depths, as protected as can be from the vermin of the woods.

All through the day Bob White calls, mostly his longer notes, Bob-Bob White. It is the sound of a cheerful countryside. Bluebirds have raised their young in some clematis against the wall. House wrens have a family under the porch. There is a thrasher family in the honeysuckle and the young of the cardinals are about to take flight into the jack pines.

Gold finch are flashing in and out of the grape vines and across plowed corn land. Tanagers, red starts and Baltimore orioles are vivid in flights through the foliage. The house wren as he runs along the porch railings chatters like a cicada in the oaks in late August.

The yellow breasted chat is the comedian of the woods. You are convinced he is a ventriloquist as well as an acrobat. He is in a small pine, as is presently discovered, but one second his note comes from the side of a branch running down the hillside and the next from the top of a tall poplar thirty feet away. He squeaks and squawks. He is a rusty hinge. Eek, eek, eek. He barks. He whistles. Then he sounds a pure note as reedy as that of the wood thrush and deeper.

Perfect sunlight floods the valley. Spring is deep in clover.

"MEET THE KING."

Sixteen American ladies were presented to King George and Queen Mary last week at the first royal court of the season in Buckingham palace. At this writing we do not know how well they got by, but the dressmakers had taken infinite pains in the rehearsals for the event and had met the bobbed hair problem with an ingenious clip which would hold the required three ostrich feathers and the veil.

Before the Americans heard the words, "Mrs. Smith, mitt the king," they had been made perfect in curtsies and the management of trains. We now have sixteen more votes for the league of nations, sixteen more subscribers to Sulgrave Manor, sixteen more friends of the dome of St. Paul's, sixteen more contributors to the repairs of Westminster.

We envy the English this great gift. If we had it we might pass in a few solvent foreigners to see Mr. Coolidge and pick up a few votes for the Monroe Doctrine and a little coin for a cathedral or for the lakes to the gulf waterway. Mr. Coolidge is the world's greatest potentate, and in some purple robes and a few bay leaves he'd be the Caesarian picture of one.

PROOF.

An elderly member of a London club, a clever man, was being frightfully bored by a vis-a-vis at table one night.

The talk was fast becoming unendurable, when the victim chanced to observe a man at the other end of the room yawning in a manner that threatened to dislocate his jaws.

"Look!" he exclaimed in desperation; "we are overheard!"—London Weekly Telegraph.

TRIP TRAP.

"I knew," he declared, "that we were meant for each other the moment I saw you."

"I knew it long before that," she replied.

"You did?"

"Yes. I may tell you now in confidence, since we're engaged, that mamma had been mapping out our accidental meeting for three months."—Boston Transcript.

CONTRASTED OPINIONS.

RECENTLY Dr. W. F. Donaldson, in speaking to the Allegheny County Medical society on contrasted opinions, made some statements which it will benefit lay people to know about. Most of us have heard of the three blind men who have each felt the elephant's trunk and then told of what he felt by comparing the trunk with other things. The principle appears in a dozen popular stories, the details differing.

In his address, "Contrasted Opinions," Dr. Donaldson gave the old elephant story a new slant. He explained how a life insurance examiner and a practicing physician could examine the same patient and then give what the patient would interpret as conflicting opinions. In fact, there would be no conflict of fact or observation.

A man 40 years of age is found to have a systolic blood pressure of 140. His family physician examines him and tells him he is in no danger and that he should continue in health for a long time. When he gets his policy he finds that the examiner has advised that he pay a premium on the basis of age 46.

A man 40 years of age, 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighs 218 pounds. The insurance company makes him pay at the rate for age 45. His family physician examines him carefully and finds him organically sound. This physician knows many people in the overweight class with soft, flabby tissues and big bellies who have lived in good health and in comfort to ripe old age.

The insurance physician is guided by the law of averages. As the result of many thousand experiences they know that a fat man at 40 has the average life expectancy of an average weight man, age 45. This particular fat man may live to reach 100, as his physician thinks, but the examiner must go by the law of averages.

A man has a history of having had nonsuppurating pleurisy. His physician says he has recovered. The insurance company either turns him down or makes him pay an extra large premium. Both the family physician and the company physician were right. The man had not one symptom of pleurisy at the time of the examination. The company knew, from thousands of experiences, that the death rate, within five years, of cases of recovered, nonpurulent pleurisy is 55 per cent higher than the normal expectancy.

If a family physician is inclined to be statistical he may be able to prove that amongst a thousand people, he knew 970 were living after a certain interval. The insurance physician accepts what he says, but he shows him that according to the law of averages, 980 should have been living and the rates were figured on that basis. From the standpoint of the family physician, 970 out of a thousand is about the same as 980 per thousand. To the insurance company there is a vast difference.

Thus it comes about that two opinions that are practically the same from a medical standpoint may be radically different when viewed from an economic standpoint.

GERMAN MEASLES.

Miss A. L. M. writes:

1. What is the difference between measles and German or Dutch measles?

2. Is there peeling with the latter?

3. Can the latter be carried to others by those who come in contact with the patient?

REPLY.

1. Measles and German measles are different diseases due to different causes and having different symptoms. The eruptions differ. Measles is the more dangerous disease. A person can be immune to one without being immune to the other.

2. As a rule, no.

3. Possibly so—but I know of no proof.

There are two reasons for isolating German measles. The first is because visitors may contract the disease. The second is because the supposed case of German measles may be a case of scarlet fever or of measles.

CLAY OBSTRUCTS ALLEY.

Chicago, May 16.—[Friend of the People.]—The alley bounded by South Kedzie and Troy, Sixty-third and Sixty-fourth streets is practically blocked by mud which was left there when they dug the foundation of an apartment building. Somebody, whoever was responsible for the digging, should be made to restore the alley to its former good condition.
J. O.

The contractor was served with a notice to remove clay complained of and the request was complied with. Alley is now in good condition.

BALANCE DUE.

Chicago, May 19.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I bought a piano on the installment plan, signing a contract to pay $15 a month. Since then circumstances have changed and I am unable to continue the payments. I have told them to take the piano back but they say that they cannot do it but that I must pay the balance. Can I make them take it back or can they make me keep it?

MORTGAGE NOTES.

Oak Park, Ill., May 19.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—What is the difference between two kinds of notes I have, both from a mortgage? One kind is signed on the face and on the back the names of man and wife. The others are signed on the face of the note only.
H. M.

Probably, the notes which are not indorsed are upon their face payable to "bearer," while the notes which are indorsed are payable to the order of the maker, thus expressly requiring indorsement.

60 YEARS AGO TODAY

MAY 24, 1865.

WASHINGTON.—The grand review of the soldiers is on and never in the history of the nation has the capital seen so imposing a spectacle. Gen. Meade led the 75,000 soldiers of the Army of the Potomac in line between solid banks of visiting thousands. President Johnson, Gen. Grant, Gen. Sherman, and members of the cabinet, with their distinguished guests, sat in the reviewing stand. Today Gen. Sherman's army, estimated at 117,000, will be reviewed.

NEW YORK. — The Herald's Fortress Monroe correspondent says that the immediate place of confinement of Jeff Davis will be in the casemates, which are rock ribbed and arched mansions within the fort, each well nigh constituting a fort within itself.

INDIANAPOLIS. — Kingan's pork house burned and large quantities of meats and lard were destroyed. The loss is $200,000, with $150,000 insurance.

NEW YORK.—The Democrat says that, in addition to Dr. Blackburn's rebel plot to introduce yellow fever into the north by way of Halifax and Bermuda, the Canadian conspirators planned to send to Liverpool about $100,000 worth of new clothing which was to be infected with smallpox and yellow fever germs and then imported into the United States and presented to the sanitary commission for distribution.

CHICAGO.—The Rev. S. B. Duffield of Middletown, Conn., and Miss Eliza P. Shipman, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. George E. Shipman of Chicago, were married at Northford, Conn., on May 16 by the Rev. Bishop Williams. Another wedding reported was that of Miss Hattie A. Dickson and James B. Maxcy, both of Chicago.

CHICAGO.—Mr. Barrett, one of the youngest and most promising actors on the American stage, appeared at McVicker's in a new play entitled "Under the Palm," dramatized from Tennyson's poem, "Enoch Arden."

CHICAGO.—On Tuesday evening at forty-five minutes past 7 o'clock as the express train on the Illinois Central railroad, which arrives in this city at eight o'clock, was passing Woodlawn, a station five miles south of Chicago, it ran over two men, Ferdinand Chenowith and John Carter, killing both instantly.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

MAY 24, 1900.

BERLIN.—The meat bill passed the reichstag by a vote of 163 to 123. It already had been promised the support of the bundesrath. Its provisions are general, but it is designed to affect the United States, and Chicago packers in particular. It prohibits the importation of canned meats, sausage, or sausage meats. Until Dec. 31, 1903, fresh meats shall be imported only in whole or half carcasses, and then only when the hearts and kidneys are attached. It is estimated the bill will cost the Chicago packers millions of dollars every year.

CHICAGO.—Judge Tuley decided that Assistant Chief of Police Ptacek and Inspectors Hartnett, Kalas, and Heidelmeier are holding their positions illegally. Under civil service rules, he held, men cannot be jumped over a grade, and the practice of continuing "sixty day" appointments for an indefinite period cannot be tolerated.

CHICAGO.—Dr. Alexander Dowie "cast the devils" out of Millie Logan, who had been adjudged insane in Judge Dewitt L. Jones' court, and paraded her as a "cure." Later her mother, Mrs. V. T. Bone, says she found the girl lying on the floor of a small room in one of Dr. Dowie's auxiliary homes at 16 East 16th street, bound with cords that cut into the flesh and caused her to cry with pain. The girl was sent to the Kankakee asylum.

LONDON.—President Kruger is undismayed over recent defeats. He said in an interview: "Unconditional surrender on our part is absolutely out of the question. The Transvaal will fight on until the greater part of her burghers are dead. But plenty of life remains in her yet."

NEW YORK.—Frank B. Carpenter, whose paintings, "Arbitration" and "Lincoln Reading the Emancipation Proclamation," won him fame, is dead of a complication of diseases.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

MAY 24, 1915.

ROME.—Italy in a decree signed by King Victor Emmanuel and each member of the cabinet formally declared war on Austria-Hungary. The Duke of Avarna, Italian ambassador at Vienna, presented the declaration to the Austro-Hungarian foreign minister and immediately left for Rome. Baron Macchio, Austro-Hungarian ambassador here, demanded and received his passports. The break with Austria-Hungary also caused a break with Germany. Its ambassador, Prince von Buelow, has been recalled. The opening gun of the war was fired when an Austrian frontier patrol crossed the border at Montozzo pass on the western frontier of Tyrol. They were forced by the Italians to retreat after a stiff fight.

PARIS.—Austrian troops have torn up a section of the track of a railroad between Vosino and Borghetto, dynamiting one bridge and destroying another by shell fire, a Verona dispatch says.

WASHINGTON.—American military experts figure that by Italy entering the war, the German chances of winning it are 25 per cent less.

CHICAGO.—Leopold Neumann, organizer and chief sleuth of the United Societies, reported to the organization that disguised in dress clothes and under the assumed name of "Dr. Hugo Meyer, a German savant," he spent forty nights in high society homes of Chicago and found that under "soup and fish" suits and décolleté gowns exist the same banal appetites for pleasure that are admitted by the average person. He declared that those he came in contact with are "decidedly not any better than the rest of us" in their drinking and entertainments.

ANOTHER BEAT.

Forest Park, May 17.—THE TRIBUNE has scored another beat.

W-G-N, THE TRIBUNE broadcasting station, certainly deserves credit for the manner in which the Kentucky Derby was broadcast from Churchill Downs.

The words of Quin Ryan, Al Sabath, and Jack Dempsey brought a picture of every race to the mind of every person who paid attention to them. The Pullman porters' octet was excellent and the Oriole terrace orchestra from the Edgewater Beach hotel played very appropriate numbers between the races, and all of them combined to make a very enjoyable afternoon. W. V. SCHAEFER.

PHILIPPINE INDEPENDENCE.

Chicago, May 19.—Mr. Villamin has gone on record urging the United States to keep his country in bondage. In this, he is the first Filipino that I know of abroad to have seemingly campaigned against the age-long national aspiration of his liberty-loving people. He is entitled to his personal opinion, but America should not be credulous and gullible, if she is to be true to her traditions and cardinal principles of justice and liberty.

The Filipinos cannot be expected to be 100% unanimous on the question of their liberty. There were patriots in America in 1776, but there were also the Arnolds and Lees. Mr. Villamin I am sure is a patriot, whose noblest aspiration would be to consecrate and dedicate himself to the cause for which Luna, Del Pilar, Mabini, and Rizal fought and died. But, like Hercules, having been away from home, his strength is weakening. He has become a victim of sordid, commercialized, materialistic philosophy. But let him touch the soil of his native land and he would be ten times stronger for a Philippine republic.

His timely speech in Canada published in part in your today's issue is nothing but a justification for our plea for national existence. I will agree with him that the safety and peace of the Pacific are due to the four power pact; that there has been an unparalleled progress in the Philippines during the beneficent altruism of America; that two millions of the Filipinos are now Anglo-Saxon in language. But all of these are arguments for Philippine independence, for if there is now peace in the Pacific, wherein lies the necessity for fortifying the Philippines and wherein lies the dangers for a government of the people, by the people, for the people in the Philippines?
CIRILO MANAT,
Chairman, F. A. C. Committee on Philippine Independence.

IMPOLITE POLICEMEN.

Chicago, May 19.—Mr. Campbell's letter regarding "impolite" [and that is mild] policemen—gets a rise out of me.

A few nights past, while en route home—in the "wee sma' hours"—from a party, a rainstorm came up. I stopped under the viaduct on South State street about 16th street to put up the curtains on the flivver. Along came the "flying squad." They approached with guns leveled and in no gentle terms demanded to know why in Hell I stopped there, what I was doing, from whence I came, etc.

After satisfying them that all was well they pocketed the guns and started to leave. One of the bullies, evidently disappointed at not having any trouble, took hold of one of the curtains already fastened in place and deliberately ruined it by ripping it off. There was absolutely no reason at all for the act. Any protest I would have made would have gained for me a "bust in the jaw."

I've written to Chief Collins but my letter, I suppose, only drew a laugh—thence to the waste basket.

It seems to me that our police force should be taught something else besides police work—courtesy and regard for people's property, for instance.
A. J. FREER.

THE MUSTACHE DEFENDER.

Chicago, May 18.—Why is it, please, that the majority of the present time and age decry things of the past? Only one really sensible reply was received to the question, "Should young men wear mustaches?" A young woman said in content that a mustache tended to make a man appear more masculine and gave him character, which is quite true.

There are very few masculine faces look well without something to cover their thick lips and hard expressions. Nature gave them hair to cover it up, not to effeminize their faces by being smooth shaven. Like bobbed hair on the women, it seems to be a present day fashion, but an unbeautiful one.

Again I ask what or where would we all be if there was not a past? Where would America be if there had not been a Washington? Why, I ask, are old things, old fashions, old manners, old politenesses, old forms of dances, all of which made up the old days, held up to such sarcasm, such ridicule as is heard on every hand? A lot of us were born in those old days when men were men and women were women.
TOLERANCE.

TRIALS OF LIBRARIANS.

Chicago, May 18.—Isn't the doctor's experience in a branch library rather an isolated one due doubtless to a new assistant on the staff?

His request must have been a [illegible] one to a class of people who [illegible] know that when the public ask for "Ladies of the Timberland" the correct title is "Girl of the Limberlost," the request for "The Long Boy" means "So Big," and that, as in one case, the [illegible] "Her Benny" required the [illegible] "Ben Hur." MRS. W. C. [illegible]

PROTEST AGAINST DEPORTATION.

Chicago, May 19.—It is a horrible thing to read about the deportation of Mrs. Kate Bozanik. It is a shame that the richest country in the world has no room for her, for a poor woman who lost everything, husband and child, in a tornado. Citizens as well as foreigners contributed piles of money for the victims of the tornado, and still there is not a piece of bread for one of the victims. Poor sick woman, she must be deported—and her only baby girl is to stay here. Some day when she grows up she may find out the truth; how her mother was sent away just because she was the helpless victim of a tornado.
BLANCHE J. [illegible]

A SCHOOL TEACHER ON MENCKEN.

Chicago, May 17.—Just what does H. L. Mencken want done with the [illegible] "schoolmarm"? Does he want her tarred and feather, beheaded or deported?

One need never read more than a dozen lines of his Sunday tirades to find some critical comment on the imbecility of the schoolmarm.

Since he knows more about everything than all the authors, critics, and instructors combined, why doesn't he start a school to teach teachers how to teach?

Perhaps he doesn't know that teachers are responsible only for the method employed, not the material. The latter is prescribed by directors and boards of education.

No dramatic school makes a Bernhardt, no music master creates a Paderewski; likewise no schoolmarm aspires to turning out a literary genius.

And for heaven's sake, let no schoolmarm be blamed for Mencken!

FRENCH EXPERT TELLS SUCCESS OF DAWES' PLAN

Jean Parmentier Visits in Chicago.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

The Dawes plan is now knocking into a cocked hat some of the notions of academic critics and doubters, according to Jean Parmentier of France, who was in our midst yesterday.

He represented France on the Dawes committee of experts, which devised the scheme to balance the budget and stabilize the currency of Germany and provide adequate reparation payments. He is now a member of the transfer committee, whose chief duty is to supervise the transfer of the gold mark reparations from the reichsbank to the countries with claims, in such a way and at such time that they will not disturb exchange and injure the stability of the mark.

Basis of Plan Sound.

"The Dawes plan is operating with such success," said M. Parmentier, "that already we can look three years ahead. It is nothing short of remarkable to be able to work out in advance over a period of three years a financial program of such magnitude, which touches so closely the economic fabric of Europe and America. It demonstrates the soundness of the principles on which the plan was based."

M. Parmentier dropped in for a talk, of course, with Vice President Charles G. Dawes at his office in the Central Trust company. M. Parmentier declares he is in the United States simply on personal business and that he has no official mission in connection with the French debt to the United States or anything else.

To return, however, to the roughhousing of some of the college profs and old-fashioned economists by Gen. Dawes and his plan: When it was launched some of the profundities wagged their heads sadly and insisted that Germany's ability to pay reparations would be limited to its exportable surplus, to the excess of its exports of goods over its imports. Other lands would be made dumping grounds for German products. Some of the same lads back in 1914 were proving the war could not run more than six months, because by that time the resources of the warring nations would be exhausted.

Some Interesting Proposals.

Mr. Parmentier, however, discloses some interesting proposals in payment in kind. They cover items of service and development. Part of the reparations may be paid in kind. Coal, so far, has been the largest.

One proposal indicated by Mr. Parmentier deals with the letting of contracts to German contractors to build a railroad in the Congo. Here's the economic scenario briefly:

As one payment in kind, France might award contracts to German concerns for the building of utilities that would not cut into French industries, such as a colonial railroad. The Germans would have the advantage of low cost labor; the actual wage in Germany is generally estimated at only 50 per cent of the English and perhaps 35 per cent of the average American wage. They would create wealth in French colony, a productive wealth. France would lease concessions based on the railroad and would get income from the French, who would get dividends. Not only that, but the railroad would aid in the development of the Congo and increase French resources. Thus everybody gets something out of it all the way around.

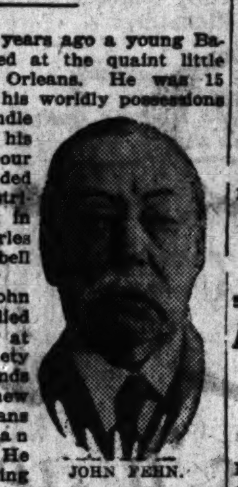
JOHN FEHN OF FAMED SALOON IS DEAD AT 90

Widely Known Here for Fifty Years.

Seventy-five years ago a young Bavarian debarked at the quaint little port of New Orleans. He was 15 years old and his worldly possessions were in a bundle slung over his shoulder. An hour after he landed he was industriously at work in the old St. Charles hotel as a bell boy.



JOHN FEHN.

He was John Fehn, and he died here yesterday at the age of ninety years. His friends said that he knew more Chicagoans personally than the mayor. He met them during the fifty years and six months that he operated a saloon here that was known nationally. It was at Clark and Ohio streets.

Found Dead in Bed.

"It was just old age," Thomas H. Sauerman, his son-in-law, who bought him out fourteen years ago and still runs the old cafe, said. "They tucked dad away to sleep night before last in the home of my sister-in-law at 1429 Ardmore avenue and when they went to call him for breakfast yesterday he was dead."

After his hotel experience in the south Mr. Fehn came to Chicago and started working in a saloon opposite the old courthouse. In three years he had saved enough to buy out his employer. That was in 1860.

In 1864 he established the saloon at Ohio and Clark. There resorted millionaires, poor men, politicians, men of all sorts and degrees in life.

Sorry to See Beer Go.

When prohibition came John Fehn breathed a sigh for the old days and said he didn't mind seeing the whisky go, but that it seemed a shame to have wines and beer exiled. But he was out of the business by then, although a constant attendant in his son-in-law's place.

These children survive: Mrs. Clara Sauerman, Mrs. Tillie Curtis, Mrs. Eleanor Antonieen, and Arthur F. Fehn of Detroit, Mich. Masonic services will be held tomorrow afternoon in Graceland chapel and burial will be in Graceland cemetery.

J. T. Richards, Head of Casket Company, Dies

J. T. Richards, president of the Chicago Casket company, died at his residence, 1236 Madison park, Friday night. He was born in Tuscola, Ill., in 1852, and was a member of the Union League club. His widow and two sons, George D. and Marcus D., survive. The funeral will be tomorrow at 1 o'clock at the home. Burial will be in Oakwoods cemetery.

"We Had Better Call Hursen"

"Yes, we will have Hursen attend to the funeral. Then we will be sure that we will have given the very best as a last tribute, and besides, the cost will have been even less than we would be charged elsewhere."

This, in effect, is the usual decision arrived at by families in every part of Chicago and its suburbs. They know that when a funeral is directed by "Hursen" it is unsurpassed in quality, in beauty, in service and in automobile equipment. They know that this is true in every instance, whether the funeral be large or small, and no matter what their distance away.

You have noticed perhaps the unusual automobile equipment used at "Hursen" funerals. The "Hursen" limousines for carrying passengers are unexcelled in beauty, in size, and in riding comfort by any other equipment for the purpose used in America. The "Hursen limousine-hearses," too, built along the lines of the "Hursen limousines," mark "Hursen" equipment as the most beautiful in this country.

Even with all this superiority, you are reminded that the cost of "Hursen" funerals is but a fraction of the charges made anywhere else. Call Hursen, of course!

Unitaction-

The final perfecting principle-- sought since the infancy of the oil burner. See now, how this amazing engineering triumph marks the final, completed development of Oil Fuel Heating- - - - -

FIRST the idea. Then its perfection. So it has been through the long romance of American manufacture. Edison had his light, Marconi his radio, Bell his telephone. All had the same problem.

Four years ago oil fuel burners were crude. No individual mechanical unit had any particular relation to another. Slowly, progress was made.

Then came Unitaction—a sensational development! The Hart engineers had produced a machine in which every mechanical feature was perfected, in which many parts had been eliminated. To this markedly improved burner, whose mechanical features alone would have created a sensation, they applied the principle of Unitaction—the long sought means of regulation by which each unit is caused to act in precise coordination with every other unit. Unitaction stops and starts the machine as the temperature dictates. It controls the temperature within two degrees. By this principle, an unprecedented barrier of safety is thrown around the operation of each individual unit and the burner as a whole.

With the burner brought to this high state of perfection—with the principle of Unitaction in successful operation—with every known oil burner problem successfully solved—we were not yet ready for the public announcement of Hart Heat—the Unitaction controlled oil burner.

FIRST THE IDEA -then its perfection

Edison's light was crude until he applied the principle of Unitaction

Bell's Telephone was perfected by the principle of Unitaction

Marconi's Radio was worthless without the principle of Unitaction

35 years' mechanical manufacturing are behind Hart Heat

Thirty-five years of manufacturing experience are not without their lessons. Nor could we have built the big factory that is the home of Hart Heat without the confidence and public support which is the mainstay of this business.

So we waited and watched. The most severe tests were instituted. Yet in the months that followed, our engineers could see no flaw, no possible readjustment that would improve this remarkable burner with its master principle—Unitaction.

We announce Hart Heat!

Now, to you, we announce Hart Heat, embodying every proved feature refined to the highest possible peak of perfection.

We announce it with pride. No other has its exclusive mechanical features. No other its economy. No other the perfect co-ordination of action, the unquestioned safety—the result of four years' experiment to apply the final perfecting principle—Unitaction.

Behind Hart Heat are 35 years of mechanical manufacturing and engineering experience. Every part (Coils and Motors excepted) is made in our own plant, which has achieved an international reputation for mechanical manufacturing. Each part is made with a precision that equals that of the finest automobile.

We offer it with full knowledge of our responsibility. We extend our responsibility beyond the point of manufacture, through the dealer and salesman. You may buy with assurance that Hart Heat dealers are heating experts intensively schooled in the Hart factory. These dealers are capable of installing and servicing your Hart Oil Fuel Burner to the end that you may reap the satisfaction, economy and luxurious comfort our 35 years of knowing how have built into it.

Here are the Astounding Facts
—actual, provable superiorities
—things you should know in buying

ALMOST everyone has an acquaintance who has purchased a motor car hurriedly, only to later regret his hasty action. What then will be the experience of those who buy oil fuel burners without knowledge of the existence of the principle of Unitaction?

What of those who purchase complicated, intricate mechanisms without investigating Hart Heat, in which every unnecessary part has been eliminated?

Who will buy burners with complicated electrical systems when Hart Heat has developed a control which eliminates all relay switches and other dangerous devices. 90% of control parts have been eliminated!

Who wants a burner based on the principle of atomization of oil when the perfected feature—"Aireation" breaks heavy oil fuel down so finely that it will float on air for hours—and burn without smoke or soot?

Hart Heat is not humanly controlled—it is not motor controlled—it is not electrically controlled —it is heat controlled.

Unless the fire is burning, the motor will not continue to run. The air and oil pumps and every other working unit stops instantly.

The principle of Unitaction provides this unusual feature. The fire actually turns itself off by means of the mercury controlled thermostatic "brain" located in any room you choose. Sensitive to heat and cold, this control, "thinking" for the entire burner, turns the heat off and on as it is needed. It maintains a room temperature always within two degrees of the point at which you have set it. The control is super-intelligent—almost uncanny. Let the temperature in the room drop below the given point and swiftly, quietly the hot fire is ignited. When normal temperature is resumed, as quietly the fire goes out, the motor stops—oil flow is stopped. No flooding of furnace—no flareback in starting—no drip pot necessary. Complete safety and perfect regulation are assured at every stage by the ever vigilant, never failing principle of Unitaction. Every unit is under its unfailing control, none can function unless all do, all must function if one does—there can be no failure a word soon to become familiar to every thinking buyer of an oil fuel system of heating

To burn satisfactorily, oil fuel must be atomized. This practice is generally considered satisfactory for oil fuel burner application. But—acting on their avowed practice of refining every feature to its ultimate per-

24 Burning Questions

Ask them of every oil burner you consider

1. Is it controlled by the principle of UNITACTION?
2. Does it employ the principle of AIREATION?
3. Can fuel that is not thoroughly "aireated" enter combustion chamber?
4. Does it burn "aireated" oil in suspension in the presence of a refractory material?
5. Will it burn the cheaper grades of oil fuel?
6. Is its entire operation controlled by heat?
7. Has it an adjustable air and oil supply permitting proper size of flame for various heating plants?
8. Has it positive and constant feed regulation?
9. Do ignition electrodes remain exposed to the oil and flame?
10. Is starting prevented when the furnace is hot and capable of causing an unnatural ignition of the fuel?
11. Does it ignite quietly and smoothly without a nerve-racking "flareback"?
12. Has it eliminated troublesome clocks?
13. Does the machine interfere with radio reception?
14. Is any part of the burner in the combustion chamber?
15. Has it a wasteful pilot light?
16. Are drip pots eliminated?
17. Is it built complete by one company or is it an assembled product?
18. Are all parts easily accessible?
19. Are the parts made with the precision of the finest automobile?
20. Is burner entirely covered?
21. Are experts who install the burner schooled at factory?
22. Is it listed as standard by the Underwriters' Laboratories?
23. Has it a flue thermostat control listed as standard by the Underwriters' Laboratories?
24. Is there a company of 35 years of successful machine manufacturing behind it?

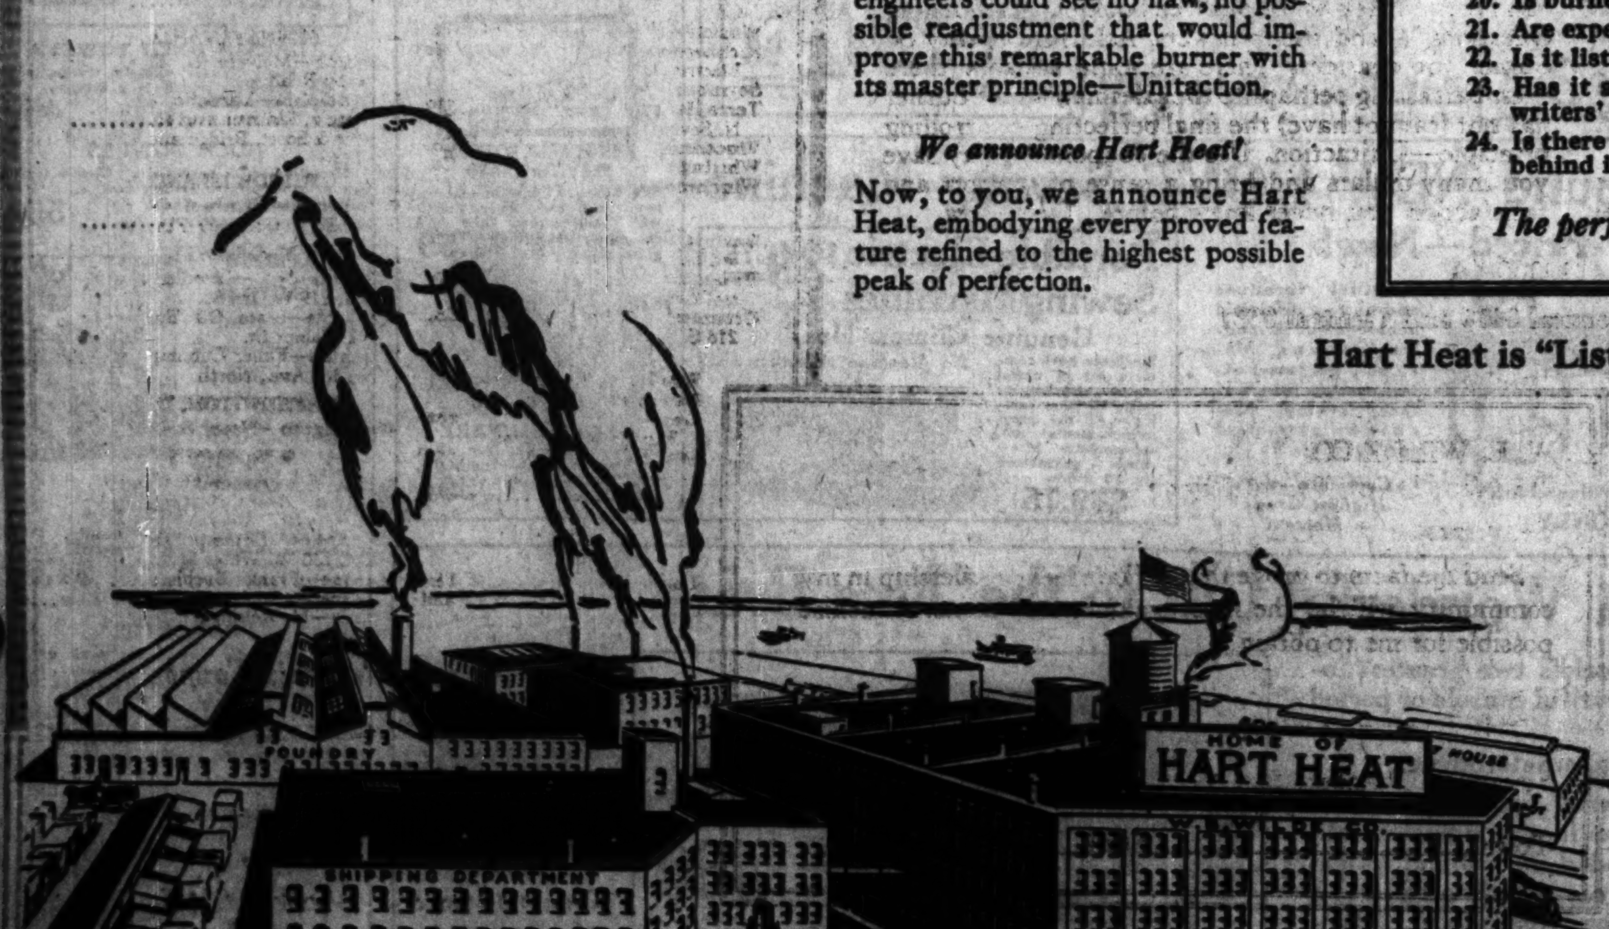
The perfecting principle of Unitaction answers every one

Hart Heat is "Listed as Standard" by the Underwriters' Laboratories

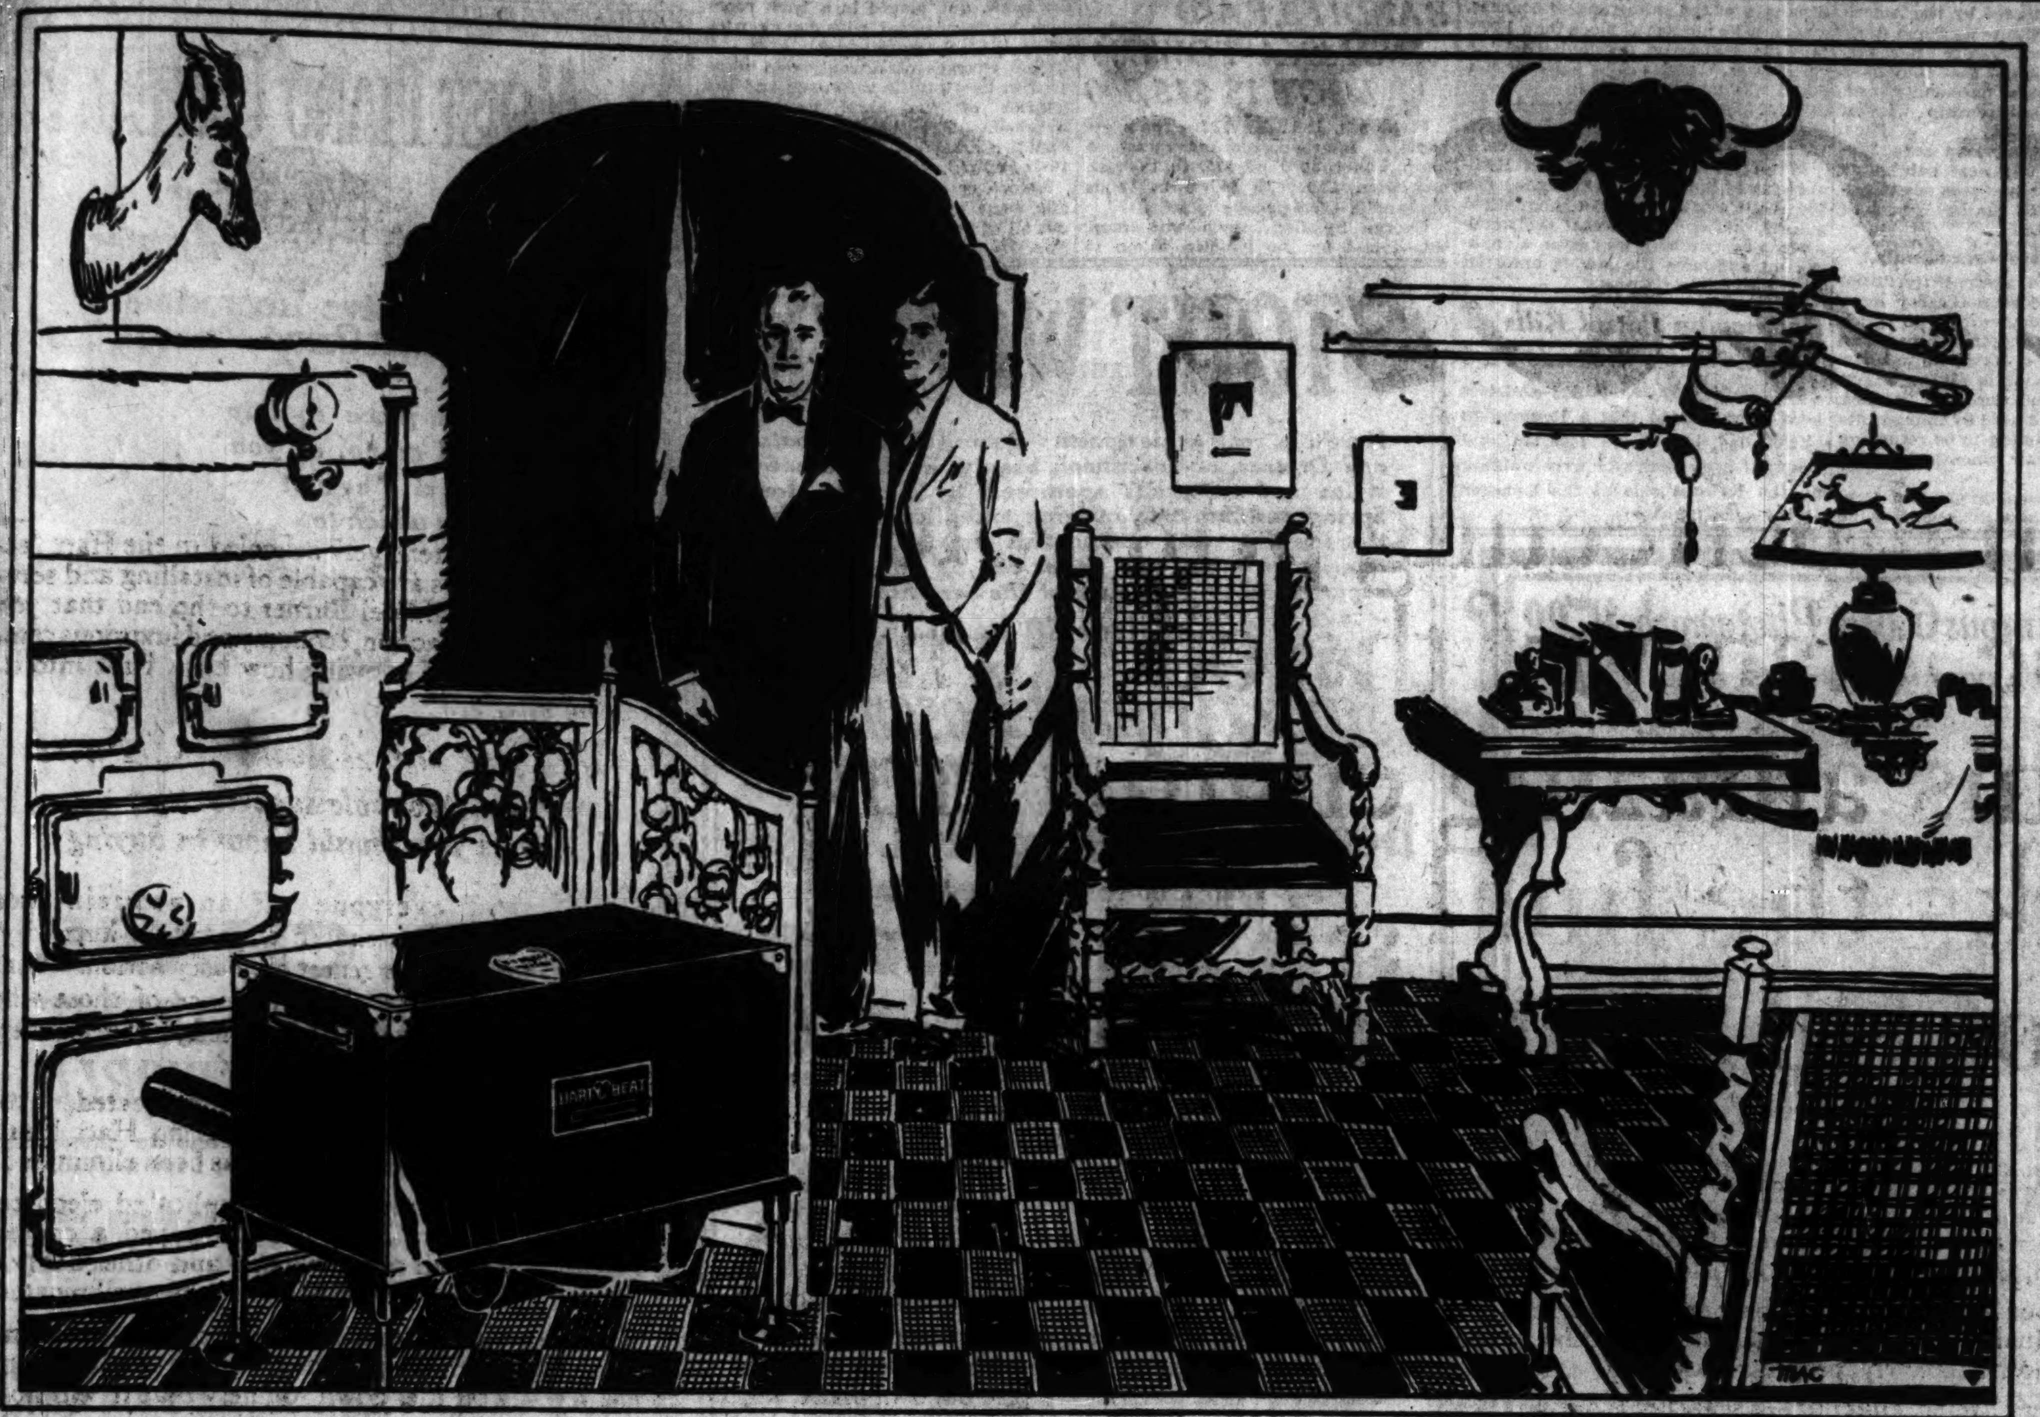
HART



Back of Hart Heat is this firmly established, modern institution, with 35 years of mechanical manufacturing excellence and an international reputation behind it. We train our dealers here to be experts in the installing and servicing of Hart-Heat

©W. B. W. Co. 1925.

THE UNITACTION



If you bought an oil burner yesterday... would these facts startle you today?

fection, Hart engineers took the principle of atomization, refined it and produced "Aireation," a degree of fineness hitherto thought impossible by engineers.

How Hart Engineers perfected the principle of "Aireation"

"Aireation" is accomplished by means of the Venturi—an exclusive feature of Hart Heat. Oil fuel is forced through the reduced space in the Venturi under pressure, where it is met by a harnessed tornado—a whirling, twisting stream of compressed air traveling at lightning speed. The result makes "Atomization" an obsolete term—only a measure by which to compare this amazing improvement. The "aireated" fuel thus produced will float on air for hours—and burn with intense heat.

The process of "Aireation" and the "Venturi" are exclusive features of Hart Heat

Co-ordinated with every other feature by the principle of Unitaction, the process of "Aireation" and the "Venturi" become important reasons why you should carefully consider the merits of Hart Heat.

The Hart Oil Fuel Burner has no relay switches in the electrical control —an exclusive feature

The control circuit is continuous. There are no breaks—no chance for unauthorized action. Here, indeed, is the throne of Unitaction, the control point where every order is executed, unfailingly, unquestionably, irrevocably.

To these—add 40 improved basic features—controlled and co-ordinated by the principle of Unitaction

An inspection of the Hart Oil Fuel Burner discloses a legion of improvements, additions and refinements. If space permitted, hundreds of descriptive paragraphs, filled to overflowing with the solid meat of facts could be written.

We could dwell on the withdrawal of the electrodes in the electrical machine, which eliminates entirely all chance of carbonization. The fire never touches them.

The elimination of 90% of the parts in the electrical control is an improvement of vital importance.

We could tell how we disposed of the wasteful pilot light on the gas system.

How we make a solid piston of pure oil to pump air and thus eliminate many parts is an interesting story.

How the oil is triple atomized—"Aireated"—would fill a sizable engineering treatise.

Hart Heat has the only flue thermostat approved by the Underwriters' Laboratories.

There is no nerve-racking "flareback" when Hart Heat is turned on. Operation is quiet.

These and many other points could be discussed in detail, to the end that you would have no oil burner but Hart Heat—Unitaction controlled.

But space is limited, and words are weak. True appreciation of the features of this perfected oil fuel burner can only be thoroughly understood by actual inspection of the machine.

We urge you—see! Not only see, but compare. Place every oil fuel burner you have seen side by side with the Hart. Compare—point by point—feature by feature. We will welcome your decision.

The Hart Demonstration Room is centrally located. Dealers in every section of Chicago—and in all principal cities and towns—will call for you by appointment to help in your complete and exhaustive investigation. Compare all oil burners before you decide.

Then, when mechanical comparisons are through, consider the company behind the product. Weigh their 35 years of successful, respected business achievement—the financial strength which assures permanence—the thoroughgoing integrity that experimented for years before offering their product publicly.

Don't be satisfied with less than the best oil burner the market affords. Compare every burner point by point—feature by feature. Judge by the answers to the "24 Burning Questions" on the opposite page.

Arm yourself with the Facts

See your dealer. Use the coupon, in the lower right-hand corner. Ask us for our free booklet, "24 Burning Questions"—and their answers. Ask them of any oil burner you consider. There are some stickers there—embarrassing perhaps to the salesman whose burner has not (cannot have) the final perfecting, controlling principle—Unitaction. Use the coupon. It may save you many dollars and bring a sense of comfort and satisfaction you never knew before. Do it now.

TOKIO TRIES TO SUNDER BOND OF ITS ALIEN SONS

But U. S. Japanese Cling to Dual Nationality.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HONOLULU, May 23.—[Special.]—Adopting a radical change of policy since the enactment of the Japanese exclusion law by the United States, the Tokio government has begun sundering the bond of allegiance to Nippon hitherto exacted of American born Japanese.

Tokio is even taking the unusual step of urging Japanese born under the American flag to renounce allegiance to Nippon and is causing Japanese consuls in the Hawaiian islands and on the American mainland to instruct these American citizens how to comply with the formalities for the relinquishment of their Japanese nationality.

Held Dual Nationality.

Originally all Japanese born in America, and therefore American citizens under our constitution, were at the same time Japanese nationals in the eyes of Tokio. The Japanese government adhered to the principle of dual nationality, a principle recognized by the United States. Japan claimed the right of calling these American born Japanese to the colors and of requiring them to undergo military training in the Japanese army.

In 1916 a concession was made under which Japanese born in the Hawaiian islands could renounce Japanese nationality up to the age of 17, with the consent of their parents. Of the 65,000 Japanese born in the islands, however, less than 250 availed themselves of the privilege.

Last November the Japanese government liberalized the law of nationality as applied to Japanese born on American soil. The new law was proclaimed about three months ago, since which time every Japanese born under the American flag becomes an American citizen solely and owes no allegiance to Japan unless he shall declare by formal procedure his desire to retain Japanese nationality.

Permitted to Renounce.

Japanese born in America before the edict and desiring to retain American citizenship are permitted to renounce Japanese nationality by affirmative declaration, to be filed with Japanese consuls.

So for the first time Japanese are being born on American soil on whom the Japanese government has no claim. Few of the 65,000 Japanese born here before the edict have taken steps, however, to renounce allegiance to Japan.

Perceiving this, the Japanese government decided to promote the renunciation of Japanese nationality by its sons born here and on the mainland before the edict. Mr. Tanichiro Yoshida, the acting Japanese consul here, tells me that he is about to instruct the American born Japanese in the provisions of the new law and the method of declaring renunciation and to see that other colonies are also instructed.

By some this move is construed as a desire to disarm those critics who point to the retention of dual nationality as proof that these oriental-American citizens cannot be, and do not want to be Americanized, will always remain Japanese at heart and place allegiance to Japan above allegiance to the United States.

Exclusion Act Influence.

By some others the theory is advanced that the change of policy, following the exclusion law, was adopted with a view to removing obstacles to the migration of Japanese from Hawaii to continental United States and to the return to America of American born Japanese after visits to Nippon.

Japanese desiring to go from Hawaii to the mainland are required to submit proof of American citizenship. They offer territorial birth certificates which are not accepted by the American immigration officers as prima facia evidence, and occasionally they present, in addition, proof that they have renounced Japanese nationality and retain American citizenship without any strings to it.

So long as an American born Japanese remains a Japanese subject as well as an American citizen his allegiance to the United States cannot be called unquestioned.

Certificates Used Fraudulently.

One reason the present territorial birth certificate does not carry more weight is the fraudulent use to which it has been put in slipping Chinese and Japanese into the Hawaiian islands. These certificates, it is said, are sent back to China and Japan in batches, tampered with and used by immigrants to the islands claiming to be returning visitors from their ancestral homelands.

The recent scandal in the immigration service here was the result of the discovery of the smuggling of Chinese, said to have numbered more than 1,000, into the islands on manipulated birth certificates. In this case, however, the fraud was made possible by the collusion of one or more immigration inspectors who passed the bootlegged Chinese on the spurious certificates.

When the fraud was exposed Richard Halsey, immigration commissioner for the Hawaiian district, committed suicide. After this scandal the immigration service here was given a shaking up and now the law is enforced with unusual strictness.

SENATOR M'KELLAR URGES U. S. TO JOIN WORLD COURT QUICKLY

SENATOR McKELLAR.

Washington, D. C., May 23.—[Special.]—Hope that the senate will approve American adherence to the world court early in next winter's session of congress was expressed today by Senator McKellar [Dem., Tenn.].

"I am unequivocally for the ratification of the protocol, providing for our entrance into the world court," said Mr. McKellar. "I hope it may be promptly ratified on the assembling of the senate in December. It is a step that will no doubt lead to other steps to bring about an effectual peace. Already, consideration of the protocol has been set as a special order for December and I believe it will be ratified."

Senator McKellar said that the issue is not partisan, having the indorsement of leaders in both parties.

"Our adherence to the court has the indorsement of both the great political parties in the last national platform. All the great nations of the world have subscribed to the court. Surely America should hesitate no longer."

Roumanian Patrol Kills One Russian, Wounds Two

MOSCOW, May 23.—[U.P.]—Advices here today related that a Roumanian patrol had killed one Russian and wounded two others who were walking on the Russian side of the Dniester river, near Tiraspol.

BANDITS RAID INDIANA TOWN; LOOT IS $15,000

Plymouth, Ind., May 23.—The state bank at Bourbon, ten miles east of here, was robbed of $10,000 in cash and from $2,000 to $5,000 in bonds by bandits early today.

George Spindler, town watchman, was seized by the bandits, taken to the bank, and placed in a back room with his hands tied with heavy wire while the robbers worked.

Five charges of nitroglycerin were used in blowing the safe open and the interior of the bank was partly wrecked. The bandits who seized Spindler said there were ten men in their gang.

Before entering the bank two bandits went to the telephone exchange, cut all cables, and placed a guard over Mrs. Phillip Baugher, night operator.

The Mystery Tree of the Ancient Eastern Races

THE Tree of Life as it is twined and intertwined through the story of the Eastern races was the gripping symbol of Mystery, Knowledge and Immortality. Traditioned in the rugs of these imaginative and symbol loving people, no two trees are alike. And different countries had different trees as the Tree of Life. In Persia it was the cypress; Eastern Turkestan, the cedar. There was a tree of life whose leaves were for the healing of nations; another grew in Paradise; another in Heaven where it sheltered the earth; another in the Garden of Eden.

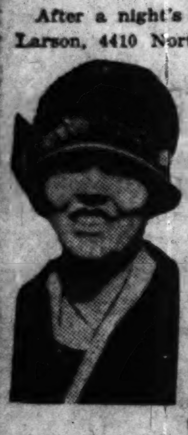
AUTOS CONTINUE THEIR KILLING; BOY AND MAN DIE

Husband Finds Missing Wife a Speed Victim.

After a night's frantic search Carl Larson, 4410 North Sacramento avenue, yesterday found his wife. She had been killed by a motor truck. His son, injured in the same accident, he found in a hospital.



MRS. CARL R. LARSEN.

ERNEST PESANE.

THOMAS RUSSELL.

Larson, searching for his wife, called at a police station. He was taken to the morgue to see if his wife, who disappeared on Friday while shopping with Carl Jr., 4, was the unidentified woman killed by a truck at Montrose avenue and Clark street on Friday evening. It was she.

Larson stumbled from the morgue to the Lake View hospital, where Carl had been crying while nurses vainly tried to learn his name.

Boy Taken Home.

The father took the boy home, though still suffering from the effects of his injuries. He was thrown in the air when his mother was struck, just after both had alighted from a street car.

Thomas Russell, 45 years old, 2148 North Kedzie avenue, died at St. Mary's hospital from injuries which he suffered on Friday when he was knocked down by an automobile while at Palmer street and Palmer square. Max Hirsch, 2329 Rice street, driver of the car, was held.

While playing in front of his home, Ernest Pesane, 9 years old, 2024 West Adams street, was struck and killed by an automobile truck driven by Benjamin Erisnio, 325 West 31st street. Because witnesses said Ernest was playing in the street, and fell in front of the truck, the driver was not held.

Ernest's death raised the county's motor death toll since Jan. 1 to 273.

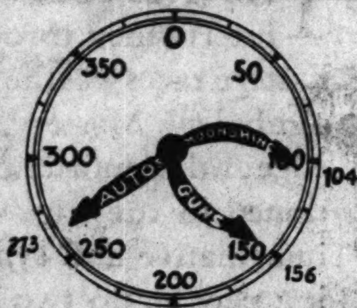
Plan Universal Speed Order.

Every state in the union will be asked to pass a law, drafted by a committee of Secretary Hoover's national conference on street and highway safety, which requires the mental and physical examination of all automobile drivers and that they be licensed. The bill in its essential details is similar to the Glackin bill recently offered the Illinois state senate and rejected for a bill that has been generally regarded as a worthless subterfuge.

WORLD'S LARGEST POWER PLANT

This is the first section of Commonwealth Edison company's new generating station, located on the drainage canal at 39th street. It will be opened formally on Tuesday.

HANDS OF DEATH



The hands of the clock indicate the number of deaths by autos, guns, and moonshine in Cook county since Jan. 1. Yesterday was the one hundred and thirty-fourth day of 1925.

Insull to Speak

Formal opening of the world's largest steam electricity generation station, located at Crawford avenue and Thirty-Ninth street, has been announced for Tuesday by the Commonwealth Edison company. Invitations have been issued to a notable list, including Thomas A. Edison, state, city and federal officials, prominent bankers, engineers and manufacturers.

Samuel Insull, president of the company, will speak, and guests will be taken on a tour of the plant.

This station, when completed, will have a power capacity of more than a million horsepower—more than 60 per cent of the combined American and Canadian power development of the Niagara Falls district and more than the planned capacity of Muscle Shoals.

The opening ceremonies will be held in the completed portion of the station, which represents 40 per cent of the ultimate building structure and 21 per cent of the projected power capacity. The main building of this first section is 332 feet by 365 feet in size. Its roof is 100 feet above ground level. It is supported on 315 concrete pillars sunk 75 feet into the earth to bed rock.

This building houses the boilers and the world's three largest steam turbo-generators—two of 50,000 kilowatt capacity each and one of 60,000 kilowatt capacity.

The officers of the Rotary club of Paris presented Mr. Hill to President Doumergue. Prominent Rotarians from Belgium, Switzerland, Italy, and Spain also were presented.

5 Turpentine Operators Found Guilty of Peonage

Pensacola, Fla., May 23.—[United Press.]—A federal court jury today returned a verdict of guilty in the cases of five turpentine operators, charged with peonage. They were accused of forcing Negroes to work in the camps against their will and beating and otherwise mistreating them when they attempted to escape.

(A Business Editorial)

"SO BIG!"

The school of extravagant advertising has lost weight with the buying public. Firms may still assert that they are the largest of their kind in the United States, or in a lesser locality, or that their prices are lowest in the world, but these broad statements no longer bring in customers.

Why?

Because such statements have been made so frequently that they have become trite and meaningless. Quality and service are the important factors in building a modern business.

There is more merit than ever in the old slogan, "Not how cheap, but how good," and in the older proverb, "Actions speak louder than words."

CHURCH FELLOW ASKS ELDER HAYS OF EVIL MOVIES

Pastor Demands Action by Presbyterians.

Columbus, O., May 23.—(AP)—Will H. Hays, head of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and an elder of the Presbyterian church, is asked to explain why he "condones and defends" producers who turn out "bad" pictures, in a report of the department of moral welfare of the church, made public today.

WILL HAYS.

Mr. Hays, who is chairman of the church's committee of laymen seeking to raise $15,000,000 to put the denomination's new pension plan into effect, appeared before the Presbyterian general assembly today, presenting the committee's report. He left at noon for New York.

To Circulate Pamphlets.

The welfare department's report, which contains a history of the church's efforts for regulation of the movies, will be circulated at the assembly Monday in pamphlet form by Dr. Charles Scanlon. Dr. Scanlon also plans to bring the report formally before the assembly for action.

It quotes a New York interview with Mr. Hays in March last, in which the latter said that "more than 100 questionable plays have been kept from the screen voluntarily."

"However, Mr. Hays fails to say that hundreds of grossly immoral pictures are daily shown and that salacious books are being constantly filmed by these same companies," the report declares.

Calls It Sophistry.

"This sophistry is as if a criminal pleaded exculpation because he did not commit as many crimes as he might have committed, though he does not deny guilt.

"To the writer Mr. Hays said that he had not been able to eliminate bad pictures made before he took office nor to prevent the production of additional evil ones since.

"Mr. Hays modestly claims to be only an 'adviser,' and when those by whom he is employed refuse to take his advice he disavows responsibility for the objectionable pictures."

Has 3 Recommendations.

The report, if it is placed formally before the assembly, seeks to have the body adopt the following three recommendations:

That the church "adhere firmly" to its repeated declarations in favor of local, state, and federal regulation of the motion picture industry.

That emphasis be placed on "the fundamental importance of Christian education as the only permanent safeguard and final solution in the protection of public welfare and private morality against the evil of unwholesome motion pictures.

That there be continued coöperation of the church with other religious agencies "seeking to deal constructively with this question."

90 Per Cent of Movies.

Pointing out that the interests which Mr. Hayes represents produce 90 per cent of the motion pictures turned out in the country, the report asks: "Shall a half dozen men who hold a controlling interest in one of the most influential enterprises of the world be allowed to influence and often debase the ideals and conduct of millions of people daily without restraint, regulation, or control?"

STRANGE TIDAL WAVE SWEEPS 2 OF GREAT LAKES

Huron and Ontario Are Center of Freak.

six feet and at high tide logs which were washed upon the shore years ago were floated and carried out.

The current in Thunder Bay river was reversed when the water raced up stream at high velocity.

The local river gauge showed the water to be still fluctuating this morning, with the water front line 250 feet beyond its previous low mark of the present year.

A barometic storm wave from west to east, with its center at Rockport, was the explanation of Meterologist Frank Jermin of the local weather station.

Lake Ontario Goes Crazy.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 23.—(AP)—Wind, rain, and what was described as a tidal wave struck a series of devastating blows at central and a portion of western New York today, causing property damage estimated at thousands of dollars, but resulting in no deaths and few injuries.

The tidal wave swept virtually the entire southern shore of Lake Ontario, from the mouth of the Niagara river at Youngstown to Oswego, raising the water about four feet above normal. Its origin remains a mystery tonight. At the time it occurred there was only a light wind.

The fury of the wave seemed to center near Sodus Point, where between the lowest and highest level of the water there was a difference of eight feet. The same variation was reported from Oswego. Slight earth tremors were said to have been noted by some residents at Sodus Point.

Other Towns Report Wave.

Serious damage to shipping and lake front property was reported from Summerville and Charlotte, north of Rochester, Poultneyville, and Sodus Point, Oswego, and smaller places along the shore.

Reports from Sodus Point coincided with those from Poultneyville in setting the time of the disturbance as between 7 and 7:30 o'clock this morning. At Wilson, Niagara county, residents along the beach asserted the fluctuations lasted over a period of two and one-half hours. Soil brought up from the lake added between 15 and 20 feet to the width of a sandbar at Sodus Point.

Gen. von Ludendorff Tries to Get Out of Politics

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, May 23.—Gen. von Ludendorff is through with politics, and has tendered his resignation to the nationalist party. The party has refused to accept it. Gen. von Ludendorff has tried to confer with President von Hindenburg, but the latter has expressed the belief it would be better for him to remain away from the German white house to avoid the possibility of rumors that there is an alliance between the president and the leader of the supernationalists.

ARRESTED ON CHECK CHARGE.

For several weeks Thomas Evanson, 30, 6324 Kenwood avenue, had evaded arrest on charges of passing worthless checks totaling $3,000. Yesterday detectives arrested him posing as auto salesman.

The fund is established in memory of Mrs. Edith Lindsay Hartenstein, former president of the club, who, during her life did much along similar lines for the children of the poor who are cared for by the university doctors.

A Community of Distinction

Advance Roll Call!

Note:—We want to communicate direct with 20,000 persons who are apt to be interested in this approaching Investment Opportunity

THIS is IVANHOE'S first invitation. The first call to action. The first shot in the largest and most spectacular Realty movement since World's Fair days. It is a preliminary assault—a call-to-arms, calculated to muster the select among foresighted investors and expectant, but contingent, homesite buyers to whom we may offer the privilege of getting in ahead of the general public for private inspection of our property and for first option on the choice parcels IN ADVANCE of the big moment we are slowly but surely driving up to when we shall shortly announce to Chicago, publicly, the Big Opening Sale.

$1,000,000 in cash awards for (only) early registrants

No obligation incurred by enrolling for advance particulars— with much to gain if you later decide to invest!

The considerable advantage of having first choice and a cost-free option on IVANHOE'S choicest parcels is not the only "edge" which this host of possibly 20,000 or more advance inquirers will have on other Chicagoans who wait until our general Selling Campaign is started. ADVANCE REGISTRATION will entitle those who may afterwards invest to a special—and liberal—net discount from plat prices. Yet, this ADVANCE REGISTRATION costs you nothing. Neither does it obligate you in the slightest to buy.

Inquiries are already pouring in on us by the hundreds, despite the fact that today's ad is our first public invitation. We can confidently anticipate 20,000 or more advance inquiries, because gigantic forces are at work for us in numerous directions. Thousands of motorists traveling back and forth on Halsted Street daily pass our property and see the vast improvement work progressing with feverish activity. Thousands of passengers on the Illinois Central pass through IVANHOE daily and see and read the sign boards with which we have plastered half the property while the construction of the 15 miles of concreted streets and 30 miles of cement sidewalks is going on. Hundreds of persons who are awake to the significance of the Calumet District (which adjoins us) and to the electrification of the I. C., and of the bearing of these factors on the investment and speculative advantages to our property, are already besieging us for an immediate opportunity to invest.

There will therefore be no occasion for us to urge our property on anybody. Those who now "register" under this preliminary invitation may rest assured that the Special Privileges which we extend them carry with them no obligation. We merely ask a chance to present you with the facts; we leave you free to make a choice.

The unheard of low prices offered the early buyers will prove a revelation. Having acquired this 460 acre property in 1921 AT 1921 PRICES (and that was before Illinois Central Electrification was decided upon), we are enabled now to offer it at fully ONE MILLION DOLLARS UNDER ITS TRUE VALUE. The early buyers will get the lion's share of this big saving. And only ADVANCE Inquirers will be invited to buy in the "BARGAIN UNIT" which is soon to go on sale.

IVANHOE

"A City in itself—unto itself"

460 acres of glass-level, grass-carpeted land in one compact parcel, adjoining a 250-acre County Forest Preserve—giving 710 acres of privacy and protection.

Carefully and fully restricted in such a way as will insure its permanent desirability without imposing unnecessary burdens on its future owners and home developers.

Admirably improved throughout. All improvements being installed and paid for by BRANIGAR BROS. CO.

15-foot unified building line for all residences and apartments. All improvements to be of brick, stone and concrete. Minimum single residences, $5,000; minimum for 2-flats, $8,000; 3-story apartments, $12,000 up. Store buildings, $10,000 minimum. Assistance rendered for financing the early building operations.

Improvements include 15 miles of fine concrete streets, 30 miles of cement sidewalks, sewer mains, water mains, gas mains, shade trees on all lots, parkways with thousands of flowering shrubs (to be cared for by us for two years without expense to purchasers), ornamental street lights and street markers and numerous other refinements.

More than 4,000 residence and apartment lots—pointing to a future population of 20,000 or more persons to support its own individual and exclusive "Shopping District" where all stores, shops, movies and other business enterprises will be confined to a single compact district in conformity with IVANHOE'S scheme of city planning.

A self-contained and self-sufficient "Community of Distinction"—a City in itself—unto itself.

30 Minutes to Grant Park by I. C. Electrified Service

So perfectly planned is this promising new city with its capacity for housing more than the combined (census) populations of Elmhurst, Glen Ellyn and Wheaton, with room to spare, that every lot in IVANHOE will be within an easy 8 minutes' walking distance of the Illinois Central Station, which will be located in the very center of our property. By means of this de luxe commutation service, residents of IVANHOE will enjoy 30-minute service to Grant Park by clean, swift electric trains—the final word in modern transportation service. Although IVANHOE already enjoys Illinois Central transportation, the completion of the electrification of the road to IVANHOE and beyond, before the close of 1926, will give IVANHOE an advantage that is certain to make it the most desirable location on the entire south side. And we are merely two miles from the important Calumet Industrial District, where the investment of a billion dollars will give employment to upward of 100,000 workers, making IVANHOE the logical home-place for the thousands of officials in the immense plants of Ford, Jones & Laughlin and the scores of other great industries which are locating there.

These features will give rise to unprecedented demand for IVANHOE homesites, apartment sites and business property which farsighted investors will now anticipate. You are invited to put yourself in line for the huge profits to be made.

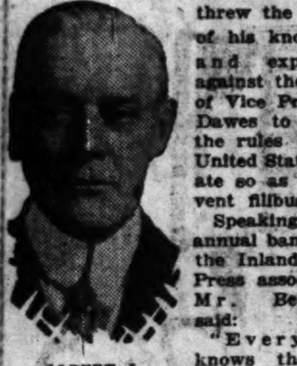
BEVERIDGE HITS DAWES PLAN TO REMOLD SENATE

Tells Perils to Follow in Wake of Change.



ALBERT J. BEVERIDGE.

West Baden, Ind., May 23.—[Special.]—Former Senator Albert J. Beveridge tonight threw the weight of his knowledge and experience against the effort of Vice President Dawes to amend the rules of the United States senate so as to prevent filibusters.

Speaking at the annual banquet of the Inland Daily Press association, Mr. Beveridge said:

"Everybody knows that we have too many laws. In purely domestic affairs our only real danger is overlegislation.

"Yet the proposal is now advanced that it shall be made still easier for congress to grind out even more bills than it already produces; for that would be the first practical result of stopping debate in the senate by a majority cloture.

Warns Against Stampede.

"I hope no senator will be stampeded by the attempts now being made to stir up a public clamor for this radical change in the senate rules; and I know that the people will not be swept off their feet by that agitation.

"The assault upon the senate rules is much like the numerous attacks on the decisions of the Supreme court the last 122 years, though infinitely less formidable than those assaults; in each instance the sober second thought of the people rejected the proposal to denature the Supreme court, and that same sober second thought of the people will reject the proposal to adopt majority cloture in the senate.

Did Creators Usurp Creation?

"The proposal now being urged upon us is that senate rule 22 shall, in practical effect, be abolished. Part of rule 22 was adopted by the first senate. Among the members of that senate were many men who had helped frame the constitution; and they believed that the rules they adopted were in harmony with our fundamental law—they never imagined that they were 'usurping' a power forbidden by the constitution which they, themselves, had just helped to make. Yet we are now told that they did 'usurp' that power.

"That part of senate rule 22 provides that when a subject is before the senate only nine motions shall be in order, and all of these motions are what are called 'dilatory motions.' The purpose of the rule was to compel deliberation in the senate—to make certain that, in spite of impatience, in spite of impulse, in spite of hysteria, in spite of everything, the senate should be a deliberative body, which was the one great object to be secured by creating an upper house of congress.

Public Opinion Rules.

"Time and again the alteration of this rule so as to substitute cloture for free discussion has been debated by the ablest men in our legislative history, at periods when a temporary majority wanted to jam through congress some pet measure which a large part of the country, and, in the end, most of the country, opposed. Each time that attempt was made it was beaten by the weight of argument, just as similar attempts to denature the Supreme court have been beaten.

"On March 8, 1917, as a measure in anticipation of war, rule 22 was altered so that debate on any question can now be stopped when sixteen senators demand cloture and two-thirds of the senate sustains that demand. That amendment to the senate rule was to meet the emergencies of expected conflict. Such war, cloture may be advisable in times of national danger, although it is worthy of note that in our desperate four years of civil war no such action was thought necessary.

Cites the Consequences.

"So stands senate rule 22 at the present time. But now we are told that the public must coerce the senate into another change of that rule so that a bare majority of the senate can stop discussion of any bill or any project and pass that bill or adopt that project without further consideration.

"Of course, the first practical result of that scheme would be the passage of more laws. That outcome is obvious, undeniable, and undenied—indeed, nobody tries to deny it. If a temporary majority, which can be formed in various ways—formed by nonpartisan combination, by group pressure, or by the party lash, for example—can shut off discussion, such a temporary majority can jam through any scheme it pleases.

"The drive now under way to wreck one of the oldest, most valuable, and most distinctive of American institutions—free speech in the senate, the only place in the whole world where free speech still survives—goes to the heart of our American form of government. Adequate discussion of it requires careful examination of the whole American system.

"In short, protracted debate in the senate is the only method by which American citizens can be informed of what is being done in Washington; for we are necessarily so occupied with our personal affairs that it is a physical impossibility to keep posted on the doings of congress, except when so hard a fight is made on some bill or scheme in the senate, that the press tells us about it in the front page news.

"As a practical matter, no bill can be long delayed by extended discussion in the senate unless there is a good deal of public opposition to that bill; and, as a practical matter, no bill ever fails to pass which an informed public opinion demands.

"Sometimes the house passes a bill with the expectation that the senate will defeat it—a bill which all know to be bad and yet few have the courage to oppose, such as the famous 'pork barrel bills,' for river and harbor 'improvements.'

A Commendable Filibuster.

"I saw such a raid on the treasury killed by one brave man, Senator Thomas H. Carter of Montana, a regular or old line Republican; and after he had talked that unworthy bill to death, he was surrounded by senators and representatives thanking him for saving them from going on record for it; because the bill was so full of 'appropriations' for their districts and states that they dared not vote against it, and yet it proposed such a draft on the nation's treasury that they did not want to vote for it.

"Another instance: At any time for months Lorimer of Illinois could and would have been confirmed in his seat had not a number of senators opposed it; the nonpartisan combination for Lorimer had the majority for a long time, and if debate could have been stopped and a vote forced by a mere majority, as is now proposed, Lorimer would have won.

Curtains for Lorimer.

"As it was, a vote was secured on the very last day of the session because of the sheer physical exhaustion of objecting senators and the Lorimer combination was temporarily successful; but the great fight had been made, the nation had been aroused and, solely because of that fact, courageous and resolute senators were enabled to renew that combat effectively and Lorimer was ousted at the next session.

"I warn the impatient gentlemen who so clamorously insist upon rush methods in the senate that, if they succeed, the time will come, and come speedily, when they will curse their own handiwork."

FOUR CHICAGO STUDENTS WIN U. OF I. HONORS

The names of four Chicago men, students at the University of Illinois, were inscribed on the bronze scholarship tablet unveiled recently at the first annual honors day convocation in Champaign-Urbana. They are F. J. Benda, 2445 South Spaulding avenue; W. H. Clingman, 7210 Euclid avenue; C. E. Roessler, 1515 Hollywood avenue, and L. R. Weis, 5754 Kenmore avenue.

There were fourteen students who had established such outstanding scholastic records that their names were placed on the tablet. Each year the names of the seniors who have done exceptional work in their junior and senior years will be placed on the tablet, which is hung in the auditorium of the university.

FALL DOWNSTAIRS FATAL.

Mrs. Fannie Tolcott, 65, 1255 Winnemac avenue, died yesterday of injuries she received when she fell down a flight of stairs several days ago.

FAIL TO SETTLE DISPUTE OF CITY TRUCK DRIVERS

Arbitration attempted by Irwin (Bosco) Knott, business agent of the Electrical Workers' union yesterday failed to settle the controversy between Commissioner of Gas and Electricity John T. Miller and the sixty electrical department truck drivers who were suspended for insubordination early in the week.

Commissioner Miller refused to admit Jerry Donovan and William Neer, business agent and president, respectively, of the truck drivers' union to his office and told Knott that plans for the employment of other drivers were practically complete.

HOW $10 WILL PRODUCE $240 A YEAR

Almost unbelievable—yet it's a fact. Only $10.00 required. Then we start building.

Any car owner will gladly pay $10.00 a month for garage rent. In some localities the rent is $12.00—and in still others, $15.00. But we will figure conservatively—and say $10.00.

A two-car Best Built Garage will bring at least $20.00 a month rent—$240.00 a year. If you own a car, pay yourself the rent instead of using a public garage.

Your monthly income from the garage will take care of all expenses—and after the garage is paid for, the income continues month after month—year after year.

All this on $10.00! That's all you need to convert some idle, vacant space near your alley into an income for life.

Send the coupon and get the details. No obligation on your part.

Investigate First— Then Invest!

What we welcome most is the investigation of every prospective garage owner. A comparison between BEST BUILT and others will demonstrate why we adopted the name BEST BUILT.

The map of Chicago and suburbs is heavily dotted with BEST BUILT Garages. Thousands more will be erected this year. Merit alone—genuine merit—has made BEST BUILT the first choice of thousands. That same reason should make BEST BUILT your choice.

Beautiful in appearance, distinctive in style, durable in construction, high quality of materials, reliability of the builders—all these are embodied in a BEST BUILT Garage.

We supply all materials from our own yards. Our own men will build your garage. You are 100% safe against mechanics' liens. Our guarantee protects you to the last degree.

Built to Last a Lifetime

When we erect a BEST BUILT Garage on your premises, we build it to your order, and include plumbing, electricity, work bench, hoist, and any other conveniences you like.

We build it with a thorough knowledge of garage construction, based on years of experience. We build it to last a lifetime—to beautify your premises—to increase the value of your property.

BEST BUILT Garages are not the portable type—not ready-cut—not sectional. But they are permanent.

All of this is yours for only $10.00 down—the balance in small monthly payments out of the garage income.

Others have done it. Others are doing it. You can, too.

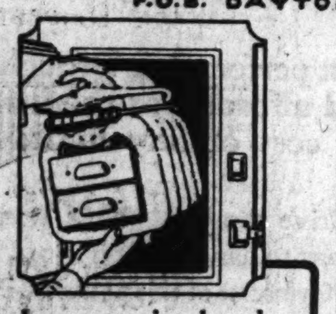
Let Us Show You How Easily You Can Make Your Ice Box a Frigidaire

For Only $190
F.O.B. DAYTON



This is how your ice box is quickly converted into a Frigidaire:

1. The "frost coil" is placed in the ice compartment of your refrigerator.
2. The compressor is placed in the basement or other convenient location.
3. The "frost coil" and the compressor are connected by two small copper tubes, and a connection made to your electric wires.

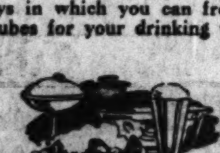
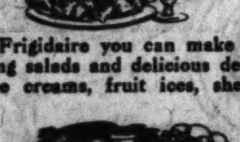
That's all. Your refrigerator becomes cold and stays cold.

Frigidaire is equipped with ice trays in which you can freeze ice cubes for your drinking water.



In Frigidaire you can make appetizing salads and delicious desserts—ice creams, fruit ices, sherbets, etc.



Frigidaire preserves the full flavor of meats, the sweetness of milk, the firmness of vegetables and the crispness of celery and lettuce. Fruits remain firm and juicy, and can be served properly chilled.

YES, you can easily and quickly make your own ice box a Frigidaire. Today, you can solve your refrigeration problem for once and all. The investment is small. You are instantly free from all possible annoyance, inconvenience and uncertainty of outside ice supply. You immediately commence to enjoy the convenience, dependability and economy of electric refrigeration.

The transformation from ice box to Frigidaire is easy. The Frigidaire "frost coil" is placed in the ice compartment—the simple mechanism in the basement or wherever convenient — and a connection made to the electric wiring. Then, without requiring as much as a further thought, it will maintain a dry, germ-free, even cold in the food compartments. It will do it constantly and faithfully — it will do it week after week, month after month and year after year. There is no fuss, bother or worry. Food is kept fresh, delicious and wholesome — at all times, under all weather conditions. And more than that, the freezing trays provide ice cubes for table use and freeze new and delicious desserts.

In what other way could so modest an investment bring such lasting returns in convenience, luxury and health?

As Carefree and Dependable as Electric Lights

Frigidaire is operated by ordinary electric current. There is nothing to start, nothing to stop, nothing to refill at any time. The operation is entirely automatic, the "frost coil" always staying colder than ice. It never melts. Food spoilage is a thing of the past. The health of all your family is constantly safeguarded.

Frigidaire in Over 50,000 Homes

Frigidaire — pioneer electric refrigeration — is made by the Delco-Light Company — is backed by General Motors. These facts alone guarantee its dependability. But more than that, many years of daily service have proved it dependable. Today, more than fifty thousand homes are enjoying the many advantages of Frigidaire.

There are thirty-two models of Frigidaire — twenty designed for installation in standard makes of refrigerators, and twelve complete with cabinet. One of these models will exactly fit your needs. Its operation costs less than ice, in most cases.

Make Your Ice Box a Frigidaire—NOW

Go to your nearest Frigidaire representative today — or phone him. You will find his name and address on this page. He will show you Frigidaire in operation. WHAT GAVE THE BARR POLICE BILL SLEEP SICKNESS?

Strange Nap of Measure Is Told in Detail.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Springfield, Ill., May 23.—[Special.]—Is the Barr state highway police bill dead?

Having served to kill the Dunlap state police bill in the senate, has its disappearance in the house of representatives been intentional?

Queries along this line are heard in Springfield every day from visitors who had hoped to see at least some sort of a start made now toward the creation of a police force to patrol the rural districts. But that hope is disappearing rapidly.

Odds Against Any Bill.

And among the best informed legislators the chance that the Barr police bill will become a law by July 1 is regarded as about one in a hundred.

As long as it was in the senate—in competition with the Dunlap bill which labor influences have killed session after session—the Barr measure moved with steady rapidity. It was introduced on March 24. On April 2 it was reported out of the committee on roads with a recommendation that it pass.

On April 8 it was read for the first time, on April 14 for the second time, and on April 16 it was passed. In the upper house it had traveled the whole distance in slightly more than three weeks.

Begins to Slow Down.

But at this point a slackening of speed became noticeable. The bill was not rushed over to the house, as frequently is the custom with bills whose passage is eagerly sought. It was passed on a Thursday and reached the house the following Wednesday. And it was not for another full week that it was read for the first time.

On that occasion—April 29—it was not referred to the committee on roads, as it had been in the upper house. Speaker Scholes, an avowed follower of the wishes of the administration, sent it to the committee on public utilities. So far as has been detected by the closest scrutiny there is no mention of utilities in the bill.

But the chairman of the utilities committee is Representative R. G. Soderstrom of Streator, not only an administration henchman but also one of the most open champions of union labor in the present session.

The Sleep of Death.

More than a month has passed since the bill reached the house—a longer period than was required for its full consideration and passage in the senate—and it has not advanced a single step. It has slept in Soderstrom's committee more than three weeks without action.

On the present schedule—and there is considerable doubt here that it will be altered—there are only four weeks left of this session. If the Barr bill were reported out even during the coming week it would land at the tail end of a staggeringly long list of bills awaiting house action on the calendar.

And, unless the program is shifted, the day will come in two or three weeks when a motion will be passed to strike off every bill that is not within passing reach on the calendar. The Barr bill may be among them.

But it is contended that a politically motified official would grab at the chance to add to his payroll all or a large part of the 750 new employés assured by the Barr bill—an invaluable political organization. The answer to this is that there is no gubernatorial campaign in sight until after the next general assembly two years hence. A more advantageous bill might be passed at that session.

SUBCOMMITTEE AGREES ON NEW INSURANCE CODE

Hearings on the new Illinois insurance code proposed by Senator Dailey [Rep., Peoria] were concluded yesterday at the Hotel La Salle. The senate insurance subcommittee intends to recommend passage of the bill this week.

"It is remarkable that a measure of such importance meets with such universal satisfaction among those interested in this kind of legislation," said Senator Dailey, who heads the subcommittee which has been conducting hearings on the bill.

Several minor changes have been made in the bill and with one exception it is said to be generally satisfactory to all branches of the insurance business. This one exception is the question of local taxation of insurance companies.

MOTOR COACH CO. FACES SUITS FOR DESPOILING TREES

City Charges Malicious Mischief Was Done.

Malicious mischief in the trimming of branches from stately trees lining the Dearborn street parkway south of Schiller street to clear a route for a new bus line into Lincoln park was charged against the Chicago Motor Coach company by Corporation Counsel F. X. Busch yesterday.

Prosecution of the company for violation of the city's forestry code, requiring even property owners to secure a permit to trim parkway trees, will be undertaken at once. Assistant corporation counsels will be detailed to advise those property owners who may seek civil redress from the company, Mr. Busch declared.

Old Trees Despoiled.

One old elm tree in front of 1154 North Dearborn street was despoiled of a limb six inches in diameter before the property owners were aroused to protest to the coach company's workmen, who asserted they needed no permit. Before policemen, sent by Commissioner of Public Works A. A. Sprague to stop them, arrived the men had lopped vital branches from trees in the parkways in front of 1115, 1121, and 1165 North Dearborn street.

One of the trees in front of 1121 North Dearborn street lost eight large branches.

"Is there no way that the high-handed and arrogant actions and methods of this company can be regulated by the city?" Commissioner Sprague asked Corporation Counsel Busch in a letter reporting the destruction and urging prosecution.

"The use of Dearborn street by the company is of recent date, and is contrary, as I understand, to the wishes of most of the residents," declared Col. Sprague.

Adds "Insult to Injury."

"It is the most outrageous thing that has come to our attention in many months," declared Mr. Busch. "The bus company, in this latest exhibition, has added insult to a long series of injuries and if the city law department can find a way, it is going to be punished. It is not enough that the company ridicules our right to control the location of bus routes, but they must go a step further and in the face of ordinances which are strictly enforced against the householder, despoil grand old trees that interfere with their busses.

"It is such action as these—the disregard of the property owners and the city council in planning routes and the willful destruction of trees, all too few in Chicago, that is rapidly crystalizing popular resentment against the methods of the company which will find expression in a city wide demand for the return of home rule over local utilities."

The new route leaves Michigan avenue at Ohio street and proceeds north on Dearborn street and through Lincoln park by way of the west drives. When the protests of property owners along the route to the new schedule were unavailing, the city council, meeting last Wednesday, adopted a resolution offered by Ald. Arthur Albert [43d] directing the city law department to press to conclusion pending litigation with the coach company in the hope that the city's right to regulate route locations will be quickly determined.

DEVER BRANDS BARR BILL AS WORST POSSIBLE

Approves Measure Ald. Albert Sponsors.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

"The Barr bill is utterly bad. To its backers I ascribe as good motives as I have, but that bill is inherently wrong. It cannot be amended here or patched up there and made satisfactory. It is astounding that in this day such a bill will be seriously considered. It would give to every utility, regardless of its present franchise obligations and contractual relations, the power to acquire a terminable permit, which under our conditions can only mean a perpetual franchise. Nothing in legislation could be worse.

"You remember that the state was set on fire by the viciousness of the Allen and Humphrey bills. Reputations were swept away and some men still bear the weight of having voted for those bills. Yet the Allen and Humphrey bills were not so bad as the Barr bill."

That was the expression of Mayor Dever yesterday before a house subcommittee on utilities, headed by Representative Durso. This committee was considering the bill of Ald. Arthur Albert, which would transfer all the powers of the Illinois commerce commission over local transportation in Chicago to a commission appointed by the mayor with the approval of the city council.

Approves Albert's Bill.

The mayor approved of this bill and the committee recommended by a vote of 8 to 2 that it pass. It would restore regulatory powers to Chicago over transportation only. Ald. Albert and the mayor were the speakers heard; none of the other eighty-four persons invited were on hand to talk. Reed Cutler, Republican house leader, objected to the action until next Tuesday in Springfield.

"I'm for home rule," said Representative Benjamin Mitchell. "Chicago wants it. Mayor Dever says this bill will partly restore it. Why wait until Tuesday?"

The mayor asked other legislation and protested against the dividing the state between Cook and the other counties. He pleaded that every one forget partisan politics.

Some Legislation Needed.

"This disagreement is a dangerous feeling," said the mayor. "Chicago does not want to dominate the state. This city should not attempt to impose its will upon any other part of the state.

"We need some legislation. Time has shown that the twenty year franchise is impracticable in Chicago, where we must raise between $400,000,000 and $600,000,000 to handle our utilities. Those sums cannot be raised on a franchise limited to 20 years.

"Then home rule should be restored to Chicago. Mr. Busch has prepared some bills which will restore it so far as creative and regulatory powers are concerned. The Albert bill would restore regulatory powers in a different form. But the form is not so highly important. I favor the Albert bill. We agree on that, although the alderman and I disagree on many other things. It has received the unanimous indorsement of the city council."

"You say that the 20 year limitation on franchises is impracticable," said Representative Mitchell. "Will you prepare an amendment to modify that limitation?"

"We have already done that," replied the mayor. "Mr. Busch has prepared such an amendment."

The Busch amendments provide that the city council can issue terminable permits on its own terms and conditions and also retain the power to issue 20 year franchises, according to the amendments presented to the state senate. With the powers the mayor asked he said that Chicago can work out its own salvation, unless the legislature does the "unthinkable thing of passing the Barr bill."

Representative Gibson asserted that Gov. Small had pledged restoration of home rule in his first inaugural message. Representative O'Grady said that he is opposed to the Albert bill, although he favors home rule. O'Grady claimed that only 15 legislative days remain before June 20 and doubted whether any utility legislation can be passed because of the lack of time.

Only Applies to Chicago.

If that is true, the suggestions of Mayor Dever have the effect encouraging a continuation of the legislature until it passes the legislation needed by Chicago. Mr. Dever distinctly said that he was not attempting to remove the 20-year limitation for cities other than Chicago.

SANITARY BOARD FIGHTS FOR LIFE AT SPRINGFIELD

BY FRANK BUTZOW.

Gov. Small, in his bitter fight on the Chicago sanitary district, is attempting to prevent the district from regaining just one-half of the bonding power it voluntarily gave up some time ago, members of the drainage board declared yesterday.

Through the McClugage bill, around which the great legislative battle is raging, the sanitary district hopes to increase its bonding limit from 3 to 4 per cent. This would mean about $19,000,000 more than the present $57,000,000 limit.

The district, like all other municipalities in Illinois, once had a 5 per cent bonding power, but relinquished it at a time when it was impossible to foresee the court injunction and war department's orders that have been issued against the district in the last year, the trustees say.

Facing the huge task of completing its construction program in five years to meet the government demands, the district originally intended to ask that its 5 per cent limit be restored, but finally that they could carry the financial burden on an increase of 1 per cent over the present limt.

Harms Small's Machine.

To prevent this increase and prosecute a political war against the present trustees Gov. Small has sent his own legislative program dangerously near the rocks by stirring his own followers to revolt. If the fight grows any more bitter, the rupture will be permanent, a number of his erstwhile lieutenants declare.

Many of the governor's appropriations still are pending in the legislature. His pet measure, House Bill 303, creating two new state departments, is hanging fire. It has passed both houses, but a conference committee was necessary to end differences between the senate and the house. No action has been taken on the report of this conference committee. The amendment in question would permit the governor to let contracts without asking competitive bids, or in other words would permit him to outdo the things he accuses the drainage board of doing.

Former Speaker David E. Shanahan, who has been absent from the legislature since January on account of illness, expects to return to the capital this week to help the sanitary district in its fight.

Warns of Typhoid Peril.

Chicago can prepare for a typhoid epidemic and the Illinois valley can prepare to see its stream reduced to a veritable cess pool if the McClugage bill fails and the district is unable to finance its big program within the five years of grace granted by the war department before the lake flow is reduced, President Lawrence F. King declared yesterday.

Mr. King continued:

"Chicago may as well understand now as at any other time that the failure of the proposed sanitary district bill now pending in the house of representatives means, unquestionably, that the war department, acting with the full authority of congress and with the tacit approval of the Supreme court of the United States, will proceed forthwith to execute the terms of the injunction originally issued by Judge Carpenter in the United States District court and upheld by the Supreme court.

Won't Delay Any Longer.

"The war department has said repeatedly, definitely, and formally that it will not dally further with Chicago's problem. Too much pressure and propaganda is being exerted at Washington, at Springfield, and elsewhere by the Canadian power interests and their allies to cut down Chicago's water supply to the minimum at the earliest possible moment.

"Curbstone opinion to the contrary, notwithstanding, when this water is cut down by the government Chicago may prepare for a typhoid fever epidemic. The typhoid death rate, which fell from 175 to less than one per 100,000 by reason of the sanitary district's works, starts to rise just as soon as the sewage pollution of the city reaches the water intakes. This happens within sixty days after the war department shall have acted.

State Waterway at Stake.

"That action will kill the Illinois waterway now under construction by the state of Illinois and will make a cesspool of the Illinois river, rendering its banks unfit for habitation and threatening the health of our neighbors and fellow citizens of the Illinois valley.

"Chicago's predicament today is identical with that of two years ago when the sanitary district discovered that its prospective loss of lake water was due to the cunningly contrived, and deep laid plans of Sir Adam Beck and the Canadian power interests.

"It is important to Chicago to know that on the very day that the sanitary district trustees were in Springfield for the decisive test, representatives of the cabal of Great Lakes states, that ostensibly has been making the fight at Washington against Chicago, was in session at Cleveland contriving further plans to force the shutdown of water at Chicago.

"The sanitary district trustees in the fullest spirit of coöperation and in a desire for harmony and immediate action have agreed that the express conditions suggested by Gov. Small in his veto message of the first McCluggage bill were reasonable and these have been carried into the measure now pending."

SCHIPA HAS BROKEN NOSE REMODELED TO IMPROVE HIS SINGING

TITO SCHIPA.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 23.—Tito Schipa, Chicago Grand Opera tenor, will leave a hospital here today with his nose remodeled for better singing. The nose was broken in an accident several years ago and on May 15, it was learned today, Schipa underwent an operation to overcome the effects of the breakage. A small piece of bone was removed and it is believed that the removal of this obstruction will result in an improvement of the tenor's upper register.

French Turn Cannon on Moors; Bayonet Rebels from Trenches

RABAT, French Morocco, May 23.—(AP)—The French forces in Morocco opposing Abd-El-Krim's invaders today commenced a new artillery action against the Beni Guil tribe, an official communique announced. It said the enemy tribe suffered serious losses and gave evidences of panic.

The Riffian tribesmen are standing their ground stoutly against the forces seeking to oust them from the French zone, and although Gen. Count De Chambrun's success in Thursday's and Friday's operations is unquestioned, Abd-El-Krim and his followers still loom as formidable foes.

French military men at the headquarters here say the Riffians have shown themselves to be thoroughly organized along the lines developed during the world war and that the French everywhere in De Chambrun's operations captured the enemy's positions

TANGIER, Morocco, May 23.—While the success of the French advance against the Riffians in the last three days indicates that there will be no further resistance in the French zone, the restoration of French authority and the pacification of the tribes will be a difficult problem. The operations so far demonstrate the impossibility of ending the menace permanently without carrying the campaign to the Spanish zone.

The fact that the Beni Zeroul warriors are returning home signifies that their revolt is broken. Their defection is blamed by Abd-El-Krim for his recent defeats.

French and Spanish Agree.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, May 23.—Louis Malvy left for Paris today after completing a Franco-Spanish agreement with Dictator Primo de Rivera concerning Morocco.

During his conversations with the dictator an accord was reached to intensify the blockade on the Moroccan coast, using French naval units as well as the Spanish fleet and French troops on the Algerian frontier and coast to prevent the smuggling of arms into the Riff from the east.

Dictator Primo de Rivera agreed to remark the frontier between the French and Spanish zones when order is established, which thus leaves a sort of no man's land, now permitting French troops to advance beyond the former border against the retreating Riffians.

U. S. PHILIPPINE CHIEF SHACKLED BY LEGAL IRONS

Washington Rules Make Wood Helpless.

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MANILA, P. I., May 23.—A large, good natured, benign St. Bernard dog with a worried, wrinkled head and a puzzled air of resignation, surrounded by a circle of yipping, snarling, snapping terrier pups, is the comparison that presents itself when an American visitor to the Philippines first contemplates the position occupied by the American administration with regard to the noise and clamor of native politicians ranging in hue through yellow, brown, and black.

The American St. Bernard of the Philippines is Governor General Leonard Wood. He is appointed by the President of the United States, with the consent of the American senate, and he reports to the President through the bureau of insular affairs of the war department. His salary, expenses, and the maintenance of the executive residence are paid from the revenues of the islands, which are assessed, collected, and appropriated by the native legislature.

As the American executive in the islands and the representative of the President of the United States, the governor general is neither in a position to institute fundamental changes in policy or to be the mouthpiece of the administration. His acts are governed by the basic Jones law and the specific interpretations it receives from Washington. Aside from what he may accomplish through his personal influence, which has not been small, the governor general's powers are the negative ones embodied in the right of veto to the acts of the native legislature.

Wood's Policy to Be Silent.

This condition of affairs greatly increases the difficulty of obtaining the real viewpoint of the American administration in the islands. Gen. Wood cannot talk critically of the government he is supposed to direct, and his tenure of office has been marked with a silence as heavy as that which characterizes the White House. In this respect the Wood régimé has been distinctly different from that of his predecessor, William Burton Harrison, whose openly announced and frequently stated policy was to so distribute the executive powers invested in him by the American congress that he would be the last American governor general of the islands.

That Governor General Harrison was weak and a tool in the hands of clever yellow politicians is the carefully considered opinion of almost all Americans in the Philippines, and there are many Filipinos themselves who chuckle today over the tangled administrative mess which they were able to weave about the New York politician President Wilson sent to represent the American nation at Manila.

This is the tangle that Gen. Wood has inherited and under which he is forced to function today. That he has been able to do so at all, is a great credit to his diplomacy, executive ability and patience. His real opinions must be confined to his official reports and consequently it is only by a review of his acts and an association with those attached to the executive that one is able to obtain the viewpoint of the American administration on the present unsatisfactory condition of affairs.

Law Fails in Purpose.

The aim of the Jones law was to give the Filipinos a greater degree of autonomy and a form of government modeled after that of the United States. In the last aim, it has signally failed, and even the hope of its possible success was built upon falacious reasoning and inexperience. In America, the executive has the support of his part in congress. In the Philippines, the American executive is without local political support and the native congress is his constant direct sworn and hostile opposition. He may be sure of this from all parties in the Island legislature.

With neither the governor general nor the Philippine congress able to operate without the support and consent of the other, the conflict between the executive and legislative branches of the government is certain. It will continue as long as the American congress permits it.

This fundamental weakness in the basic law deprives the governor general of the power of selecting his executive family. He may nominate the several secretaries composing his cabinet, but unless such nominees pledge themselves to the native legislature, instead of to the executive, the appointments are not confirmed. This is the situation that interferes with the exercises of that power conferred upon the governor general by the Jones law of "supervision and control" over all departments and bureaus of the administration. He is actually in the position of responsibility, but is without complete power to take care of it properly.

Combine the actual working of the Jones law with the aims and declared efforts the Spanish and Chinese mestizo politicians, and there is revealed at once the intention of these native leaders of color to change the proposed government to the islands from one based on the government of the United States to one based on the British parliamentary system, with the executive reduced to a figurehead or a rubber stamp, whose sole function would be to indorse the acts of the house and senate leaders. It is to this un-American state of affairs that misplaced American sentiment and congressional lethargy, if not worse, has reduced the efforts of twenty-five years to prepare twelve million Asiatic charges of the United States for self government.

SANITARY BOARD OPENS WAR UPON MOSQUITO HORDE

The Chicago sanitary district has declared war on mosquitoes and is attacking the breeding places throughout the northern and western suburbs. Sixteen crews have been operating in the territory from Des Plaines to Lyons, a distance of twenty miles. The Skokie valley will be invaded this week, according to President King and Edward F. Moore, superintendent of maintenance and operation, and special squads of oilers will be sent into other sections.

Coöperation of home owners is urged by the drainage board, with particular attention to water pools, cisterns, rain water barrels, dump heaps, and weed patches.

The sanitary district is making attacks on land and water. A fight against mosquitoes on the wing is hopeless. Citizens were urged to aid in the protection of their own health and comfort by keeping the breeding places clear of larvae and wigglers. A slight film of oil on the surface of water keeps out the air which the embryo mosquito needs to live.

LEONARD WOOD ASKS $1,000,000 TO AID LEPERS

Makes Personal Appeal for Culion Colony.

An appeal for $1,000,000 with which to combat leprosy in the Philippines, as well as in the rest of the world, was received by The Tribune yesterday from Gov. Gen. Leonard Wood. Gov. Gen. Wood, himself a physician, cites the work being done in a colony of 12,000 lepers on Culion island, and predicts that leprosy can be eradicated as yellow fever has been.

BY MAJ. GEN. LEONARD WOOD.
[Governor General of the Philippines.]

Throughout the world today there is deep and widespread interest in the treatment and care of leprosy. England has organized the British Empire Anti-Leprosy society and is making arrangements for a widespread effective campaign against this dread disease in India and elsewhere.

In the Philippines we have about 12,000 lepers, 5,600 of whom are segregated and under treatment on Culion island—the world's largest leprosy colony. The care and treatment of leprosy has been carried on here steadily for the last twenty years and in intensive form during the last three years. Well known experts on leprosy have visited Culion and are unstinted in their praise of the work being done. Our efforts have been limited only by the means available.

The results are most encouraging. We have already 449 negatives and several hundred more in sight, 75 per cent of the cases under treatment are improved and 196 have been returned to their homes as cured. The people who formerly looked upon Culion with fear and dread are commencing to look upon it as a place not of segregation and imprisonment but as a place of care, treatment, and possible cure.

On Verge of Great Results.

I believe we are on the verge of great results in the treatment and care of leprosy, but we need help. We are working not only for the lepers here but for lepers all over the world, and our success will be theirs as well. The insular appropriations for the colony are about one-third of the entire public health appropriation. Nevertheless, we need more money, and the insular government cannot give more. This money will be used for additional buildings, for roads to agricultural lands, and for the establishment of small agricultural and segregation groups, and especially for trained personnel, laboratory equipment, additional wards, equipment, and skilled personnel for research work and treatment.

I want to raise a million dollars for these purposes. Money cannot be better spent. Not only will it be for the immediate benefit of the lepers themselves, but it will be for the general study and treatment of the disease, which I believe can be eradicated in these islands. In other words, we shall render a great service to stricken humanity throughout large portions of the world and demonstrate that this dread disease can be controlled.

What Has Been Done.

We were successful in our efforts to eradicate yellow fever and to control malaria in Cuba. The methods there employed have made the tropics as safe as the temperate zone. We have rendered the Philippine islands safe against cholera, smallpox, and plague by scientific methods of control.

We are now carrying on this great campaign for the control and eradication of leprosy. We need your help. The American people have ever been generous in supporting movements of this kind, and I again appeal to their generosity and spirit of service in behalf of these stricken people, who are the most unfortunate and afflicted of God's creatures.

Contributions may be made payable to the chief of the bureau of insular affairs, war department, Washington, D. C. They will be transmitted to the Philippine islands and spent under the direction of the governor general.

ANN ARBOR MUSICAL FESTIVAL FOR 1925 IS OVER, A BIG SUCCESS

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Ann Arbor, Mich., May 23.—[Special.]—With "La Gioconda" as the final attraction, the Ann Arbor music festival of 1925 ended tonight in what would seem to be something of a blaze of glory.

The Italian opera was presented in concert form tonight, which means without scenery, costumes, or acting. The Michigan Choral union has been working all season on the chorus parts; the Chicago Symphony orchestra took up the instrumental score as part of its festival duties, and six operatic singers were imported to perform the solo roles.

They were Frances Peralta, Kathryn Meisle, Augusta Lenska, Mario Chamlee, Vicente Ballester, and Henri Scott; an entirely competent and at times brilliant squad; and as the director, Earl V. Moore, displayed distinct talent both as trainer and conductor, the performance moved with speed and manner.

The afternoon event was an orchestral concert where once again the audience took Frederick Stock into its complete affection for his performance of the Third Bach Suite and the Fifth Beethoven Symphony. The soloist was Mischa Elman, the violinist. To one who has heard him many times he did not appear at his top form, but he was a sensation, just the same, and was not permitted to leave until he had played several other pieces with his sister at the piano.

ITALY'S THREAT AGAINST MERGER ANGERS AUSTRIA

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, May 23.—A wave of indignation has swept over the country because of Premier Mussolini's open threats and declaration that Italy would under no conditions allow Austria to join Germany. Austria considers this an open attack on itself and a violation of Woodrow Wilson's principle of the right of self determination for all nations.

The matter is of vital importance for Austria, because its economic position is weakening daily. The leaders reckon that the next four months will throw 100,000 more men out of jobs. This would sum up to a total of 300,000 jobless in a nation of 6,500,000.

Reading Premier Mussolini's threats today in the leading Italian papers, declaring openly that the only thing for Austria to do if it wants to live is to join Italy, the Austrians are indignant.

Austria sees the wolf, Premier Mussolini, awaiting its breakdown. Austria knows the treatment which will be given it would be no better than that given southern Tyrol if it is delivered into the hands of Italy. Consequently, it is trying desperately to join Germany, which would help its economic reconstruction and ward off a further breakdown.

I'll Tell You Why I'd Buy a JORDAN

¶ This is a simple statement of facts. ¶ A simple explanation as to why other people buy Jordans—written in words easily understood—for the man who thinks. ¶ Here's why I'd buy a Jordan.

1 Because of the name on the radiator—accepted—approved—a mark of prestige—evidence of good judgment.

2 Because it sells for $1000 to $2000 below cars in its class—materials cost as much—but Jordan overhead, salaries and plant investments are less.

3 Because it is the most satisfactory line eight motor built. Other manufacturers who have bought Jordans say so.

4 Because you can drive it from two to seventy miles an hour—or all day long at forty-five—and think you are going thirty.

5 Because you snap away in the traffic press, confident of power—it's agile on its feet.

6 Because you cannot describe the feeling at the wheel. It has what the salesmen call a wallop—a little kick—a little something known as pep.

7 Because when you take it to the long pull hill—and think it's going to die—it just lies right down and pulls and pulls and pulls—that's performance.

8 Because the finish and equipment on The Great Line Eight are the best obtainable today.

9 Because the Jordan starts easily—reliably.

10 Drive the Line Eight for a week—and then go back and drive any car you have ever driven—that's proof.

11 You will be happy with the Jordan if you have driven an old fashioned, bulky car. You never hear much about "shimmy" with balloon tires on the Line Eight—it's balanced.

12 You never hear salesmen condemning balloon tires for the Jordan. It's just a matter of distribution of weight. Some cars are top heavy. Jordan isn't.

13 Place your hands on the wheel—balloon tires do not effect the steering. It's easy to handle—easy to turn around.

14 You have heard a lot about four wheel brakes. With the Jordan hydraulic brakes you never hear of trouble. They just work.

15 You may have driven a higher priced car with noisy transmission or a humming axle. Drive the Jordan from two to forty-five miles an hour in second speed and just listen.

16 If you have the spirit of youth take a look at the Playboy—step into it—drive it, and watch the people stare as you go by.

17 If you want enclosed car comfort without the squeaks and rattles, ride in a Jordan Victoria, Brougham, Sedan or Friendly Three.

18 You'll never hear of a broken spring in a Great Jordan Line Eight. Factory records show that not a single one has ever been replaced. That's because they're all chrome vanadium steel properly designed.

19 I'd buy The Great Line Eight because I'd enjoy economy of operation over a long period of time and second hand value when I trade it in.

20 Second hand value—that's the thing—that's service—that's saving dollars—that's the main point in an automobile.

These are the reasons why people are buying Jordan cars.

It's the most satisfactory eight in its field.

It's the best looking car we know.

It will run and run and run at low cost.

And think how much more it will be worth a year from now than any ordinary car.

P. S.—Remember that the main thought in the mind of every buyer today is this—What will I get for the car I'm going to buy when I bring it to the second hand market—as I eventually will?

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Seven hundred and thirteen riders, representing the cream of Chicago's amateur talent, together with many out of town stars, will struggle for honors in THE TRIBUNE'S fourth annual bicycle derby to be held in Humboldt park, starting at 9 o'clock this morning. Start and finish of all races will be from Kosciuszko monument, located in the park on Humboldt boulevard, just south of North avenue.

This entry is by far the largest ever received for a similar event held in this country, according to Julian T. Fitzgerald, western representative of the Amateur Bicycle League of America who has been identified with the bicycle sport for the last twenty-five years. Among the entrants are some who are either state or city champions or former title holders. Others have been members of American Olympic teams.

In its promotional endeavors, THE TRIBUNE has always tried to encourage the younger boys and girls to take part in its events. The policy has been to encourage and foster amateur athletics and to do as much as it can for the boys and girls with athletic possibilities. The athletes who have "arrived"—those who have shown enough ability to win prizes—are taken care of by the athletic clubs which generally secure the necessary competition.

160 Enter Novice Event.

Outside of the playground system, little is done to encourage the growing boys and girls to indulge in healthy, outdoor exercise. That THE TRIBUNE is accomplishing its purpose is shown by the entry in the novice and boys' races. The novice event, open only to those who have never won a first place in any sanctioned bicycle race, has attracted an entry of 160 for today's event while 75 boys will take part in the race staged for youngsters under 16 years of age. Twenty girls will face the starter in their event.

In order to bring about keener competition, THE TRIBUNE has donated a handsome trophy which will become the permanent property of the club whose representatives score the greatest number of points in the seven races. In the 22 mile handicap, twelve places will count and five in each of the others.

12 Points to Winner.

First place in the handicap will be rewarded with 12 points, second place with 11, and so on down until the rider who finishes in twelfth position will receive 1 point. In the other races five points will count for first place, four for second, three for third, two for fourth, and one for fifth. The trophy will be given to the winning team immediately after the Derby.

Following its usual custom, THE TRIBUNE will give winners of places merchandise certificates on a loop department store instead of the usual medals or other trophies. In the 22 mile handicap the victor will be given a $50 certificate. Second place winner will be rewarded with a $40 check, and so on down until the twelfth rider will be given a $5 certificate.

Other Valuable Awards.

First time prize winner will be given a $50 check, second place, $40; third, $35, and so on until the rider who makes the eighth fastest time will be given a $10 check. In the class A, B, and C races the winner will be given a $25 check; second place, $20; third, $15; fourth, $10, and fifth, $5. In the novice boys and girls' races the victor will be rewarded with a $20 certificate; second place, $15; third, $10; fourth, $5, and fifth, $3. These prizes will be given the winners immediately after each race, while those in the 22 mile handicap will be awarded as soon as the officials determine the correct place and time winners.

The West Chicago parks commissioners, of which John Dill Robertson is president and James J. McComb secretary, have coöperated splendidly with THE TRIBUNE in making this event possible. Capt. William Stocker of the west parks police will send a detail of police in charge of Lieut. Roger [illegible] to protect riders and spectators, while a corps of local sportsmen have volunteered their services to act as officials.

Carl Stockholm, Ernest Kockler, [illegible] Walsh, and other well known professional riders received their start in races such as those to be held today, and in a few years some of the riders in today's races will be cham-

THESE BOYS MADE COMPETITION KEEN IN EVANSTON RELAYS

New Trier High school tracksters got off to a flying start in the suburban high school track championships yesterday by annexing the most points in the relay carnival at Evanston. The above picture shows Arnold of New Trier breaking the tape inches ahead of Clayson of Evanston in the 440 yard relay for class A schools.

La Grange and University High staged a great duel for first honors in the class B division, the former winning by the slim margin of four points. Coltor of University High is shown nosing out the La Grange anchor man in the finish of the 440 yard event.

LADY ASTOR ADVISES FRIENDS NOT TO BET ON HUSBAND'S COLT

LONDON, May 23.—(AP)—Lady Astor, whose husband's horse, Cross Bow, is one of the favorites for the classic derby next week, has been giving some of her parliamentary constituents in Plymouth the advice not to bet on that or any other race.

"I never bet and I advise you not to bet," she is quoted as saying. "If people knew as much about horses as I do, they would never risk their money on them. A horse may win the Derby today and be hopeless tomorrow.

"Horses are the most unreliable creatures on earth. The trainers never put money on them. There is both chance and mischance in the best race ever run and nobody can predict the result.

Hurdle Mark Tied as Ohio Nips Maroons

Columbus, O., May 23.—[Special.]—Chicago and Ohio State track teams lived up to pre-contest predictions in a dual western conference cinder meet here this afternoon and the Maroons lost by a margin of 92 to 43. The visiting delegation took firsts in five of the fifteen events, but the Buckeyes were too well balanced to make the meet results close.

The Maroons were blanked in the hammer throw, high hurdles, and low hurdles. No Chicago entry ran in either hurdles event because McKinney, Maroon star, sprang a charley horse in the 100 yard dash earlier in the afternoon. McKinley led the field by a step in the century for the first seventy or seventy-five yards, but suddenly the charley horse forced him to drop out of the race and limp to the side lines. His injury was not serious.

Snyder Ties Hurdle Mark.

The most notable feat of the afternoon was turned in by Capt. Jerry Snyder of Ohio State, who ran the high hurdles in :14 3-5, tying the Western conference record set by Simpson of Missouri in 1916. It was the best time any hurdler has turned in in this country for a number of years.

Edward T. Cook, referee, announced that none of this afternoon's marks would be allowed to stand, however, because of the stiff wind, at times reaching almost the proportions of a gale, that swept the track continually from the southwest.

Russell Wins High Jump.

Russell of Chicago bested the local varsity high jump mark with a leap of 6 feet 3 inches and Spence of the visitors tied the local record of :49 4-5 in the 440. Guthrie in the broad jump and Snyder in the high hurdles were the Ohio men to break local varsity records and Irwin of the Buckeyes tied the century mark of :09 4-5.

One of the prettiest spectacles of the meet was the two mile run, won by Bourke of Chicago. Bourke trailed Kennedy, Ohio State's ace, by half a step, all the way until the runners reached the home stretch. In the sprint for the tape Bourke spurted into the lead, gradually left his opponent behind and finally won the race by a good fifty feet. Summaries:

100 YARD DASH—Won by Irwin [O.]; Stackhouse [C.], second; Ruszkowski [O.], third. Time, :09 4-5.

220 YARD DASH—Won by Irwin [O.]; Kernwein [C.], second; Ruszkowski [O.], third. Time, :21 5-10.

440 YARD DASH—Won by Spence [C.]; Ruszkowski [O.], second; Wald [O.], third. Time, :49 4-5.

HALF MILE RUN — Won by Hornstein [O.]; Ross [O.], second; Cusack [C.], third. Time, 1:58 4-10.

MILE RUN—Won by Cusack [C.]; Arnold [O.], second; Gammie [O.], third. Time, 4:27.

TWO MILE RUN—Won by Bourke [C.]; Kennedy [O.], second; Kingsbury [O.], third. Time, 9:42 9-10.

120 YARD HIGH HURDLES—Won by Snyder [O.]; Guthrie [O.], second; Van Dergriff [O.], third. Time, :14 6-10.

220 YARD LOW HURDLES—Won by Guthrie [O.]; Snyder [O.], second; Kernwein [C.], third. Time, :24 1-10.

BROAD JUMP—Won by Guthrie [O.]; Snyder [O.], second; Harvey [C.], third. Distance, 23 feet 5½ inches.

HIGH JUMP—Won by Russell [C.]; Burg [C.], second; Snyder [O.] and Guthrie [O.], tied for third. Height, 6 feet 3 inches.

POLE VAULT — Won by Cramer [O.]; Webster [C.], second; Cole [O.] and Frans [O.], tied for third. Height, 11 feet 6 inches.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

BICYCLES.

IN these days, when nearly every one owns an automobile, a car, or a flivver, many persons think of bicycling as something which has passed except for children.

Controverting any such view is the record breaking list of more than 700 entries for THE TRIBUNE'S fourth annual bicycle derby at Humboldt park this morning. This is the largest list ever received in this country for any similar event, according to Bicycle league officials.

Significant is the fact that 161 names were received for the novice event. Eligible riders have never taken a first place in any sanctioned bicycle race. So they are not old-timers, but comparative newcomers to the sport.

When the so-called "boom" collapsed, manufacture of bicycles simmered down to survival of the fittest. Present makers are few in number compared to the old days, but according to their own figures, these few build and sell MORE bicycles now than when cycling was such a prominent sport that every metropolitan newspaper had its cycling editor just as now it has its motor editor.

Yes, and bicycles sell for about one-fourth the price obtained when the first high grade "safeties" appeared on the scene to supplant the high wheeled "ordinary." If you don't think cycling is still a sport, visit Humboldt park this morning.

Is This the End?

Is this, then, the end of a friendship that grew
To blossom for me and wither for you?
Does your heart respond to thoughts of my name,
Or must I alone be seared by the flame
Of longing I have not the tongue to express,
Whose depth and whose pain no mortal can guess?
It is not enough to call you a friend,
So, may we go on, or is this the end?

Are you of the type to toy with a heart,
To take all it has and then tear it apart,
Or was it the flame that I saw in your eye
Which, kindled, may smolder but never can die?
The years hold no solace for those who have known
The urge, which, neglected, will turn them to stone.
Can you from your distance some comfort extend
To one who so needs you, or is this the end?

CHICAGO GIRL BREAKS WORLD 220 YARD RECORD

In the tryouts yesterday at Stagg field to determine who would run in the 880 yard girls' relay race at Grant Park stadium Sunday, May 31, at the Finnish-American games, Miss Norma Zilk ran the 220 yard dash in 27 2-5, breaking the world's record held by an English girl by 3-5 of a second.

Trainer Tom Eck picked the following as his relay team for the Grant Park race: Norma Zilk, Nellie Todd, Katherine Lee, Mildred Horrocks, Dorothy Smith and the Sheffield twins.

BABE STARTS FOR DRIVE, BUT ENDS HITTING 'HOMERS'

New York, May 23. — [Special.] — Babe Ruth could not resist the lure of the diamond today so instead of confining his activities to motoring as he had intended, he went through his usual workout at the Yankee stadium. The recuperating Babe found his batting eye in very good condition and he hit several long flies to the far corners of the field. Ruth worked out for only a half hour, hitting, throwing, and then jogging around the track.

New Trier and La Grange High school tracksters hopped off to a good lead in the suburban championships yesterday by piling up the most points in their respective divisions in the first annual relay carnival conducted by the Suburban league on Evanston oval.

The relay events formed the first leg of the championship competition. The field events will be run off at Oak Park on Monday, and the tourney will wind up with the track events at Evanston Saturday afternoon. The team scoring the most points in the three meets will be granted the title.

New Trier Finishes Strong.

The New Trier cinder squad annexed premier honors in the class A division by a slender margin after a battle with the Evanston preps. After trailing Evanston throughout most of the meet, the north shore boys stepped out in the final two events to gain a 19 to 13 lead. Oak Park was third with 12 markers. The remainder of the field trailed far in arrears.

The junior division for class A schools saw another bitter struggle between the neighboring north shore schools, Evanston gaining a one point margin, 11 to 10.

La Grange Class B Winner.

In winning the class B events La Grange was forced to the limit by University High. The final count gave La Grange 18 points and University High 14. The latter gained a measure of consolation from the meet, however, as her junior speedsters piled up a substantial lead in their division. Summaries:

NEW DEMPSEY NOSE BLOODIED IN BOUT ON LINER; 2,000 SEE IT

NEW YORK, May 23.—(AP)—When the liner Berengaria docked today from Southampton, it became known that Jack Dempsey had boxed three rounds during the vessel's eastward voyage with Kent, the butcher's mate, and had the claret tapped from his new nose in the presence of 2,000 passengers and crew.

Kent, former amateur champion heavyweight boxer of the British army and navy, is now 45 years old. The pair sparred for three four minute rounds, Marquis of Queensberry rules, chaperoned by referee and timekeeper.

The sight of blood trickling down Dempsey's chin caused such excitement in the audience that one woman fell of a hatch and broke a leg and another went clean through one of the canvas boat covers.

Dempsey did not try to knock his opponent about, it was said, and let him do all the fighting.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Boston has the best first inning ball club in the business. They proved it last Friday and they proved it again yesterday. One day they knocked our big ace, Red Faber, out of the game in the first and yesterday they did the same thing to one of our other aces, Hollis Thurston. They scored five runs off Hollis in the first and four more off Leo Mangum in the second, making a total of nine runs, and they won the third game of the series by a score of 9 to 2.

It did Chicago fans no good because Little Mike Cvengros then came into the fray and shut out the bean team for the balance of the game with two hits. Those nine runs were far more than were needed to win. Old Jack Quinn, about whom there is a discussion as to age, was on the rubber for the Boston boys and the Sox never could get to him sufficiently to wreck his game, though in the first and second they were in a position where another solid blow would have put them right back in the ball game.

Everything Red Sox Do Is Right.

No one knows exactly what happened to Faber on Friday or what happened to Thurston yesterday. Both of them looked swell, but almost everything they handed up to the batter was knocked to helangon. The Sox tried to use their ingenuity and cunning and everything else they had, but they always guessed wrong. They pulled the infielders in close and a pop fly went for a base hit and another easy smash went through for a hit. The Boston boys were up there taking a toe hold and slugging and anything they did was right. After the second inning they were just a clumsy tail end team.

It seemed entirely out of order that the visitors should have mauled Thurston as they did. The first Boston man to face him died on a tap to Thurston himself and the next five went up there and soaked the ball. Wamby singled, so did Boone and so did Flagstead, and then Todt and Prothro each doubled. That was more than even an ace could stand and he was dismissed and Leo Mangum summoned from the bull pen. Four runs were in and a man was on second with only one out. Before Mangum could get the side out nine men all told had been to bat and five of them had scored.

Sox Get Two in First.

The Sox then made their best bid for the battle in their half of the first, when they scored their two tallies. After two were out, Boss Collins sloughed a double to left and Sheely walked. Collins came home on Falk's single and Sheely scored when Hooper poled a safe blow. Kamm walked, filling the bases, and only another smacker was needed to put the south siders back in the fight, but in this crisis Crouse died on a tap to Old Man Quinn.

Even then they might have made a fight of it, but in the second, the Red Sox staged another stampede, nine men going to bat before the side was retired and four of them getting home. Williams singled and Wamby walked. Both advanced on Boone's out and both scored on Flagstead's single. It was just a bounder through the Chicago infield, which was drawn in close. Then Todt slouged a double which Hooper barely got one hand on out by the right field fence and so with runners on second and third and still only one out the Sox infield closed in to kill somebody at the plate.

Pop Goes for Hit.

This was where Prothro chose to pop a short fly out behind second base and no one could get to it. One man scored on it and another came in a moment later when Boston put on the hit and run play and the batter scraped a single through the place vacated by Collins.

That was where Mangum walked to the shower bath and Cvengros came into the combat. Little Mike stopped 'em. Stopped 'em cold but whatahell was the use. The ball game had gone blooie.

TRAINING STUNTS OF MUNN, LEWIS DIFFER WIDELY

Michigan City, Ind., May 23.—[Special.]—The training stunts of Ed "Strangler" Lewis, heavyweight wrestling champion of the world, and Wayne "Big" Munn, his challenger, who will meet here next Saturday in a title match, are as unlike as two peas.

Munn, the giant of the American mat gang, continues to be a boy and plays at boys' games, while Lewis, more serious, perhaps on account of his age, continues the same old grind to get in condition.

The challenger has as a trainer one of the most versatile wrestlers in the game—Lou Talaber, former middleweight champion, and he believes that "too much work and no play is bad for the nerves," and Munn, boylike, agrees with him. Talaber is interspersing the daily labor with a lot of peppy kid games and finds that as a result of this program Munn is enjoying the terrific ordeal of preparation in a happy frame of mind and nearing the highest point of physical perfection.

Plays Tag and Leap Frog.

Leap frog, old fashioned tag, follow the leader, shinny on your own side, and other boyish antics are prescribed by Talaber, and the big fellow gets a real kick out of it. At the same time the wily trainer gets trebel the work out of the giant challenger than he would by adhering strictly to the tedious regulation grind. Fans who happen to be fortunate enough to catch the camp crowd at play vote the novel sight a scream, especially during a hot leap frog game, when the elephantine Munn hurdles over his fellows and in the process literally crushes them into the sand. Follow the leader also is one of the amusing stunts, for Wayne as the leader performs feats altogether impossible for his pigmy followers.

The outstanding feature of all this fuss and bustle, has for its main end the development of perfect physical condition and the result is practically assured, for right now Munn appears to be in better form than he ever was and only an accident can set him back.

Champion Likes Autoing.

The champion, on the other hand, who is a much elder hand at the training game, does not require a great deal of diversion to take his mind off the continuous grind. Just the ordinary rest periods between training hours are sufficient for him. He delights in long auto rides and when indoors passes the time with card games and dancing, a phonograph furnishing the music. Mrs. Lewis and occasional visitors lighten the deadness of the training camp.

The champion retires between 9:30 and 10 o'clock, a rule laid down by Manager Billy Sandow. Ed adheres to it religiously.

Lewis perhaps in his whole career never was in better shape at this stage in the training grind, and Sandow declares that the fans will be surprised at the appearance of the champion when he climbs through the ropes on Memorial day.

Back from Week-End Trip.

Both camps arrived from Chicago tonight where they opened the eyes of the fans in the metropolis during their week-end engagements. The order of work from this time on will be a general tapering off in the arduous labor, both as to mauling their big mates and in the road grind.

The plan is to slow the work up until Thursday, when both champion and challenger will take their final fling until they take actual holds for the supreme test at 4 o'clock, central standard time, the preliminaries scheduled to start two hours earlier.

Mat fans who drive their cars will find the way to Michigan City plainly blazed for them. Follow Illinois highway 42, marked from Jackson and Michigan through South Chicago. Turn left one block on Indianapolis avenue from Ewing avenue, then right to 106th street, and left again to Indianapolis, following the Dunes highway markings through Gary to Michigan City and straight to the arena.

TRAINING FOR TITLE MAT BOUT

BID FOR BEST COLTS FOR CHICAGO DERBY

BY FRENCH LANE.

Because entries closed for the $50,000 Belmont stake in New York and the Latonia Derby in Kentucky many weeks ago, with some of the leading candidates for the three year old championship missing from the list of eligibles, every effort is to be made by the Chicago Business Man's Racing association to make the Chicago Derby at Hawthorne July 11 one of the most important three year old races of the year.

Joseph A. Murphy will divide his time during the final week before entries close for the Chicago race, on June 6, between Belmont park in New York and the Latonia track, it was announced last night. He will try to bring the leaders of the division, both east and west, to Chicago for the $20,000 event, which will feature the summer season here.

Officials of the Chicago turf body, including the legislative committee, composed of Herbert G. Shimp, Charles Krutchkoff, and Albert Sabath, will meet here today, when final plans for the Hawthorne meeting will be sketched. General Manager Clifford R. Trimble and his associates in the Exposition Park Jockey club at Aurora will also be here for a joint session with the Hawthorne people late in the afternoon.

While the gates at Hawthorne will be thrown open to horsemen June 1, there is a steady stream of thoroughbreds pulling in daily at Aurora. A request for stable reservations for 23 horses was received last night by the Aurora management from L. C. Cooper, wealthy Miami turfman. He owns one of the most formidable strings in the west, and his coming to Aurora might indicate the horses to race at the Fox river track this spring will compare favorably with the fields at other western racing centers.

The W. S. Heaton string, which includes Highwater, Miss Meise, Dustabout, and other good ones, and the Bonadventure stable, including the good sprinter Meddling Mattie, are to arrive at the Aurora track tomorrow. They will be shipped from Maple Heights today.

Most of the stables at Hawthorne are to be reserved for horses coming from New York, Maryland, and Kentucky, and for this reason horsemen racing at Aurora have been warned to make separate reservations at the Chicago track if they are to be sure of room there when the meeting opens July 2.

The International stable of Chicago has released Jockey L. Neal from first call and has taken first call on Jockey A. Mortenson, promising apprentice lad from Idaho, with an option of buying his contract later in the summer.

Almadel flashed across the wire in second place, while Kentucky Cardinal was third.

WOMAN TO TELL IKE WALTONS OF RAPIDS CANOEING

Chicago Waltonians will hold their last dinner and meeting of the spring season next Tuesday night at the Morrison hotel, according to announcement yesterday by Thomas Ambrose, secretary of the local Izaak Walton league chapter. Dr. Cora Johnston Best, the widely known mountain climber and the only woman who has ever gone through the dangerous rapids of the upper Kootenay and Columbia rivers by canoe, will speak at this meeting and show several thousand feet of motion pictures on "Hell Roarin' Rivers." Several local anglers, including George E. Scott and James O. Heyworth, will also address the meeting.

LA SALLE NINE WINS.

The La Salle Extension university baseball team yesterday trounced Kellogg Switchboard nine, 14 to 8, at Washington park. Bell's hitting and the fielding of McDonald were the bright lights of the battle.

INTEREST GROWS IN ROSENBERG'S AURORA BATTLE

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Following his sensational fight with Harold Smith of the stock yards, at East Chicago last Friday night, Charley "Phil" Rosenberg, the world's bantamweight champion, will resume training tomorrow at Mullen's gymnasium for his ten round bout with Herbie Schaeffer of the south side, at Aurora on Friday night.

Local fight fans who saw Rosenberg come from behind to earn a draw with Smith, claim he is a real champion, one who should hold the title for quite a spell. The title holder was unable to solve Harold's rope bouncing tactics in the early sessions, but in the last four rounds, Harold was unable to land a telling blow.

Champion Makes Friends.

Rosenberg made such an impression with the local fistic fraternity that there was quite a demand for tickets yesterday for the Aurora show. Charley's gentlemanly tactics in the ring, together with his general appearance, have won him many friends in Chicago.

The champion, however, has a wholesome respect for Schaeffer who is bound to fight him all the way. Herbie is not the flashy boxer of the Smith type, but he will be boring in all the way and will make Rosenerg fight to protect himself. Herbie has been training for two weeks at the Arcade end is rapidly rounding into shape, according to Manager "Babe" Mullaney.

K. O. Phil Kaplan of New York, and Frankie Welch of Cicero, will be the principals in the other half of the main bout. Kaplan is working every day at Mullen's and Welch at the Arcade. In the east, Kaplan is considered a keen contender for the welterweight title held by Mickey Walker.

Ex Grid Star vs. Wild Bill.

A bout which is creating a lot of interest in and around Aurora will bring together Frank "Duke" Hanny, the former Indiana university football captain, and "Wild Bill" O'Connell of Gary, Ind. It will be Hanny's first professional fight and his friends and many of the townspeople of Aurora will be present. Hanny was a popular football player and his debut will attract many ex collegians to the arena.

Talent from nearby towns will complete the card and Promoter Mullen believes the attractive bouts will fill the little pine bowl. Tickets were placed on sale yesterday at the usual places and special trains wil be run over the Aurora and Elgin electric.

Harold Smith, the stock yards bantam, and Trainer Art Winch, leave today for New York, where Smith will meet Frankie Genaro, the American flyweight champion, on June 5. It will be a ten round decision contest to be held before the Dexter Park A. C. of Coney Island. Smith was around the Mullen gymnasium yesterday and aside from swollen lips showed no effects of his encounter with Rosenberg last Friday night.

World's Welterweight Champion Mickey Walker and Manager Jack Kearns will arrive in Chicago this morning from the coast. Mickey is on his way to New York, where he will meet Harry Greb for the world's middleweight championship on June 19. Teddy Hayes, former secretary to Jack Dempsey, is also in the party.

HERE'S A BANTAM WHO WOULD MUSS FEATHERS OF OTHER RING BIRDS

EDDIE COULON.

INTO this sanctum the other day stepped a young battler who wants a chance again to show what he can do in nearby rings. It was Eddie Coulon, New Orleans bantam, who was seen around these diggings a couple of summers ago and did some pleasing work. He's back in harness again and allows as how he can stop a bit of the bragging of some of the boys of his weight if given the opportunity. He says the boys don't care for his stuff, and asked why. No one could tell him.

Eddie claims he has victories over Harold Smith, Pal Moore, and Eddie Anderson among the local contingent of maulers, and says he has boxed some of the best bantams in the country without any disgrace being tacked on his record. Eddie has been in town training for the last three weeks, but doesn't seem to be able to get a tumble from promoters or managers of other boys of his class cavorting hereabouts. He wants to box some good bantam at either East Chicago or Aurora during the summer, and is willing to go almost any limit if the boys will listen. He can be reached any day at Mullen's gym.

BRICKLAYERS AND SPARTAS IN SOCCER CUP TILT

Bricklayers and Sparta, semi-finalists in the Peel cup soccer play, will meet at De Paul field this afternoon in the outstanding game of the day. Their last contest terminated in a riot early in the second half. Police will be on hand today to prevent any disturbance.

Both teams will present the same lineups as in their last meeting. John B. Stark of Detroit will referee the match and J. W. Wood and H. E. Hames will act as linesmen.

Interest in the major league schedule centers mainly in the clash between the Canadian club and Harvey. Both teams are contenders for the title. Today's games:

Peel Cup Competition — Bricklayers and Sparta, at De Paul field, Sheffield and Webster avenue.

Major league—Canadian club, at Harvey; Thistles and Swedish-Americans, at Riverview park; Chicago Rovers and North Shores, at Evanston.

International league—Chicago Motor Coach and Wacker F. C., at Winnemac park; Sture 2d and Swedish 4th, at 51st and Potomac avenues; Drott A. C. and Danish 2d, at 76th street and Ingleside avenue.

District league—British Legion and Ulster United, at 35th and Rockwell streets.

DEMPSEY'S NOSE O. K. FOR BATTLE, SURGEON SAYS

San Francisco, Cal., May 23.—Coming to the defense of Jack Dempsey's remade nose, Dr. W. E. Balsinger of Chicago, who performed the operation on the world champion, upon his arrival here today severely criticized Dr. George Warren Pierce of San Francisco, who recently told the state homeopathic convention that the repairing of Dempsey's nose was the knockout blow to his career in the ring.

"Dr. Pierce doesn't know what he is talking about," Dr. Balsinger said. "In fact, I cut the cartilage from behind Jack's ear—a piece about an inch and three-quarters long and a half inch wide—and used it to reshape and reinforce his nose. Not only did this strengthen the nose, but it also repaired it in such a manner as to improve his breathing.

"Don't let any one fool you that Dempsey's new nose will keep him from fighting. When he does go into the ring again his nose won't be a weak spot."

Germany smoking old tow lines off of Ships, Sawdust, Cabbage leaves, Horse Blankets, and second hand Gun Powder couldn't make the grade. But when Americans arrived with no equipment and no training, but plenty "Bull" Durham, and Nerve to burn it with, in Two weeks the French were trading Legion of Honor Medals for a sack of "Bull."
One sack was worth two quarts of Iron Crosses. Englishmen have even been known to sacrifice their afternoon tea for a puff of "Bull" Durham. Even after the war an American Private, occupying the Ruhr, went into a German Restaurant and asked for a glass of Milk. He couldn't make the Waiter understand so he drew the picture of a Cow, and a Milk Pail. The Waiter immediately returned with a Bucket of Beer and a Sack of "Bull" Durham Tobacco. That Private was a better Artist than he thought he was.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 23.—[Special.]—A lead of four runs in the ninth wasn't enough to save Bill Killefer and his Cubs from defeat today. Going into the final stand a Bruin victory seemed a certainty and a cinch, but "Sheriff" Blake suddenly blew up, Vic Keen couldn't fill in as a rescuer and five Robins soared over the plate to put a disastrous finish to Chicago's disastrous eastern invasion. The score was 6 to 5, making the twelfth defeat of the trip.

Until that weird windup when Blake was unexpectedly shorn of his cunning and control the Cubs seemingly had the battle to themselves. Inspired by "Gabby" Hartnett's thirteenth home run that started the scoring in the second inning they bore down with their bats, piled up a neat lead forced Jess "Lefty" Petty into retirement and fielded in a manner befitting champions. But apparently they were only kidding the Robins.

Blake Starts Strong.

In the first eight frames Blake, with steady support, had pitched himself out of one treacherous hole after another, but the final attack proved different. It started with a single by Johnston. Wheat walked and old Jack Fournier doubled for his fourth hit, Johnston scoring and Wheat hiking to third. Brown grounded out to Blake and Hartnett followed with an attempt to catch Fournier napping at second, but the throw went wild, so Wheat ran in from third.

Next was a pass to Loftus, and that was all for Blake. Keen stepped into the breach and Stock walloped a single to right that sent Fournier over the plate and put Loftus on third. Then De Berry singled and Loftus scored the tying run. Cox batted for the pitcher and drew a pass to fill the sacks, whereupon Keen pitched four straight balls to Hargraves another pinch batter, and forced Stock to cross the rubber with the winning run.

Hartnett Hits Homer.

Mr. Hartnett's thirteenth homer of the current season was a prodigious sock that eluded old man Wheat in the second inning. "Gabby" was lead-off batter in that chapter and he slapped the ball in a lofty arch toward left center. Wheat was playing with his back against the barrier, but was too close to the foul line, so while he was galloping across the field the ball came down and bounced over the low fence in front of the bleachers.

Another outbreak added two runs to the Cubs' total in the third and was put under way by McAuley with a single to left. Blake flied out and Adams forced McAuley, but the Bruins still had a couple of sound whacks in their systems. Heathcote sent a single to center and Statz hit down the left field line for three bases, Adams and Heathcote crossing the counting station. Hartnett ended the inning with a gentle grounder to short.

Blake Checks Robins.

During the first four innings the Robins had plenty of openings to score, but Blake was able to suppress them in the pinches. In the fifth, however, they managed to uncork three singles in a row and a lone tally resulted. Wheat started it after two were out and made the circuit on successive blows by Fournier and Brown. Nothing further happened because Loftus grounded into a force-out at second.

With the coming of the sixth the Cubs again cut loose and forced Petty to beat it, two runs scoring. Statz pried open the attack with a one base knock and hiked to third on a double that Hartnett lined over third. Griffith then rubbed it in on his former mates by singling to right and letting Statz and Hartnett sneak home. Oeschger pitched the remainder of the inning and although Michaels singled no more counted.

Hubbell appeared on the knob in the seventh and the Cubs might have dusted him off for at least one run if Adams hadn't become a bit careless on the bases. He led off with a hit and Heathcote sacrificed. Then Adams was caught between second and third and Statz followed with a double. Hartnett also drove one along way, but Loftus ran back and picked it off the left field wall to conclude the inning.

O'Farrell to Cards, Cubs Get Gonzales and Freigau

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 23.—[Special.]—Two Cub athletes were shifted to other pay rolls today, two other men were taken on, and a third fellow, now under Bill Killefer's wing, may be shipped inside another twenty-four hours.

The new men were acquired in a deal with the St. Louis Cardinals which to date, are even worse* off than the Bruins in the percentage column. To get these two fellows President William Veeck announced that he had been forced to part with Bob O'Farrell, one of the best backstops in the major leagues, but who has been of little use to the Chicago club because of the advent of Charley Hartnett into the realm of stars.

Get Gonzales and Freigau.

In exchange for O'Farrell, the Cubs received Infielder Howard Freigau and Catcher Mike Gonzales, the latter being a man of wide experience, will fit in ideally as understudy to Hartnett, so the Cubs haven't weakened their catching department and on the other hand have landed an infielder of promise. Freigau, a good fielder and a fair hitter, is only 23 years old. He can play second, third or shortstop, but whether he will be given a chance to break in regularly has not been decided by Pilot Killefer.

Although O'Farrell was one of the veteran Cubs, he accepted the news of his transfer with a smile. He realized that he would continue in a second string rôle so long as Hartnett continued to shine, whereas he'll become a regular with the Cards.

O'Farrell Cub Veteran.

O'Farrell came to the Cubs the first time in 1915, having starred on the Waukegan high school team. The Cubs sent him to Peoria, Ill., for seasoning and he returned in the fall of 1917. He has been a Cub since that time. He will join the Cards here tomorrow and the two ex-Cards will report to Killefer at Cincinnati.

The other Cub to be given new employment was Bob Barrett, who has been utility infielder for two seasons. He appeared here today in a Brooklyn uniform, having been transferred in payment for Outfielder Tom Griffith.

The swap that seems probable within the next day or two involves Hack Miller. It is rumored that the strong man will be returned to the Oakland, Cal., club, whence he came four years ago.

DOLLY GRAY'S MONEES PLAY NIESENS TODAY

Dolly Gray, one of the best pitchers in local semi-pro circles last year, will return to the city garbed in a Monee, Ill., uniform instead of wearing the togs of Billy Niesen. Dolly and his scrappy out of town nine is slated to face the Niesens this afternoon at Niesen park, where a southpaw pitching duel is on tap. Manager Billy Niesen plans to use his ace, Lefty Sullivan, against the visitors.

Bill Pertica, formerly a pitcher for the St. Louis Cardinals, may be the mound choice of Manager Hallas this afternoon when the Logan Squares and Romeos hook up at the Squares' new diamond. The Romeo hurling job will fall to F. Schultz or Zellers.

Numerous other semi-pro games are carded today. The hard hitting Grizzards will invade Elgin, Chicago Rail-Lights play at Cermak park, and the Normals will be hosts to the Fuqua Giants. Other games today:

HOMERS AID REDS NOSE OUT PHILS BY 9 TO 7 MARGIN

Philadelphia, Pa., May 23.—[Special.]—Uncorking a home run attack, the Cincinnati Reds disappointed 15,000 fans by nosing out the Phils for the second straight time, 9 to 7.

The game was a thriller all the way. To add to the excitement of the afternoon, the rivalry existing between the two teams broke out in the fourth inning, and a near-fight was the result. Jim Ring, the Phils' pitcher, and Douglass, substitute catcher of the visitors, were the belligerents. Although no blows landed of the few tried, both athletes were removed from the mêlée, and a short period of trouble loomed. Score:

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

Every Day He asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question, Ray Koopman, 2169 Vilas place, was awarded $5.

The Question.

To what do you attribute Philadelphia's phenomenal showing in the American league?

Where Asked.

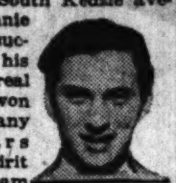
Randolph at State street.

The Answers.

Otto Kristufek, 2316 South Elmwood avenue, Berwyn, Ill., musician — The fact that Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics are burning up the league is probably due to his fine pitching staff. Such hurling as is turned in by Gray, Rommell, and Graves is one big reason for his showing so far this season. The fielding and hitting are up to standard. That spells success for any team.

S. S. Bliss, 3265 Armitage avenue, student—The ability of Connie Mack to select his batting lineup, to choose his pitching staff, and to work the right plays at opportune times is the main reason for the team's success. In addition to this, the prevailing spirit of team work helps toward the team's success.

Walter Goodell, 3412 Kenilworth avenue, Berwyn, Ill., musician — It is probably due to superior team work and excellent leadership. Sometimes luck has a good bit to do with success, but Connie Mack has succeeded in buying good players who seem to be ready to dish out the right stuff.



Ben Weiser, 758 South Kedzie avenue, usher — Connie Mack again has successfully inspired his team with the real fighting spirit that won Philadelphia many championships years ago. It is this spirit that will carry his team to a high place in the American league this year. A staff of good pitchers will help Philadelphia beat the best in the league.

Albert J. Horan, 3455 West Jackson boulevard, alderman.—Philadelphia's poor showing in recent years, gives evidence that Mack didn't have the players to reach the first division. Connie Mack, an old head of baseball, has a working machine for 1925. The team, as a whole, is composed of excellent material, Mack having spent much time in getting it together. For a time he attempted to start young players, but found it didn't pay. Now he has started out with his bank roll.

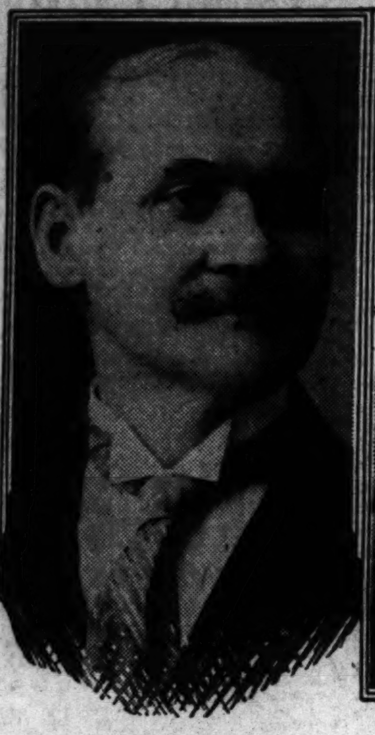
THEY HELP MAKE EVENT SUCCESS



RUDOLPH MULAC.

DR. JOHN D. ROBERTSON.
[President West Park Board.]

ARTHUR GARDINER.

JULIAN T. FITZGERALD.

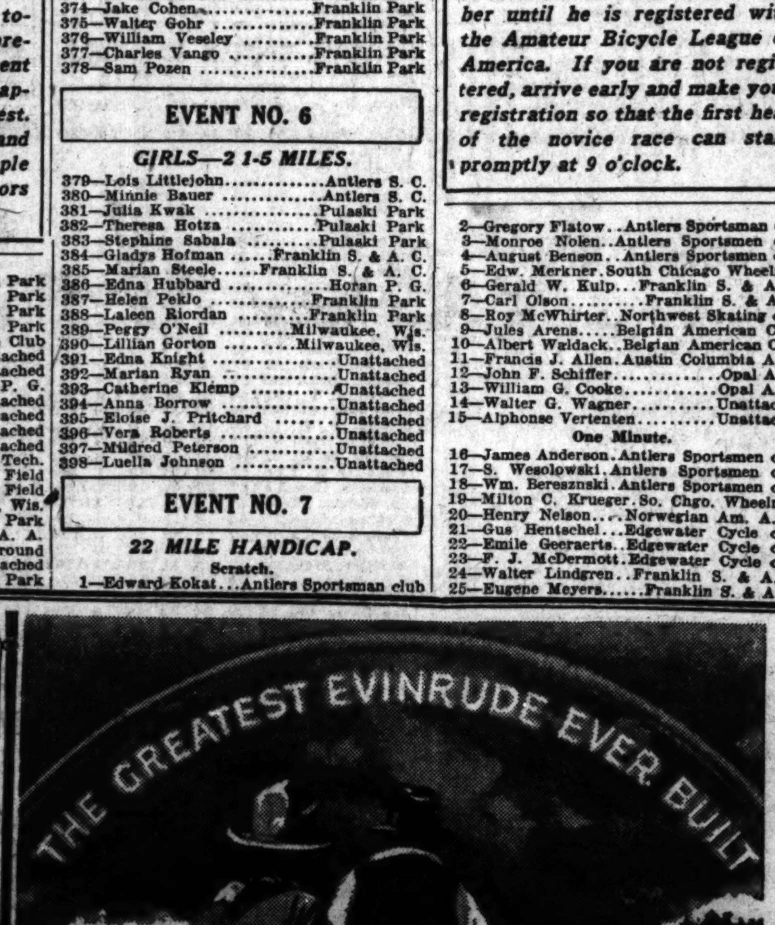
MRS. MAY HARTLEY D'MONEY
[West Park Commissioner.]

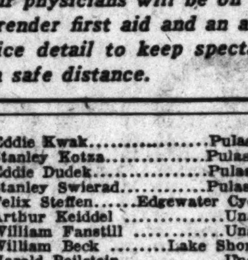
WILLIAM J. SHORT.
[Secretary of West Park Employment.]

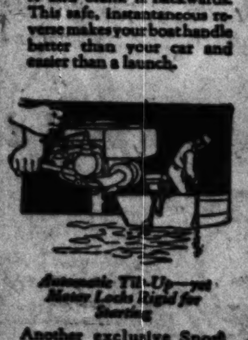
Whatever success attends The Tribune's fourth annual bicycle Derby at Humboldt park this morning will be due in a large measure to the splendid co-operation received from the west Chicago parks commissioners and the west Chicago parks police force. Several of the commissioners will serve as honorary officials. The police detail will be in charge of Lieut. Roger Shanahan.

The Tribune and the West Chicago parks commissioners do not assume any liability in case of accidents to any riders in today's Tribune races. Every precaution will be taken to prevent serious injury, which may happen in any athletic contest. Four physicians will be on hand to render first aid and an ample police detail to keep spectators at a safe distance.

All riders must call for their numbers before 8:30 o'clock. No contestant will be given his number until he is registered with the Amateur Bicycle League of America. If you are not registered, arrive early and make your registration so that the first heat of the novice race can start promptly at 9 o'clock.







EVINRUDE "Champion" Features

Automatic, Instantaneous Reverse
Exclusive Evinrude feature. Just a lift of the tiller sends your boat astern. You don't take your eyes off the course ahead—you don't swing the motor even a fraction of an inch—you don't have to stop it and crank it backwards. This safe, instantaneous reverse makes your boat handle better than your car and easier than a launch.

Automatic Tilt-Up—yet Motor Locks Rigid for Starting
Another exclusive Sport Twin feature. When the propeller strikes an obstruction, (or boat is grounded in shallows as shown above) the motor tilts automatically, snubbing the shock and preventing damage to the boat, motor or propeller. An easy, instant tiller setting locks motor rigid for starting. No wobbling—no side-sway—just a straight line pull on the Easy-Starter and away you go.

Power-Focus Drive
Evinrude is the only outboard motor using costly ball bearings in power transmission—sealed in a water-and-sand-tight housing. Power is conserved and focused at the propeller blades where power really counts.

THE greatest Evinrude ever built. Not designed for speed alone, for power alone, nor just for lightness. Created, instead, to combine perfectly these three ideals.

A revelation in eager power and smooth speed; an achievement in handy operation—quick to start, reverses instantly, easily set for slow trolling or racing speed to and from the fishing grounds. Light weight, too—yet not a single sacrifice of strength.

The key to new pleasures in Vacationland—the new 1925 Champion EVINRUDE Sport Twin. Come in, and with no obligation let us show you its ten big features.

MARKS HITS PAIR OF HOMERS TO AID MAROON VICTORY

Two home runs by Pitcher Wallie Marks were the features of a 12 to 7 victory of Chicago over Wisconsin in a Big Ten game on the Midway yesterday. The big Maroon star made 3 hits, two for the circuit, scoring and driving in six Chicago runs. By their victory the Maroons held onto a tie for second place in the conference race.

The Maroons hit Stoll of the Badgers for 15 hits and were well out in front after a slugging bee in the fourth produced 5 runs.

Capt. Ellington of the Badgers made 4 hits and Donagan connected for a homer. Four double plays saved the Maroons trouble. Score:

HOOSIERS, 13; PURPLE, 12

The Northwestern nine seems to have forgotten how to win a ball game. Yesterday the Purple rapped out sixteen hits for a total of twelve runs, but lost to Indiana, 13-12, in a wild game. Both teams played smart ball afield, but none of the six pitchers who were wheeled into action seemed to have anything on the ball.

Northwestern chased six counters over the plate in the fifth, due to a homer by Harold White with the bases loaded. With the game apparently tucked away, Mills blew higher than a kite and Indiana came right back with six in their half of the sixth, and added enough more off Schulze and Kirchoff to win. Score:

MICHIGAN, 19; ILLINOIS, 5

Urbana, Ill., May 23.—[Special.]—Michigan trampled on Illinois today in a baseball farce of free hitting, loose fielding and bonehead plays, 19 to 5.

Coach Lundgren used six pitchers in an effort to stop the slugging Wolverines. Michigan connected for 17 hits while the Illini got only four.

Illinois knocked Jablonowski out of the box in the second inning when five walks, two fielders choices and one hit accounted for four runs. Walters, who succeeded him, had good support and gave out three hits but walked eight. Score:

NEGRO DRIVERS RACE TODAY AT THORNTON TRACK

Colored speed pilots will furish Chicago auto race fans their weekly quota of thrills at Thornton speedway, 175th and Halsted streets, today in three events scheduled for the Chicago Colored Race Drivers' association's first meeting of the year.

Featuring the show will be a thirty mile race to decide the western dirt track championship. Twelve of the best known dusky pilots in the country will face the starter's flag in this event, which promises to develop into a team battle between local stars and a large field of out of town drivers.

Jeffries, Carson Entered.

"Wild Bill" Jeffries, manager of the colored drivers' association and rated as one of the best dirt track race pilots in the game; Bill Carson, national fifty-mile title holder; and Clifford Jackson will head the Chicago contingent, while Joe Lewis of Philadelphia and Edwin Hornaday of Muncie, Ind., are the stars of the out-of-towners.

Another high spot on the Thornton program this afternoon will be a special match race at five miles between Joe Lewis, the Philadelphia speed king, and Jeffries.

Consolation Event.

In the third event on the card drivers who fail to qualify for the thirty mile feature will go ten miles for a consolation prize.

The first race will start at 2:30.

ALL PENN CREWS WIN IN CHILDS CUP REGATTA

New York, May 23.—[Special.]—Pennsylvania's crews made a clean sweep of the Childs cup regatta on the Harlem today, defeating Columbia and Princeton in all three events. Pennsylvania won the varsity race, feature event, in which the Childs cup was at stake, by two lengths from Princeton, with Columbia third, six lengths further back.

The Red and Blue 150 pound eight conquered Columbia in a dual test by six lengths after the Quaker freshmen led Princeton by four lengths and Columbia by eight in the first event. The Red and Blue youngsters, getting the jump at the start, steadily increased their margin and were never threatened over the mile and a half course.

Rough water delayed the start of the freshman race, first feature of the triangular regatta, and it was not until 10:22 that the three rivals were sent away up the Harlem, between shores crowded with a colorful and cheering crowd.

SPAULDING SIGNS FOR FIVE YEARS AT COAST SCHOOL

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Los Angeles, May 23.—[Special.]—William H. Spaulding, football coach at University of Minnesota, today signed a five year contract to coach at Southern Branch, University of California, here. Spaulding will also become director of physical education. His salary will be $10,000 a year.

Spaulding may not be with the local school in the autumn. Unless Minnesota releases him from a verbal understanding to remain and coach the eleven of 1925 he will not come to California until near next Christmas.

Spaulding arrived in Los Angeles this morning. Dr. E. C. Moore, head of Southern Branch, tendered him a pen to sign his contract and the university heads gave a dinner at which they announced his acquisition.

May Send Assistant.

It is understood that if Spaulding does not come to Los Angeles this autumn he will send one or two of his Minnesota subordinate coaches to take charge. Earl Martineau probably will be the first choice. His selection has been provisionally approved.

Spaulding, who graduated from Wabash after a fine football career in 1907, and coached fourteen years at Kalamazoo (Mich.) Normal previous to going to Minnesota in 1923, will be entrusted with raising Southern Branch to a level of athletic success with University of California, Leland Stanford, and University of Southern California. In the past Southern Branch has met only smaller colleges in Southern California.

The Branch, now a university of 6,000 students, has grown in five years from a normal school with a two year course, 900 students, and an enrollment 90 per cent feminine.

Recommended Highly.

The university officials today announced that Spaulding's selection followed a five months' canvass of available coaches in the Atlantic states and middle west, and was dictated by recommendations of Walter Eckersall of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Coaches Stagg of Chicago, Rockne of Notre Dame, and Yost of Michigan, and Commissioner Griffith of the western conference.

Spaulding will leave Los Angeles for Minnesota Monday after addressing the students at his new school. He will stop at Chicago on his way back to Minnesota and will take up with President Lotus Coffman of the University of Minnesota his desire for an immediate release.

1928 OLYMPIC GAMES ASSURED FOR AMSTERDAM

AMSTERDAM, May 23.—The Dutch Olympic committee can now go to Prague for the International Olympic congress and report that funds for holding the Olympic games at Amsterdam in 1928 are guaranteed.

This is possible because the burgomaster of Amsterdam and his assistants control the majority of the municipal council and will persuade the councillors to favor their proposed 5,000,000 guilder loan [about $2,000,000], of which 500,000 guilders would be devoted to the Olympic expenses. In addition, a message from Batavia, Dutch East Indies, announces that the Olympic committee for the Dutch East Indies guarantees to subscribe 150,000 guilders, making a grand total close to the million guilder mark necessary for financing the games in 1928.

Ritola to Race Ray Hahn and Connolly in Mile at Meet Here

Willie Ritola, Finnish runner who won the 3,000 meters steeplechase and the 10,000 meters run in the Olympic games in France last summer, has agreed to meet Joie Ray of the I. A. C., Lloyd Hahn of the Boston A. A., and George Connolly of Georgetown university in the one mile run, one of the features of the track and field games to be conducted by the Chicago Finnish American A. A., in the Grant Park stadium next Sunday afternoon.

This became known upon the return of William Juuti, secretary of the local club, from New York, where he went to persuade Nurmi to live up to an agreement entered into earlier in the season to run in the local games. After Paavo had asserted he will sail for Finland the latter part of the week, Juuti secured Ritola's consent to compete against three of America's leading mile runners.

Stenroos After Record.

Another feature of these games will be the appearance of Albin Stenroos of Finland, winner of the marathon run in the world's games. Stenroos will meet Chuck Mellor and Schou Christensen of the I. A. C., in a ten mile run. In order that Stenroos may make strong efforts to lower the world's and American records for the distance, it has been decided to hold the race over the oval in the stadium.

This has been done upon Stenroos' request. The Finn is confident he can shatter both marks.

Johnny Myyra of Finland, the Olympic javelin throwing champion, who recently broke the American record in the event by throwing the shaft 212 feet, 1½ inches will attempt to better this mark. The Finn will be here Thursday to prepare for the event in Grant park.

Osborn, Plant to Compete.

Harold Osborn of the I. A. C., holder of the world's indoor and outdoor records in the running high jump, will take part in his specialty, while Willie Plant America's premier heel and toe walker, will meet any walkers selected over any distance to be determined later. Armas Taipale will give an exhibition of throwing the discus with either hand.

Aside from the appearance of these well known stars, there will be several open events, together with contests for high school and girl athletes. The open events have attracted entries from the University of Wisconsin, Marquette, Loyola, De Paul, I. A. C., and several other athletic clubs. The girls' contests have attracted the largest entry of any meet held in Chicago in years.

The entries closed yesterday at midnight and the complete entry will be announced in a few days. Tickets for the games are on sale at Spaldings.

Galesburg, Ill., May 23.—[Secial.]—Nine records were shattered this afternoon as Bradley won the annual Illinois Intercollegiate Athletic association [little 19] track and field championship with a total of 43 points. Knox was second with 41, Illinois college third with 13½; Monmouth, fourth with 13⅛ and Northwestern fifth with 10⅝. Knox and Bradley ran neck and neck during the meet, the final relay points putting the Peoria school two in the lead.

Govert of Illinois college is the new golf champion of the Little 19 conference as a result of his card of 162 for the 36 holes medal play in the conference tournament on the municipal links. I. A. C. ATHLETES TO COMPETE IN DANISH GAMES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, May 23.—The Sparta club, a Danish athletic organization, has arranged an international meetin August between Chicago athletes and Danes. A number of Chicagoans, including H. M. Osborne, J. P. Jones, W. Stevenson, H. T. Evans, J. H. Riley, H. Schwartz, and R. E. Dodge, all of the Illinois Athletic club, are coming to Copenhagen on Aug. 1 for the events.

Bill Steinmetz, International Ice Star, Hangs Up Skates

BY FRANK SCHREIBER.

William (Long Bill) Steinmetz has skated his last championship ice race. The internationally known speed skater, who has held at one time or another every outdoor ice title known to the skating world, has decided to hang up his skates and devote his entire time to his business, which during the last few seasons has suffered because Bill couldn't resist the call of the steel blades and fast ice.

From playground champion to world's amateur title holder within seven years, Steinmetz's ice skating history was written. And through his years of championship skating Steinmetz established and shattered many records, intersectional, national, and international marks.

A Tribune Product.

Steinmetz can be called a TRIBUNE skater. It was through the early ice tournaments held in the Chicago playgrounds and for which THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE donated the medals, buttons, and other prizes that Steinmetz got his start and he finished by winning The Tribune Senior Silver Skates Derby in 1921 and then copped The Tribune Blue Ribbon Diamond Medal race for senior silver skates winners in 1923.

Bill started his racing career back in 1915, when he won his first trophy, the Tribune button, in a tournament at the Commercial playground. His next start was in the final city-wide championship races and he copped the 440 yard championship event and immediately joined the Northwest Skating club, one of the oldest skating organizations of the city.

Four Wins in One Day.

In 1916 Steinmetz went out after honors on the ice in earnest. Despite the keenest brand of competition Bill advanced from the novice class to a class A skater in one day, winning four races in one tournament. He won his race in the novice class and then repeated in classes C, B, and AA.

But up in class A he met sterner competition. Art Staff, later world's professional champion, and Charlie Fischer of Milwaukee and Sigurd [Brick] Larsen were the topnotchers in the A class and all were former national champions. But Long Bill didn't stop. Within a year he was licking and sometimes being licked by the big trio from 1917 until 1919 when he flashed in front as the fastest Chicago amateur skater and won his first outdoor championship tournament, the Western title meet.

America's Skating Ace.

In 1920 Steinmetz won the western outdoor title, defeating Everett McGowan, who won the international title that year. In 1921 Bill copped the Tribune Senior Silver Skates and the Adirondack amateur championship. But it was during the 1922 season that Steinmetz scored his greatest triumphs. During that season he won the international amateur championship and then copped the Adirondack diamond medal awarded to the "skating ace of America."

In 1923 he came back to win the Tribune blue ribbon diamond medal race and in 1924 Bill journeyed to France as a member of the American Olympic ice team.

Last season Steinmetz skated but his activities on the ice were constantly interrupted by his business so Bill decided to quit. "I'll still be in the ice game," he says, "but only for the kids. I'll help the young skaters in their training but I am through with the racing game. It's time I quit."

BUTLER COLLEGE STARS WIN BIG 10 NET TOURNAMENT

For the first time in the annals of Big Ten tennis tournaments a nonconference school yesterday carried off the honors in the annual tourney, played at the University of Chicago courts. Butler college stars, Julius Sagalowsky and Lee Kurzrock, wrote the new chapter, the latter defeating his brilliant teammate, 6—3, 6—4, 7—9, 6—8, 6—3, to take the singles' title, while the flashy pair decisively disposed of Goodwillie and Earle of Illinois, 6—0, 6—1, 6—2, in the doubles finals.

That final singles match, in which the smashing power of Kurzrock upset the dope and won him a victory over the cunning of the versatile Sagalowsky was one of the most sparkling combats ever staged on the Midway courts.

Kurzrock Starts Fast.

In the first place, it was the first time the new western conference titleholder had ever taken a match from his teammate. He started toward his victory decisively, however, taking the first two sets after gruelling battles. Thereafter Sagalowsky reverted to the chopstroke game, for which he is noted, abandoning the driving returns with which he first sought to win. Standing well back on the serving line, Sagalowsky withstood his mate's terrific onslaughts, winning the third set, 9—7, and the fourth, 8—6. In the fifth and deciding set Kurzrock pushed his rival relentlessly, allowing Sagalowsky but three games.

Tennis of the Best.

For speed, thrills and skillful tennis, the match could hardly be bettered. Kurzrock, the title winner, is a southpaw. His backhand power, as well as his forehand ability, is phenomenal in a college player.

The outcome of the doubles finals clearly demonstrated the superior power of the Butler college pair. The Illini were equally powerless before Kurzrock's speed and Sagalowsky's chopping and expert placements.

In yesterday's singles semi-finals Kurzrock gave a foretaste of the power which beat Sagalowsky when he defeated Donovan of Notre Dame, who was picked as a probable finalist, 6—1, 6—2. Sagalowsky had as little trouble defeating Krickbaum of Michigan, the only survivor of the Big Ten singles entry, 6—1, 6—2.

Goodwillie and Earle put up a good battle to win from Tracey and Shapero of Ohio State, 2—6, 6—2, 6—2, in the doubles semi-finals, the Butler pair having won their semi-final match the day preceding.

FAST INTERCLUB PLAY IN INITIAL TENNIS MATCHES

Play began yesterday in the interclub matches of the Chicago Tennis association. Lack of court facilities caused several postponements.

The South Side Tennis club teams in the B and C classes won signal victories, defeating Riverside, 8 to 1, in the B division, and winning over Lawchester, 5 to 0, in class C. Hawthorne won an unexpected victory over Hamilton Park, 7—2. The River Forest team featured the play in class B, north division, by taking 8 out of 9 matches from the Park Ridge club. Union Park had no trouble with Unatre, sweeping the singles and losing only one of the three doubles matches in the north side class B division.

Hawthorne also inaugurated its play by taking every match from the Illinois Bell team. The Suburban Tennis club took three out of five matches from the class C Unatre team. The Hamilton Parks defeated the Barnett Tennis club, 5—4.

CANNEFAX BOWS TO HOPPE, 600-434

New York, May 23.—[Special.]—Willie Hoppe rose to the most brilliant heights ever reached in a three cushion match in this city tonight and, scoring 33 points in nine innings, won the final block of his 600 point special match with Robert L. Cannefax, the world's champion, at 50 to 11 in 29 innings. Hoppe had a high run of 13 and went out with an unfinished run of 7. Hoppe won the match 600 to 434 in 594 innings. In the afternoon Hoppe had won at 50 to 39 in sixty-three innings.

WILLIAMS, MATHEY WIN.

Haverford, Pa., May 23.—[A. P.]—R. Norris Williams of Philadelphia and Dean Mathey of New York today captured the Pennsylvania state lawn tennis doubles championship on the courts of the Merion Cricket club. They defeated Carl Fischer and Wallace F. Johnson of Philadelphia, 4—6, 6—4, 6—3, 6—2.

BUTLER'S IDOL

Indianapolis, Ind., May 23.—[Special.]—From a comparatively unknown school, to one with a national reputation is one of the many records accomplished by Butler university under the tutelage of H. O. [Pat] Page, since 1920.

Mr. Page, a former athlete at the University of Chicago and at one time an assistant to Coach Stagg, arrived at Butler in the fall of 1920. He had about 400 students, most of them girls, from whom to select a football team and the material he had to work with was only mediocre. Now after four years Mr. Page has developed championship teams in almost every branch of athletics.

Upsets Big Fellows.

Page's basketball and track teams are nationally known and his football and basketball teams have defeated many of the biggest schools of the midwest.

From the athletes who have worked under Pat Page has come Haldane Griggs, who in the football season of 1924 was the "boy with the golden toe," winning many games by his drop and place kicking. George Mulholland, a football player, was a member of the Olympic boxing team, and Robert Blessing, a four letter man at Butler, is now a member of the Columbus, O., team of the American association.

Expansion Necessary.

Butler has so outgrown its present quarters in Irvington that a new campus has been necessary. Through the aid of the Chamber of Commerce and other civic bodies of Indianapolis Butler university will have several new buildings, including a stadium, within the next five years.

And all of the credit for the meteoric rise of the school is given by the people of Indianapolis to H. O. (Pat) Page.

Willy Park, Famous Golf Architect, Dies in Scotland

EDINBURGH, Scotland, May 23.—(AP)—Willy Park, professional golfer who laid out more courses in the British Isles, United States and Canada than any other man, died today. Park won the British open championship in 1887 and 1889.

OPEN QUALIFYING PLAY THIS WEEK AT ONWENTSIA

BY MORROW KRUM.

The eyes of every midwestern golf lover will be turned towards Chicago during the forthcoming week and by the same token practically every unusually good midwestern golf player will be in our city partaking of the royal and ancient game.

The reason is simple—the middle west qualifying rounds for the national open tournament will begin at Onwentsia Wednesday morning. Tomorrow and Tuesday will be official practice days for entrants. So the first four days of this week will be filled with golf that is of championship caliber.

Pick Unofficial Champion.

The qualifying rounds will in an unofficial way decide who is the best of the middle western golfers at the present time. Of course that honor is now held by William Mehlhorn, professional at Westmoreland, and it will be held by him officially until the western open tournament this year and after that if Mehlhorn successfully defends his title. But Mehlhorn is entered in the national open and it is possible that some other entrant will qualify with fewer strokes. Then there are those who would say that a new unofficial western champion had been developed.

The play at Onwentsia will be medal play and who is there to deny that the man who has the least number of strokes after the shooting is over is not the best of the lot? Of course the best man may have two bad days or the poorest man may have two remarkably good days, but it cannot be denied that the player whose score is lowest played the best golf during the qualifying rounds. And all of the middle western crack shooters are entered. So it is not at all foolish to say that an unofficial champion of our province will be cheered Thursday night.

Eight Picked as Possibles.

Who this will be no one can tell. Many guesses can be made. There are scores of wise men in golf who believe that Billy Mehlhorn will lead the field. Others favor Jock Hutchison. Still others believe that Laurie Ayton or Bobby Cruickshank, or Charles Evans Jr., or Ira L. Couch, or Al Espinosa, or any other of the 139 entrants may turn in the lowest card. Many believe that Willie Hunter will show the way, because it is his home club and he has been playing the course almost daily since early spring.

It is never safe to gues sthe outcome of a golf tournament. Too many things happen. However, I'll take a Brodie on eight names. Put down Mehlhorn, Hutchison, Ayton, Hunter, Cruickshank, Bob Gardner, Eddie Held, and Al Espinosa. Look for their names near the top of the list. But "you never can tell."

Start Wednesday Morning.

Onwentsia will start the players going on their official work at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning. The first two off will be Eddie Andrews, Elmhurst, and George L. Welsh of Chicago.

Of the 139 players, twenty-seven will go to the big meet at Worcester, Mass., on June 3 and 4.

On Local Golf Links

ONWENTSIA club, where the qualifying rounds for the national open tournament will be held Wednesday and Thursday, is one of the oldest clubs in the Chicago district. It has been the scene in the past of many memorable golf tournaments. In 1899 Herbert M. Harriman of Meadowbrook won the national amateur title there, defeating Findlay S. Douglas of New York. In 1915 Mrs. C. H. Vanderbeck of Philadelphia won the women's national title against Mrs. W. A. Gavin of Shirley park, England. Onwentsia has given the world some peerless golfers. Among them are Robert A. Gardner, who held the national amateur title twice; Dexter Cummings, twice winner of the eastern intercollegiate championship; David R. Forgan and Mason B. Phelps, former western amateur champions; Mrs. Fred C. Letts Jr., formerly women's western title holder, and one of the few American woman players who holds a victory over Miss Cecil Leitch of Great Britain and Miss Edith Cummings, national champion in 1923 and present holder of the woman's western crown.

BEVERLY.

A blind bogey sweepstakes yesterday drew many members, who used the last opportunity to warm up for the big Memorial day tournament. The winners were Charles Prodie, scratch, 79; A. H. Haigh, 85—6—79; T. J. Vernia, 95—16—79; S. C. Batchelder, 106—30—76; E. F. Olson, 78—2—76, and John McKinlay Jr., scratch, 76.

Manager C. M. Nelson will be host tomorrow to the Chicago District Managers' association, which will play its second tournament at Beverly.

GRAND BEACH.

Frank Lynch, professional, established a new record of 36—33—69, against par 71. Lynch had three birdies and was one over par on one hole. His partner in the twosome was Mrs. W. A. Miskimen of Hoopeston, Ill., who was close behind the former St. Louis champion off the tee and did fine work on the greens. Lynch declares Mrs. Miskimen has the makings of a championship player.

OAK PARK.

Tom Heneage was the chief winner, taking the prize in the sweepstakes with 79 and winning the class A trophy with 79—8—71. In class B, S. C. Spitzer won with 87—16—71; class C, W. P. Worth, 94—26—68, and class D, T. O. Jennings, 97—31—66.

EDGEWATER.

A large field played in the qualifying round of the tournament for the C. A. Tilt trophy. O. T. Dover topped the list with 100—29—71. In the ball sweepstakes E. J. Baldwin, 91—17—74, and W. J. Binn, 91—15—76, were the winners.

OLYMPIA FIELDS.

Playing over No. 1 course, N. W. Cochrane, 96—23—73; M. H. Spaulding, 96—23—73, and E. A. Edwards, 96—23—73, were the winners in the ball sweepstakes.

C. E. Barnes finished 1 up against par over No. 2 and took the trophy for that event.

A card of 92—22—70 over No. 4 netted Dr. W. J. Siegler first prize in a medal play handicap competition. B. Hampton took second with 98—27—71.

PRESS GOLF CLUB.

Members of the Press Golf club will compete Monday at Butterfield for the James T. Igoe trophy. An added feature will be the appearance of Frank Craven, comedian, who will play in the tournament as a guest.

Butterfield can be reached by auto, Roosevelt road, west to Canfield, left to the first road and left to the club. Busses will meet trains on the Aurora and Elgin electric road at 11 a. m. and 2:30 p. m.

Chairman George Murphy of the house committee has a treat in store for the players.

MUSICIANS GOLF CLUB.

President Charles Hudson announces that a team from the Musicians' Golf club will meet a Press Golf club team in the near future for a valuable trophy. The Musicians will meet Tuesday, June 2, at Evergreen in the qualifying round for the Preston, Allegro and Andante cup.

LAKE GENEVA COUNTRY CLUB.

The Northwestern Military and Naval school defeated Kenosha High school golfers at Lake Geneva yesterday. Frost, Larmon, Gittins and Ahrens of the cadets defeated Funk, Stanhope, Binninger and Newhouse of the high school boys in respective matches.

OVER in Londonderry, Ireland, there's a man by the name of James Ballentine, who asked that THE TRIBUNE's golf editor present his compliments to Capt. E. F. Carter, a golf player of the first water who has recently taken Chicago for his home and Briergate for his home club. This morning is a particularly auspicious time to deliver these compliments because yesterday Capt. Carter hoisted his name to glory at Midlothian Country club by turning in the low card at the twenty-first annual Midlothian derby. The former officer of the British army had 38—38—76, the lowest gross of 292 players.

Despite the descent of the thermometer there was much good golf at the derby. Several visitors competed, W. H. Lincoln of Indianapolis having 80—12—68 as the lowest net score. R. J. Collins of Bob O' Link was second with 92—21—71, and Rush Butler of Indian Hill, third, with 87—15—72.

LA GRANGE COUNTRY CLUB.

First event was 18 hole medal play. H. W. Hackel, 84—11—73, won class A prize. W. B. Davies, 86—17—69, won class B, and J. O. Kelso, 103—30—73, won class C prize. The results of the sweepstakes follow: Class A, H. G. Simons, 84—9—75; E. T. Franklin, 81—7—76; B. N. Anderson, 83—7—76. Class B, W. B. Davies, 86—17—69; J. A. Connell, 90—15—75; F. H. Bashen, 93—15—78. Class C, E. Hancock, 96—21—75; W. K. Sanderson, 99—22—77; W. G. Emmond, 98—21—77. Class D, R. B. Heyward, 106—30—76; J. H. Coy, 106—30—76.

BUDLONG WOODS.

The third day of The Hub-Henry C. Lytton Daily Fee Course tournament was in progress all day yesterday at Budlong Woods. At a late hour last night the scores were not ready. They will be printed later in the week. The first tournament of the Budlong Woods and Iron club will be played on Decoration day. It will be a match against par affair.

BIRCHWOOD COUNTRY CLUB.

The opening tournament of Birchwood Country club was played at the Wilmette Golf club. The prize winners were as follows: A. C. Stepan, F. W. Lietzow, J. E. Hatt, A. B. Lemmon, J. N. Scott, Dr. E. B. Montieth, F. W. Anderson, W. T. Foley, M. G. Kabateck, G. N. Broe, W. H. Matthias, A. W. Mathis, F. H. McKeever, J. E. Kiple, F. L. Carroll, Dr. J. S. McLaren, C. A. Whetson, and C. J. Schwarting.

LAKE SHORE.

There was no competitive play at Lake Shore yesterday. The season opens there next Saturday. Eddie Loos, the popular professional, says that the course is in great shape and that there'll be bully golf there when the season opens.

EDGEWOOD.

The first prize for the 18 hole low net score was won by Harry A. Varney, who had a 68. There was another prize for low net foursome and J. A. Taylor, P. H. Mass, L. B. Smith and G. D. Beckley won with 303. In the ball sweepstakes the following finished as mentioned: R. F. Stephens, E. M. Koulter, A. J. Mohr, Robert J. Barnett, and Herman A. Fletchner.

WESTMORELAND.

Preparations for the coming big Memorial day events and trailing Bill Mehlhorn, the club professional, furnished the diversion yesterday. Bill this week has had rounds of 71, 70, 69 and 71 over the home course.

WRIGLEY YACHT FAME WILL SOON REACH CHICAGO

J. M. Handley, secretary of the Chicago Yacht club, left for New York Friday, to bring out Phil Wrigley's boat Fame, which was formerly Speejacks. Mr. Wrigley is to make the renamed boat one of the Chicago flotilla which is to give the Great Lakes a leading position in yachting this season. The return voyage on the former Speejacks will be begun today, and it will be pushed through as fast as possible.

Handley's party will tow Fred Price's new Larchmont O class boat, "Celeritan" from New York to Buffalo, up the Hudson and through the Erie canal. At Buffalo it will be rigged and its sails bent and then it will come the rest of the way under sail. With Fred Price on this voyage will be Dr. John B. Palmer, Al Bennett and two or three more Chicago Yacht club members, who will help sail her to Chicago.

The arrival of these boats in Chicago will mark the opening of a season of great activity in the Chicago Yacht club and in yachting circles generally on the Great Lakes than has been witnessed since the war.

Woods and Waters by BOB. BECKER

THE SPRINGER SPANIEL PUP IS READY FOR CANADA.

Goshen, Indiana.

DEAR BOB: As your future hunting partner slated to invade the woods and waters on gunning expeditions, and as a blueblooded representative of the springer spaniels of America, I was much amused by the letter which you received from Maj. Kid's Kid, that cocky little setter dog living in southern Illinois. That bird kinda hates himself, doesn't he? He talks about bird dog "aristocracy" and field trial standards and it doesn't take me more than a week and a half to figure out that we springers aren't supposed to be in his class. We're all round dogs, according to the Kid and hence not in it. It makes me laugh.

I heard C. A. say the other morning when he dished up the chow to my mother and my seven brothers and sisters that you were planning to acquire a setter at some future date.

Now, it's all right for Maj. Kid's Kid to kid himself, but I hope he hasn't filled your mind with the wrong kind of dope. You don't need any setters to give us a lift in the field on game. No, siree, Bob! We've got just as much blueblood as the bird dogs and it's just as deep a hue; for many centuries we've been helping the kings, lords, dukes, and other hunter aristocrats of England to bag their game and when it comes to finding it and retrieving it after shot we don't take a bum hand from any one.

We springers are the "clean-'em-up kids" and for centuries we have not only known how to handle feathered game but furred as well.

You just wait, Mr. Boss, I'll show you some action this fall, and when the duck season comes around,

Well, next week C. A. says I go to Canada, but before I go you are coming down. Prepare yourself for a warm welcome, because I'm going to be so glad to see you that I'll probably make a flying leap and land on you with all four feet. Yours,

THE PUP.

1924 Winner Will Aid Favorite in Hoosier Classic

Corum and De Palma Out to Garner a Big Purse.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 23.—L. L. Corum, co-winner of last year's 500 mile race with the late Joe Boyer, has been named to drive Ralph de Palma's second entry in the thirteenth international 500 mile race to be held at the Indianapolis Motor speedway, Saturday, May 30, it was definitely announced today by the speedway management after word had been received from De Palma, who is in Detroit making new speed parts for the two cars he will send to the tape here, one of which he will drive himself.

It is considered a great honor heaped on the youthful shoulders of Corum, an Indianapolis man, who drove to fame on rejuvenated Fords, by the idol of automobile racing.

De Palma, one of the shrewdest strategists in the automobile racing business, it is known, could have had at least a score of drivers jump at the chance of teaming with him on his pair of Miller specials. He filtered the field and chose Corum among such veteran stars as Eddie Hearne, Ira Vail, and a string of others.

Corum, who was reared within hearing of the roar of cars practicing on the speedway, jumped into the racing calcium in the 1923 race when at the wheel of a Barber-Warnock special, a seventy-five per cent Ford car hopped up with special parts, drove to fifth place, averaging 82.58 miles an hour in a race that was won by Tommy Milton at an average of 90.95 miles an hour.

Driving along throughout the entire race at a steady clip, Corum, practically unnoticed until the wane of the race and the checkered flag began to fall, showed his tires to an imposing field of foreigners.

Last year he made much the same drive. He started in his Duesenberg, unnoticed as he crept into the running. He advanced through the field until he came to fourth place and then into third.

At the end of 111 laps of the 200 mile drive he was called into the pits by Duesenberg, and while tires were being changed and the fuel tanks replenished, Joe Boyer, who had been taken off his car and given a rest in the pit, was hoisted into Corum's car and sent in to drive the car at a furious rate.

Boyer, starting in foruth place, wheeled the car into first place in the most thrilling finish ever seen in a long distance race.

Corum is noted for his poise at speed on the Indianapolis course, over which he is perfectly at home. He already has driven many practice laps this year and finds the going much to his liking. His nomination by De Palma comes as a complete surprise, for the track wiseacres were confident that Corum would again sign with Duesenberg and fill the vacant berth on the four car Dusie team.

KNIGHTS OF THE SPEEDWAY GIRD FOR BATTLE

The world's most restless crown and a snug little fortune hangs tantalizingly at the end of the world's hardest 500 miles for the speedway ace who sets the fastest and most furious pace in this year's great gasoline classic, to be run on the Indianapolis speedway next Saturday. At the left is Ralph De Palma, returning after a year's absence to pilot a Miller Special. At the right is Tommy Milton, twice winner of the Hoosier engagement, as he looked at the finish of his great race two years ago.

NEW MAP READY.

Every twist and turn of the road is brought out in minute detail in the new CHICAGO TRIBUNE auto trail map of Chicago and vicinity for 1925, now ready for distribution.

Main and secondary highways within a 200 mile radius of the city, together with their mileages, markings, type of surfacing, and points of interest are accurately traced in the new edition, which is considered the best automobile chart ever developed for the territory. All of the 115 golf and country clubs, the forest preserves, and camp sites in the district are located on the detail sheet, which also carries an excellent working map of the Chicago park and boulevard system.

The maps, distributed at cost—15 cents each—are available at THE TRIBUNE Public Service bureau, 11 South Dearborn street, either by mail or personal call.

Stop the Squeak.

Brake squeaks are caused by the linings becoming hard and glazed, due to friction and the application of pressure which presses the grip into the linings. Roughing the surface of the linings with a saw blade or coarse file will usually remedy the trouble. Another easy way is to apply a mixture of castor oil and powdered rosin to the linings. The former acts as a softener, while the latter increases the frictional resistance.

BIG EXPENSE.

The world spent $3,300,000,000 last year for automobiles and motorcycles. The commerce department estimated this on the basis of an average cost of $1,000 each for automobiles and $300 for motorcycles. The increase in automobiles for the year was 3,479,000, or 18 per cent of a total of 22,769,000

Fast Printing.

When the motive power of the American at West Frankfort, Ill., ceased to function, Byron Elkins, editor of the publication, backed a small car into his print shop, jacked up the wheels, attached a belt, and printed 1,500 papers to a gallon of gasoline. He now grinds out his daily edition at the rate of thirty miles an hour.

Truck Makers Reap Rich Harvest from National Demand

TRUCK manufacturers are seeing to it that their near relatives, the passenger car builders, do not reap a greater share of the prospertity than they. Never before were conditions better in the truck department of the industry, the call for vehicles coming from all sections of the country.

Statements from officials are to the effect that they are enjoying the greatest period of prosperity in history. May production in one plant alone will amout to 800 trucks, or half that of the entire first quarter.

This prosperity in the truck business is attributed, of course, to general good business throughout the country, with conditions favoring a slight betterment rather than a decline for the remainder of the year. Nineteen hundred and twenty-five shows all indications of being the best ever enjoyed by truck manufacturers.

OAKLAND SIX

Built for today's traffic needs

The only car near its price that gives all the advanced features present driving conditions demand

The car that would have satisfied you a few years ago will not answer your needs today.

With added millions of automobiles—crowded traffic—more difficult parking, you need a car expressly designed to meet these new conditions.

And what you need, Oakland offers you—instant getaway—dashing acceleration—high speed—effortless steering—quick, sure braking.

Today, as never before, you need the Oakland flexibility that enables you to handle your car so easily in traffic and in parking.

Oakland gives you this spirited but obedient performance because the sum total of Oakland's advanced features makes such performance possible.

Six-Cylinder Engine—L-Head, powerful, smooth-running, flexible, economical and peculiarly adapted to present-day difficult driving needs.

Owners tell us they can make sixty-five miles an hour; can throttle down to a slow walk without the trouble of gear shifting; and can make better time in city traffic than with any other car they have ever driven.

Four-Wheel Brakes—these brakes are not just added on. Oakland's front axle and entire chassis have been designed especially for Four-Wheel Brakes and every model has them at no added cost.

At ordinary driving speeds these brakes enable you to stop your car almost instantly, and without skidding, even on wet pavements.

Centralized Controls—Automatic Spark—no need to tell you what it means to safety and convenience to have all controls grouped on the steering wheel—never to have to bother about advancing or retarding a spark lever to get efficient operation. Then, besides these, there are—

Fisher Body—VV One-Piece Windshield—Disc Wheels—Balloon Tires—Duco Finish.

Drive an Oakland yourself. In the face of its superior performance, the small difference in cost between Oakland and cheaper cars will seem insignificant to you.

On the other hand, you will be convinced that it is entirely unnecessary to pay more money for the kind of performance which you want and to which you are entitled.

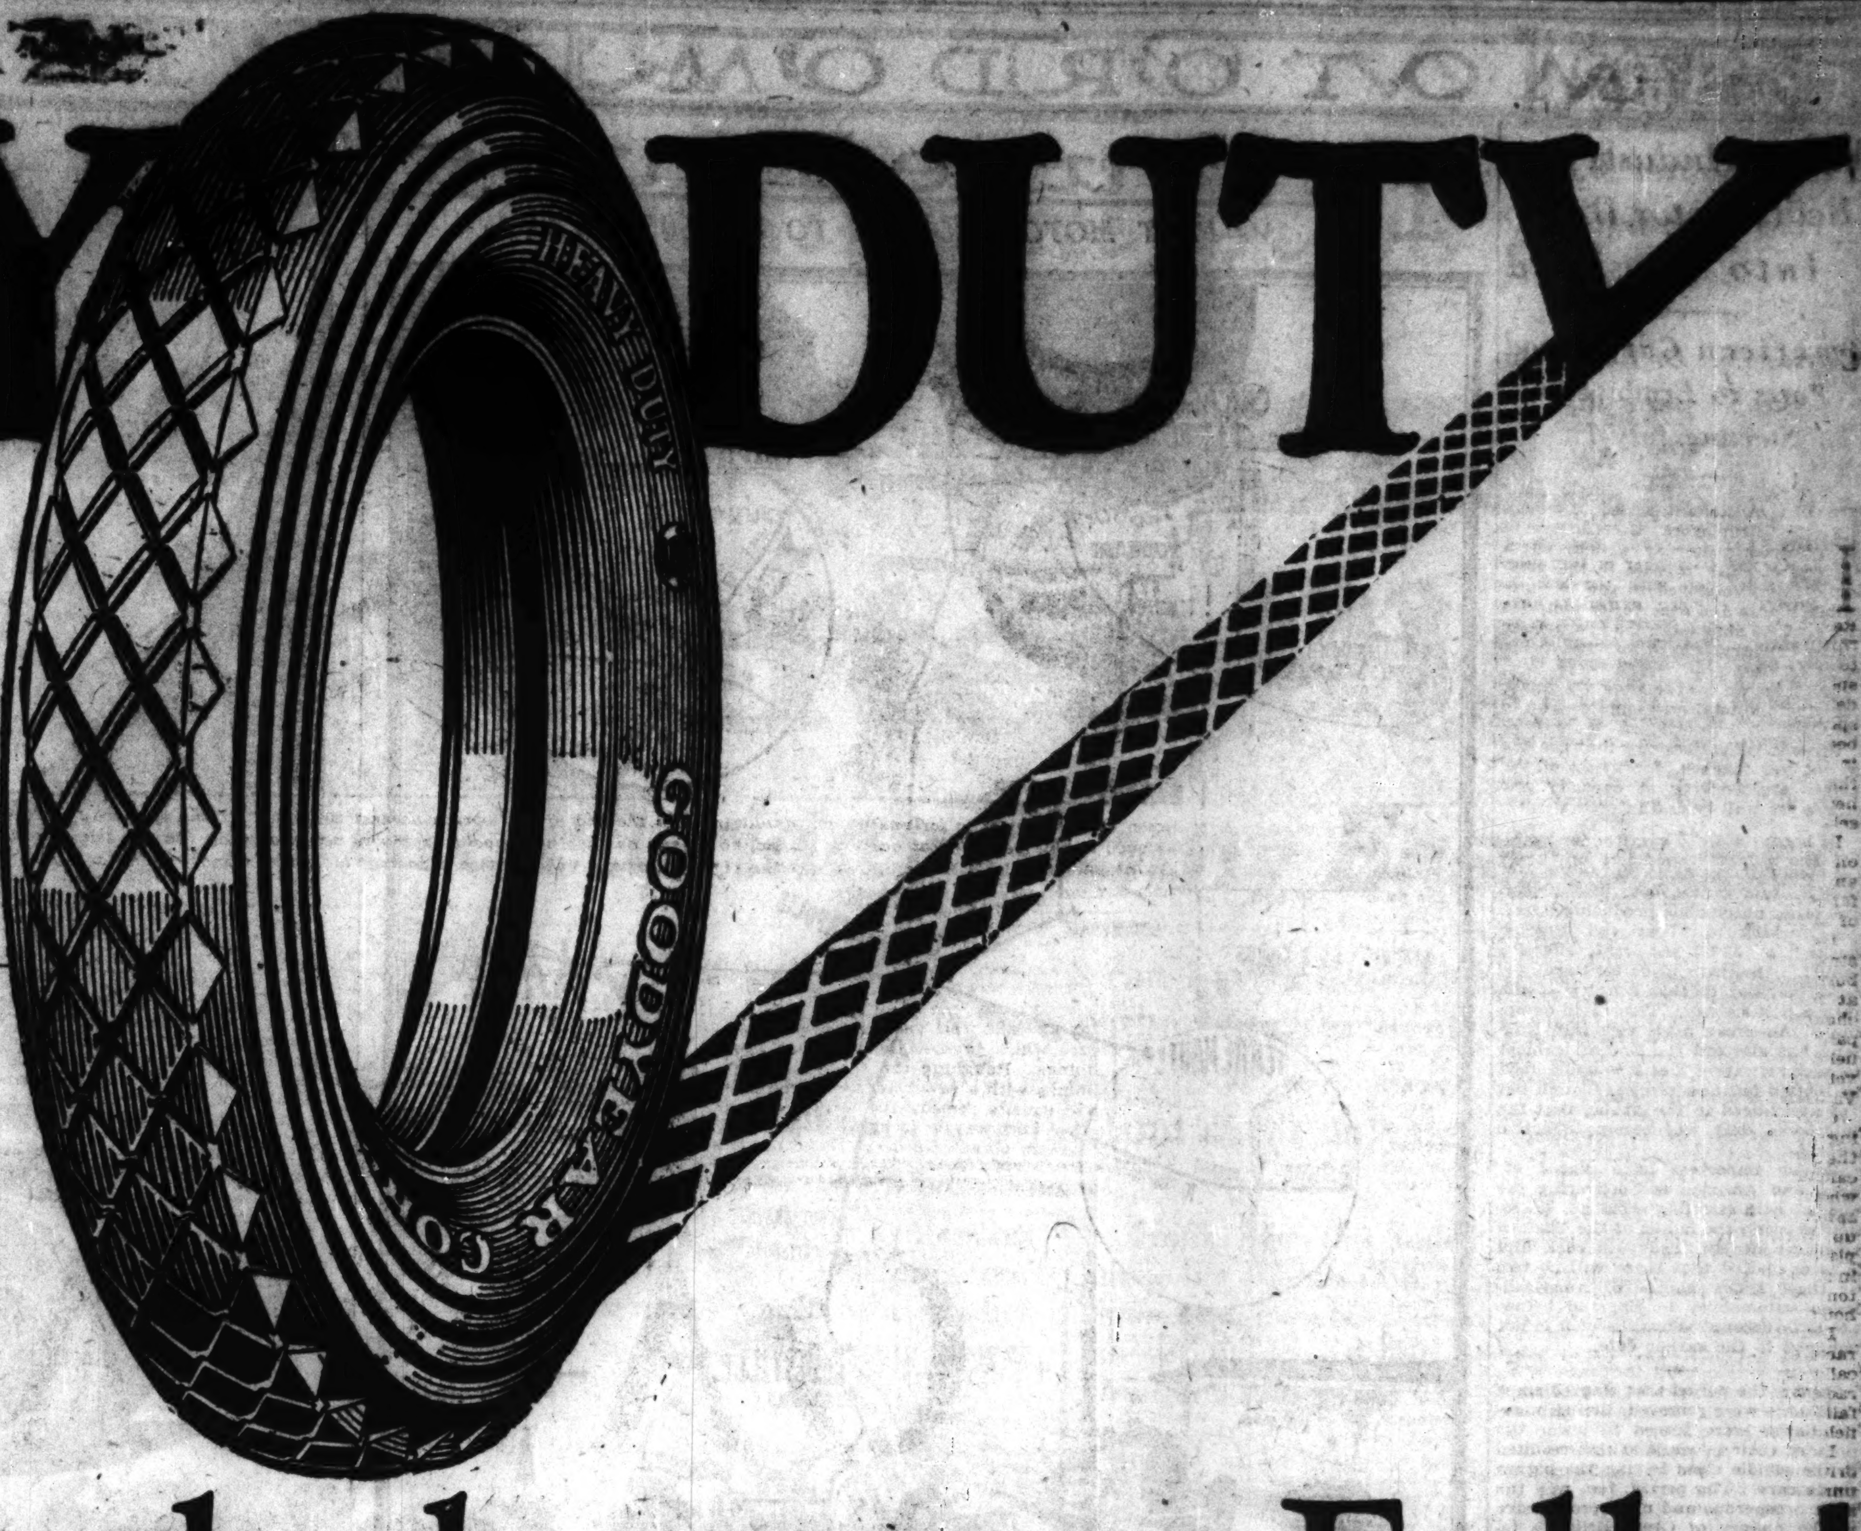
HEAVY DUTY



Goodyear HEAVY DUTY Cord Tires are available from Goodyear Dealers in the following sizes:

30 x 3½ (Cl.) 34 x 4½ (S. S.)
32 x 4 (S. S.) 30 x 5 "
33 x 4 " 33 x 5 "
32 x 4½ " 34 x 5 "
35 x 5 (S. S.)

For those who desire balloon tires Goodyear makes a complete line, including the HEAVY DUTY type in certain sizes.

More people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind.

—that's the whole story, Folks!

It describes exactly the usage for which the new Goodyear HEAVY DUTY Cord Tire, for passenger cars, buses and trucks, is designed

HOW ABOUT YOU—do you drive a sizeable car, and as if you really enjoyed it?

Is any part of your traveling off the asphalt and concrete, where the going is sometimes heavy and rough?

Would you like to have tire equipment under you that you can safely forget about, no matter how punishing the route?

Then you're one of the throttle-conscious fellows who should be riding the new Goodyear HEAVY DUTY Cord Tire.

It's no ordinary tire—being perhaps needlessly good for ordinary service.

Through and through, in carcass, sidewall and tread, it's built for day-in-and-day-out, take-it-as-it-comes, heavy-duty usage.

Its tough sinewy body is made of SUPERTWIST, the celebrated new Goodyear cord fabric of superior elasticity and endurance.

It's an extra-heavy body, made that way to insure extreme protection against stone bruise, carcass breaking and the shocks of rough roads.

The tread on this new HEAVY DUTY Goodyear is a thick, deep-cut, full All-Weather, combining maximum traction with long slow wear.

Even the sturdy sidewalls are additionally reinforced against rut-wear by stout concentric rubber ribs.

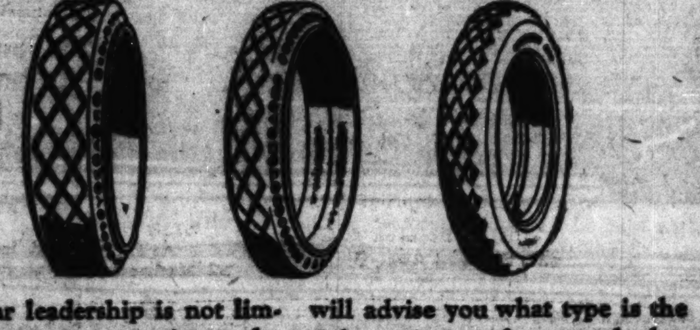
Yes, it's a HEAVY DUTY tire throughout—costing a little more, naturally.

But if you drive a big or heavy car, or follow a hard route, it's the cheapest tire to buy in the end.

To repeat, how about you—can you use this extra spunk and stamina?

If you can, this new HEAVY DUTY Goodyear is the greatest tire buy you ever made.

And when it comes to truck tires—



Goodyear leadership is not limited to passenger car tires only; it includes truck tires as well.

For every hauling condition, for every requirement of service, road and load, there is a right Goodyear Truck Tire—in each case designed and built to be the best truck tire for the job.

Your Goodyear Truck Tire Dealer will advise you what type is the right equipment for you: whether the All-Weather Tread Heavy Duty Cushion, for heavy trucking; the All-Weather Tread Pneumatic Cushion, for lighter work; or the Heavy Duty Pneumatic Truck Tire, for all service where pneumatic equipment is practical and desirable.

Yankee Industry Beats Motor Duty Into England

American Cars Flood Ports to Evade Tax Starting July 1.

FOR the fifteenth consecutive week the Employers' association of Detroit yesterday announced a substantial increase in the number of men employed in the 79 automobile plants and accessories factories there. This shows the true barometer of the industry from a manufacturing point of view.

The increase for the week was 1,069, bringing the total now employed up to 230,611.

Present indications are that the top is not yet reached, for many of the plants are working at capacity and others are well behind in orders.

Another condition that is causing the steady increased output is the fact that manufacturers, both in Michigan and other automobile producing states, are working to "beat the English duties" of 33 1-3 per cent, effective July 1. American made cars are now being shipped to that country at the rate of 1,000 a day. This rapid dumping of American made cars into England has alarmed the English cabinet to such an extent that it is understood in British business circles, though not yet announced to the public, that the reimposed duty will become effective June 1.

British importers have placed orders, and America is "delivering the goods" with startling rapidity. Warehouses along the banks of the Thames river are nearly filled with cars, and it is estimated that there will be two or three years' supply of American-made automobiles in England before the duty becomes effective—if it is not changed to the earlier date.

During the period that elapsed since the duties were removed, British manufacturers were forced to lower the price of their goods, and this resulted in the middle class buying the higher grade cars. The period, too, was the most prosperous and most progressive in the history of Great Britain's infant motor industry.

Little Drops of Oil.

Silence and smoothness of the engine are preserved if the rocker arms, pins, push rods, and tappets are given a few drops of oil each morning at the points where the most wear occurs. Once a month the valve assembly should be given a kerosene bath. An old paint brush may be used for this purpose, all excess kerosene being removed by a clean cloth. Such a bath will prove to be an important factor in reducing the wear to which the assembly is subjected, as it removes the accumulations of dirty grease and dirt.

WHEN the flower of American and European automobile drivers swing away into their 100-miles-an-hour battle for new speed laurels on the famous Indianapolis track May 30, some 150,000 avid race fans will pack the stands while thousands of cars line the big brick oval. This season drivers will find their best routes to the Speedway through Indiana, the popular old trail via Illinois paved highway 1 through Danville being closed for repairs and improvement.

This map shows the best Indiana options, including the Jackson highway from Crown Point and the excellent state highway No. 1 from South Bend. From Lafayette the shortest available route goes due east on highway 29 to Rossville and south on 44 to Lebanon, where the pavement is picked up into Indianapolis. Turn east on 30th street in Flackville to Meridian road in order to avoid congestion on Indiana avenue. The Speedway is located on the Crawfordsville road about 4 miles west of the city.

Wrestling fans who plan to attend the championship grapple between Lewis and Munn in Michigan City on the same date will find the Dunes highway from Chicago their best bet.

The Most Notable Design Success in Ten Years

People were ready for it. The niche of popular favor was waiting for quality, dependability and endurance with superior style. Then the New Franklin was introduced—smart, modern, low-slung, individually styled, high-powered and quality-built. It made ownership a delight. It was a success from the start. Now, after three months, we can say without serious disagreement from any observant and fair-minded motorist: it is the most notable design success in ten years. And those who have driven it will add: it is the most comfortable and economical of all cars at any price.

Illustration shows the Coupé. Series 11 includes four other closed and two open types, all ready for the road—fully equipped with appropriate accessories, spare tire and cover—at the catalog price. Only tax and freight are extra.

A Small Investment Buys an Income-Producing Winter Place on Florida's Sunny East Coast

AT LAST even those of modest means can have a Florida home. What once was a millionaire's luxury is now within the reach of everyone.

A comparatively few thousand dollars, payable on easy terms, will buy 40 acres of Florida's finest land. This rich, fertile land needs only development to make it pay handsome returns.

Picture the joy of spending your winters on your own sunny Florida estate. Picture, too, the satisfaction of having it produce a steadily increasing income as your own earning power declines.

Think how this added revenue will help to make life easier and brighter for you and yours. Soon you may be able to forget business cares forever and make your permanent residence in this genial land.

Profits of $200 to $500 an Acre!

OUR big illustrated book, which the coupon brings free, contains conclusive evidence that profits of $200 to $500 an acre can be made from the land we offer here. It proves that many buyers of this land are now making as much and more.

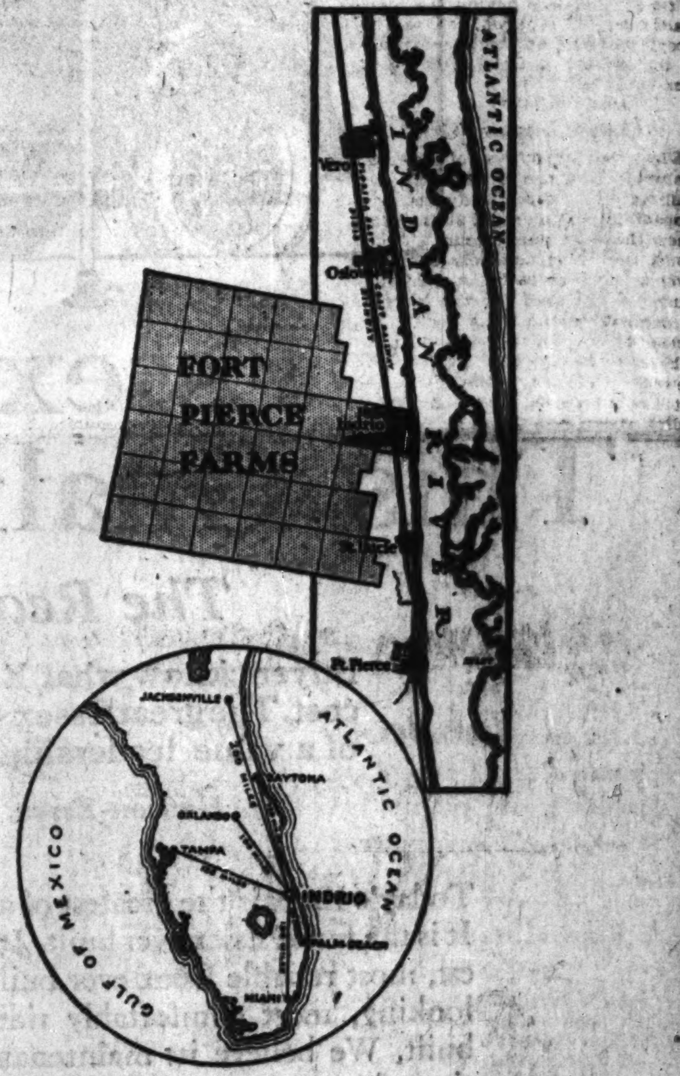
Our offerings, known as Fort Pierce Farms, are located in St. Lucie County on the beautiful Indian River, a sheltered strip of sea water between the Florida mainland and the Atlantic coast.

This part of Florida is a land of surpassing vistas, tropical beaches, brilliant sunshine and azure skies. It is a paradise for hunters, fishermen, golfers and other sportsmen.

The finest grapefruit and oranges in all the world are grown in St. Lucie County. Its citrus fruits invariably command the highest prices. For the past seven years this county has won the grand citrus prize at both the Tampa and Jacksonville State Fairs. Other fruits and all varieties of vegetables are also grown here in abundance.

Fort Pierce Farms comprise the cream of this fertile St. Lucie County land. All have splendid drainage. They are owned by the East Coast Development Company, a corporation controlled by some of America's wealthiest and most reputable business men.

The Farms are not remote from urban advantages. They are close to Fort Pierce and the proposed town of Indrio, 60 miles north of Palm Beach on the Dixie Highway and the Florida East Coast Railway. It is the intention of the East Coast Development Company to make Indrio one of the most beautiful towns in Florida. Work on this project is now under way.



Present Prices Are Unusually Low — Buy NOW Against Future Advances

Our introductory price per acre for Fort Pierce Farms is exceedingly moderate. Experienced Florida realtors think it much too low. Already we have been offered tempting premiums by land speculators wishing to acquire large tracts.

To such we steadfastly have refused to sell. It is our firm determination that Fort Pierce Farms shall go to land users, not to speculators. To encourage the former, we have set a price that is well within the reach of all.

In justice to ourselves, we cannot guarantee to maintain this price indefinitely. Advances are certain to be made, as Florida land values are increasing daily. Immediate action will be necessary if you wish to make certain of buying at the low introductory price. We reserve the right to increase it without notice.

A Delightful Climate All the Year—Average Annual Temperature 79.9°

The climate at Fort Pierce Farms both rests and exhilarates. It is a veritable health tonic. There are no wide, sudden changes in temperature, winter or summer. Severe storms are practically unknown.

The Gulf Stream, hugging the nearby Atlantic coast, makes winter a season of warm, sunny days and enchanting, starlit nights. Summer temperatures are as moderate as in the north.

Following is a table of average monthly temperatures at Fort Pierce Farms:

January	62	July	82
February	65	August	83
March	69	September	81
April	73	October	75
May	77	November	70
June	80	December	66

We Will Grow and Market Your Fruit if You Wish

Should you wish to be spared the responsibility of cultivating your land, arrangements can be made with us, or with others, to grow and market your fruit. This will be done at actual cost plus a small commission.

A wide variety of crops may be grown on Fort Pierce Farms. Most of the land is best adapted to the growing of citrus fruits. Other portions, however, prove more productive when devoted to truck farming.

Several of the ablest agricultural experts in Florida have been engaged by us to aid prospective purchasers in selecting land. By means of soil analyses, they can tell you just what fruit or vegetable is best suited to grow. Thus you have only to decide what crop you wish to raise, and the land most suitable for growing that crop will be sold you.

EASY TERMS

We will gladly arrange for easy terms with those who cannot conveniently buy outright. The Fort Pierce Bank and Trust Company, a strong, substantial institution, will act as Trustee. They will issue the deed and abstract to your property, and all payments will be made direct to them.

In the Heart of the Famous INDIAN RIVER DISTRICT

Between Vero and Fort Pierce, on the Indian River, is the finest citrus producing land in Florida. Note that Fort Pierce Farms are located in the very center of this highly productive region.

Then note the relationship of Fort Pierce Farms and the proposed town of Indrio to those places in Florida which everybody knows — Jacksonville, Daytona, Orlando, Tampa, Palm Beach and Miami. All are within easy motoring distance.

Landscape architects are making Indrio one of the most attractive towns in America. Golf courses, bathing beaches, parks and palm-shaded drives are even now being laid out.

Nowhere else in Florida can you buy a more delightful, more productive or more conveniently situated winter home at so moderate a price.

20 Acres and Independence—

ASIDE from the business man of moderate means, seeking an income-producing winter home, there are two other classes of people who should be vitally interested in the money-making opportunities offered by Fort Pierce Farms.

The first is the northern farmer, struggling vainly against weather uncertainties and widely fluctuating prices. At Fort Pierce Farms he can make a far better living and have the time and money to enjoy an occasional vacation trip.

The second is the clerical or manual worker, tied to the city and having a trying time of it to put money aside. By buying land at Fort Pierce Farms with his savings, however small, he will in a few years find himself in possession of a property that will support him comfortably and enable him to save money as well.

To such as these we say—send for our free book. It will be in inspiration to you. In it you will find stories of others, just like yourself, who came to Florida and gained independence and a new joy in living from 20 acres of St. Lucie County land.

Coast Dolls Up for $160,000,000 Motor Guests

"FUSS up a bit; company's coming."

This is a bit of homely advice being broadcast by the Automobile Club of Southern California to all live wire communities in the state. The warning is inspired by indications of the greatest influx of tourists southern California ever has known.

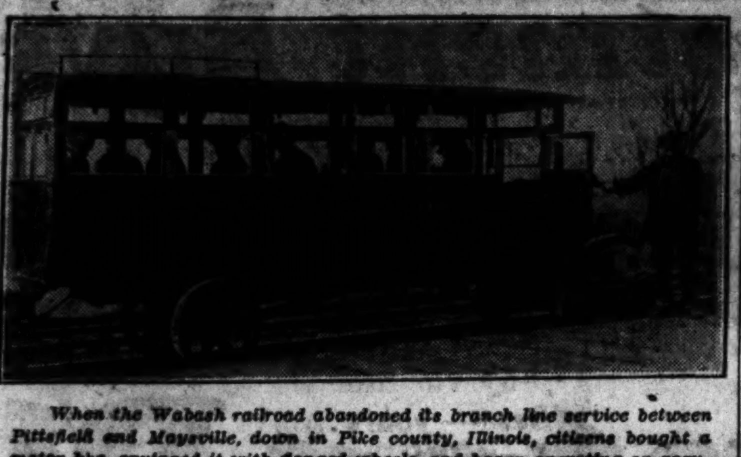
The big motoring organization is not "shooting in the dark," as it were, for it bases its predictions on the activities of its touring bureau for the first three months of the year. These show that there were 33,050 inquiries from the east regarding motor tours in this section. There were 234,600 telephone calls, 414,413 personal calls, and as indication that vast numbers of motorists are planning to see southern California, the distribution of maps for the first three months of this year reached the record breaking total of more than 3,000,000, or an average of over 1,000,000 a month.

The club says that not only this but all indications point to an unprecedented invasion of eastern tourists and also a new record in the number of resident motorists who will tour in their own section of the country this summer.

"Clean up and try to look pretty, if not beautiful. Add a little paint and polish here and there, and try to impress upon your visitors' minds that you are an interesting, wide awake community," are further hints made to those places which have ambitions toward growth and progress. The more charming the small towns appear to the tourists who pass through them, the sooner will the eastern travelers come back and the more often will motorists who reside in this section return. It will redound to the advantage of the towns that make a good appearance before their summer visitors, it is contended, because club records show that many eastern tourists planning to come here this year are coming with the intention of establishing permanent homes somewhere in southern California, and many will settle where the appeal of beauty, cleanliness, and hospitality is strongest.

Southern California may reasonably expect a tidy sum from tourist travel, if the figures announced by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce are correct. These are that $2,500,000,000 will be spent by motor tourists in the United States this year.

ANOTHER MOTOR RESCUE



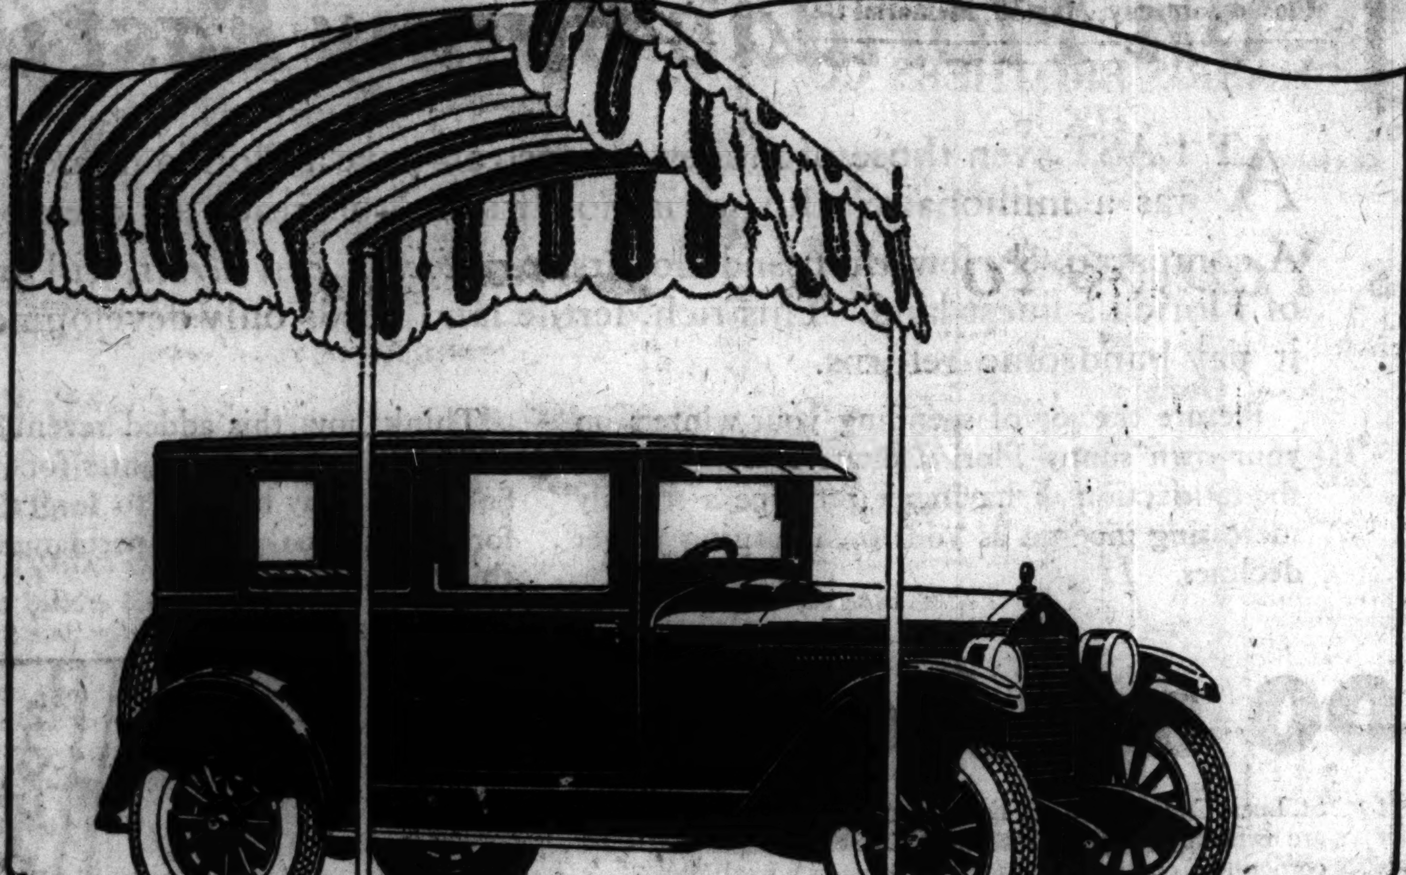
When the Wabash railroad abandoned its branch line service between Pittsfield and Maysville, down in Pike county, Illinois, citizens bought a motor bus, equipped it with flanged wheels, and began operating on regular schedule at actual cost. The service has proved successful.

Advent of New Car Marked by Holiday in Wisconsin City

THE entire city of Racine, Wis., will "close up shop" next Wednesday afternoon to pay tribute to the new Ajax car which will make its formal bow to the public that day.

The initial showing in Racine will be held as a curtain raiser to a ball game between the Racine and Kenosha teams. Formal unveiling of the car will be in charge of C. W. Nash, president of the Ajax Motors company. The program at the ball park is to be preceded by a parade of Racine citizens, every factory and practically every store in the city having arranged to close for the afternoon.

Following the exhibition at the ball grounds, a reception to the public will be held at the Ajax plant in the evening. Those in charge of the arrangements express the belief that between 5,000 and 10,000 people will accept the company's invitation to go through the plant.



Essex Alone Gives This Quality and This Price

The Reason for its Amazing Sale

Buyers know what Essex gives can be had elsewhere only at far higher cost. The great Essex sales record is due to no other thing. It is recognition of a value leadership so overwhelming that it is not even challenged.

Hudson-Essex, Now World's Largest Selling Six-Cylinder Cars
More Than 1000 Sold Daily

Today's Essex is the greatest of all Essex values. It is the finest Essex ever built. It is the smoothest, most reliable Essex ever built. It is the best looking, most comfortably riding Essex ever built. We believe its maintenance and operation the most economical of any car in the world. And the price, because of famous patents, with volume manufacturing advantages that are absolutely exclusive, is the lowest at which Essex ever sold.

Essex won its wide acknowledgment on finest quality without useless size or weight, and a price advantage equaled nowhere in the world. Greater size could add nothing to Essex. It has in brilliant evidence the qualities which weight and size are built to give—riding comfort, solidness, distinction, and smooth, quiet pace.

On every side its hosts of owners praise it with such pride and conviction as we have never heard for any other car. What they say has revealed this great value to thousands of buyers.

It is reflected in the greatest sales in our history. And the rapidity of this sales increase shows how thoroughly the facts about Essex have penetrated the entire market. Wherever you go, note how they outnumber all new Sixes. It is the surpassing proof of value—greatest sales.

After 275,000 miles —You Know the Facts!

How many cars can claim a record like this:

"Drove my Stutz 275,000 miles in seven years. Just placed order for another,"

—reads a telegram from a Stutz owner.

Isn't this statement more significant than all the superlatives of the super-advertising writer—the extravagant claims—the boundless promises?

This man knows the facts in the case. The actual records of many other Stutz cars in service are shown in our significant booklet—"What Stutz Owners Wired." It is one of the greatest helps ever offered in choosing YOUR car.

Add the facts that FOUR out of every FIVE cars ever built by this factory are still in service—that Stutz factory records show that owners are paying only ONE THIRD the established costs on like cars for parts replacements—and you have added facts to help YOUR buying.

And then TRY the new Stutz Sixes—the best cars that ever bore the Stutz name. Note their refinements of appearance, finish and appointment. Experience for yourself the ease of riding and driving; the actual performance under every driving condition you care to impose. Compare Stutz with any car, fact by fact. The evidence awaits you—here and now.

MOTORDOM

Motor Mills Whirl Into Race for New Production Record

Patent on Balloon Tires and New Motor Stirs Detroit.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., May 23.—[Special.]—The greatest production period in the automobile industry was April, 1925, when 420,373 passenger cars and trucks were sent from the various factories of the country—a greater percentage of them from Michigan. But the tidy record bids fair to be broken during the present month. This is the conclusion reached by manufacturers after a careful check up of schedules, output, and incoming orders. Capacity production is the rule in practically every plant, which means night and, in some departments, Sunday work. With the large numbers of unfilled orders on hand and sales increasing in all parts of the country, the outlook for a record second quarter is exceedingly bright.

Right now the automobile industry is occupying probably the strongest position ever attained. There is no overproduction. To the contrary, the demand is way out ahead of the supply. Dealers report that deliveries from factories are becoming more difficult to obtain and cars for display purposes are practically unavailable.

Production, where cars are merely going into dealers' hands, means little, but where cars are passing immediately into the hands of customers in the greatest volume ever known there is indisputable evidence of big business. No doubt exists that high production will carry well into the third quarter. The feature is the unprecedented demand for low priced cars, although vehicles in the medium and high priced field are in increasing demand.

Makers of the better known cars continue to lead in the production field. Ford is making and breaking records with astonishing rapidity, and before the first day of June it is practically certain that a high record of 8,000 cars in one day will be hung up. Colossal figures!

Productions during the second quarter will also be influenced by the record output of Chevrolet cars. This company brought out a new model which did not get into full swing until late in March. Approximately 2,300 vehicles every 24 hours is the best Chevrolet can do, and is now doing. May and June schedules call for 52,000 units each month, and unfilled orders now on hand will take care of this output.

Buick, Studebaker, Reo, Hudson-Essex, Maxwell-Chrysler, Paige, Rickenbacker and Hupp all have the same complaint—the demand is exceeding the output.

The sensation of the week was the granting in Washington of patents on balloon tires to Alden L. Putnam of Detroit.

Three years ago science scoffed at Putnam and his "crazy" low pressure idea, even as they laughed at Wilbur Wright and Henry Ford. But Putnam's idea has now been recognized by the United States patent office after weary years of attempts to convince the world.

Putnam, three years ago, was employed by the Detroit Pressed Steel company as an expert engineer. For several years he worked on the balloon tire idea, and three years ago read a paper to a group of engineers, explaining the idea of the low pressure tire.

Of course the engineers did not take him seriously. He was laughed at and classed as a "crazy idealist." This, however, did not deter him, and he continued experimenting. Two years ago Putnam went to Lansing, where he joined the Motor Wheel corporation.

He spent the winter in California, and immediately upon receiving the patent he hurried home to prepare for the expected battle for his rights, which will carry with them huge royalties on balloon tires manufactured all over the country during the last five years.

It is plain the granting of the patent, despite the lengthy litigation that preceded it, has come as a complete surprise to the tire manufacturers and to the remainder of the automotive industry. Years of litigation are sure to follow, and it is believed many, if not, in fact, all, the tire manufacturers will resist payment of royalties on Putnam's basic patent. These royalties will mean a tremendous annual revenue. The popularity of balloon tires has grown by leaps and bounds within the last two or three years, and it is said manufacturers have placed their prices high enough to take care of the royalties when the patent issue was decided, and the fight for this money is likely to be begun at once. The issue which delayed the patents so long has been the fight put up by the tire manufacturers, who questioned the right to patent a tire as a "novelty and invention."

MEMORIAL ROAD.

Congress has provided $12,000 for the construction of a concrete roadway on the reservation at Wakefield, Va., birthplace of George Washington. The roadway will run from the end of the reservation where it connects with the state highway and will encircle the monument there.

116% INCREASE

Chrysler Breaking Sales Records While Demand Goes Still Higher

The public's insistence on results that only the Chrysler Six delivers grows more emphatic week by week and month by month.

Mounting sales figures in the weekly reports for the United States show that the Chrysler Six—already a record-breaker in popularity—is soaring higher than ever before.

The latest weekly report registers an increase of 116% in retail sales over the corresponding week of 1924.

The sales for that week were 65% bigger than the very biggest week of 1924.

Furthermore, the last three weeks reported are the biggest weeks of 1925.

April, 1925, shows the largest month's business in Chrysler Six history.

Always mounting to higher and higher figures.

In Illinois, for example, April, 1925, shows an increase of 237% over 1924; Connecticut and the Boston district, including the remainder of New England, 133%; the Atlanta district, including Georgia, South Carolina and Florida, 364%; San Francisco district, including California, New Mexico and Nevada, 89%.

There never has been anything like it as a demonstration of public approval.

All of which becomes even more amazing, more significant when you recall that in 1924 the Chrysler Six had already established sales records unequaled in a quarter-century of motor car history.

Turn to the chart at your right. It shows you in simple and graphic way Chrysler Six production month by month.

See how the lines shoot up as Chrysler factory facilities were increased to meet the even more emphatic public demand for Chrysler Six results.

The public knows exactly what it is about. It has long waited for Chrysler Six quality and performance and it is determined to enjoy their advantages—even to the abandonment of cars previously owned, that cost thousands of dollars more than the Chrysler Six.

The public knows that no matter what the make or price, only the Chrysler Six gives them Chrysler brilliance of performance, Chrysler roadability and ease, Chrysler quality, economy and the score of other advantages that belong to this car alone.

For that reason there is only one sensible course to pursue.

We are eager to have you find out for yourself what these Chrysler Six results are.

Ride in the car that gives you a high-gear speed range of from 2 to better than 70 miles an hour.

Ride in the car that enables you to take a turn in safety at 50 miles an hour and to drive in comfort at 60 miles an hour over cobble stones and rutted roads.

Ride in the car that gives you a new experience in ease, a new conception of roadability.

Ride in the car that has proved its amazing stamina in the hands of more than 40,000 owners, many of whom have driven their cars 30,000 miles or more in the past year.

Try the Chrysler self-equalizing hydraulic four-wheel brakes and enjoy a new feeling of security, such as you never had before in a motor car.

The opportunity is awaiting you. Once in the car you will not want to leave it until you make it your own.

ST. PAUL DEAL IS LASHED BY LA FOLLETTE

Hits Bankers and G. O. P. in Editorials.

B. M. LA FOLLETTE

Madison, Wis., May 23.—[Special.]—Bankers gained control of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road, "looted" the company, and then got out from under and left the general public holding the sack, Senator Robert M. La Follette declared in an editorial in his magazine today.

"Before the crash came the directors of the road were smart enough to make a modest call on the United States treasury for a small loan of $68,000,000," Senator La Follette asserted. "This tidy sum was borrowed from the railroad administration and the interstate commerce commission under the terms of the lofty, benign Esch-Cummins act of 1920.

"That law was enacted upon the claim that railroad thievery was out of date and that the high class bankers who now control the railroads are angels, every man jack of them wearing a halo and packing a harp in this crimeless, Christian era.

An Old, Old Story.

"It is the old, old story of how private initiative and private ownership manages the railroads of the country. The bankers get control of promising railroads, boost their rates, take their profits for a few decades, distribute their surplus to favored insiders and then get out from under before the smash comes."

Writes on Administration.

In another editorial Senator La Follette declares that the American people appear to require from one to two years to get the measure of a new administration.

"Experience has shown that an administration primarily under obligations to selfish private interests, with no genuine allegiance to the people, chooses the period immediately after an election as the appropriate time to pay its debts and go to the greatest length to do the bidding of its masters," the editorial said.

"In the security from criticism and the lull in public attention incidental to a congressional recess, the administration has proceeded since March 4 to strangle to death the federal trade commission."

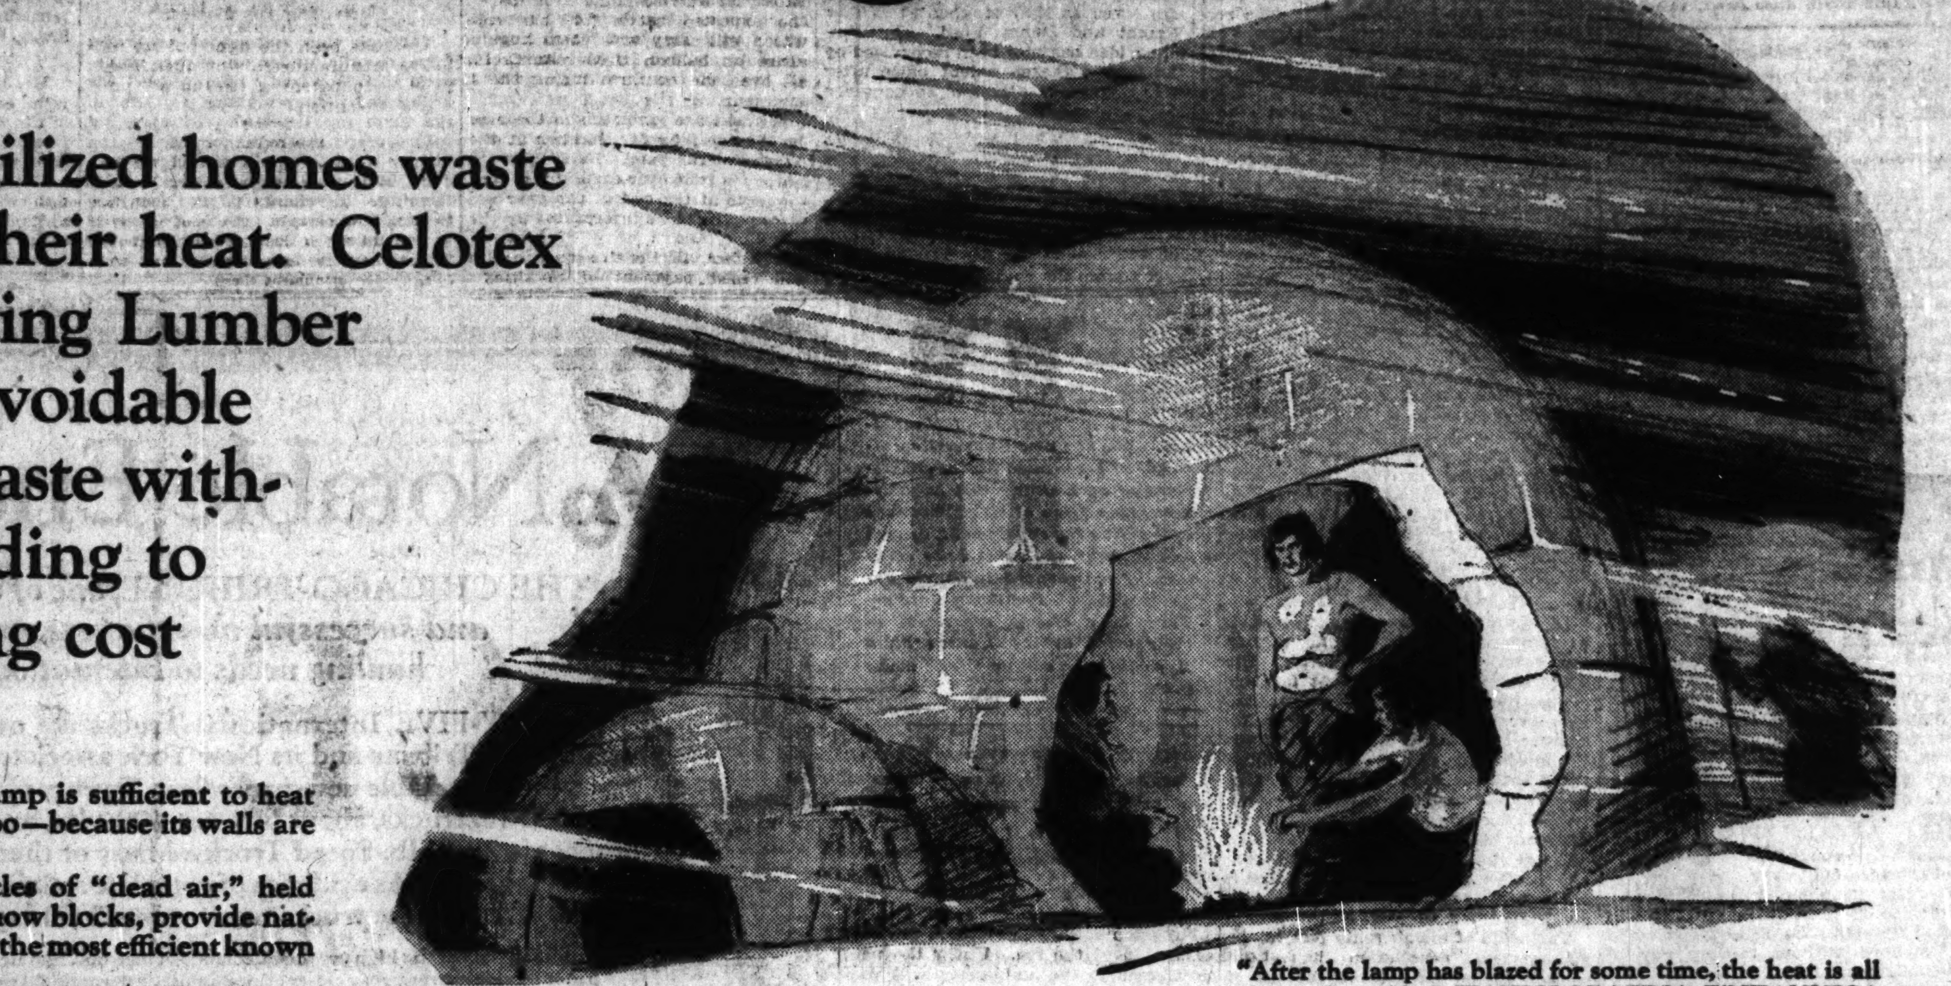
A moss lamp heats an Eskimo's igloo

Yet civilized homes waste ⅔ of their heat. Celotex Insulating Lumber stops avoidable heat waste without adding to building cost



"After the lamp has blazed for some time, the heat is all but unbearable." ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA

A small moss lamp is sufficient to heat an Eskimo's igloo—because its walls are insulated.

Minute particles of "dead air," held captive in the snow blocks, provide natural insulation—the most efficient known to science.

But present-day homes of ordinary construction waste two-thirds of the heat that comes from the furnace. One-third of this heat naturally escapes through windows and doors. The other third is unnecessarily wasted. It escapes easily through uninsulated walls and roofs. Ordinary building materials cannot hold heat in.

Celotex stops heat waste

Now heat waste can be stopped without adding to building cost. Celotex, the world's first Insulating Lumber, has made it possible.

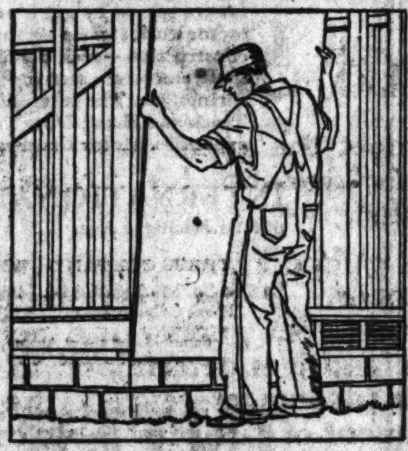
Celotex is made by converting the long, tough fibres of cane into broad, clean boards of durable lumber with great tensile strength and stiffness.

It is filled with millions of sealed air cells, which give it high resistance to the passage of heat.

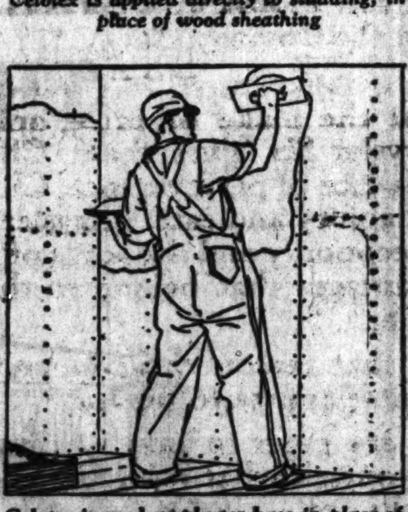
Celotex has been used in thousands of refrigerator cars to keep heat in during winter and out during summer. In the walls of a house it serves the same purpose; it checks heat leakage. It provides heat insulation.

More comfort—lower heating cost

In a Celotex home the common heating troubles disappear. No more cold upstairs rooms, draughty floors, chilly closets, or "cold sides" when the wind blows from certain quarters. Instead—cozy comfort and healthfulness on even the coldest winter days.



Celotex is applied directly to studding, in place of wood sheathing



Celotex is used as plaster base in place of any lath. Gypsum or wood fibre plaster is applied directly to it

Celotex pays substantial dividends in fuel saving the very first year and every year after.

A Celotex home costs far less to heat. In addition a smaller, less expensive heating plant is required. Fewer radiators are needed.

Celotex not an extra

A Celotex home costs no more to build than an ordinary uninsulated house.

Celotex is used in place of wood lumber as sheathing on walls and roof. It simply replaces and saves the cost of wood lumber and any form of insulation. It is stronger in wall sections than wood lumber.

Celotex provides insulation without added cost—because it combines great structural strength with high insulation value.

Celotex is also used as a plaster base, replacing lath. Celotex bonds with plaster and produces a much stronger wall than lath and plaster. Here again it provides insulation at practically no extra cost.

Additional benefits

In summer Celotex keeps homes cool. It shuts out the sun's heat and retains the coolness of the night. Even during the hottest summer months your Celotex home will be pleasantly comfortable day and night.

Celotex homes are restful and quiet. Celotex has great ability to prevent the transmission of sound. It eliminates the use and cost of deadening materials—yet gives all their advantages.

Ask your architect, contractor or lumber dealer

Before you build or buy your home, get all the facts about Celotex. Your architect, lumber dealer, or contractor will explain it to you fully—ask them.

When you plan and build, use Celotex. Your lumber dealer has it in stock or can secure it quickly.

When you buy a completed home, demand one built with Celotex. Tell your real estate agent or builder what you want—and insist on getting it.

No house is modern unless properly insulated. Build your home with Celotex and insure its future sales value.

Builders Review Thirty-one Years of Highway Work

Connecticut Report Runs from Mud to Wide Pavements.

SUCCESSIVE stages of development that have marked road building in Connecticut are shown in a statement issued yesterday by the state highway department to mark the thirtieth anniversary of its formation, which comes July 1.

Three definite steps in connection with the improvement of the state's roads are pointed out. When the department was organized in 1895 its principal business was to "sell" to the public the good roads idea. This was long before the present era of congested automobile and truck traffic. The next period was about ten years later. With the remarkable progress of the automobile industry the problem was to satisfy the demand for good roads. This meant principally the rapid building of roads for mileage rather than lasting quality. The third and last period seems to be at the present time when the state's great problem is to convert mileage already built into higher quality and higher types of roads to support the enormous traffic of all varieties constantly passing over them.

In the thirty years that Connecticut has been devoting concerted attention to the building of roads, an aggregate of $61,000,000 has been disbursed by its highway department. During the first decade, from 1895 to 1905, when the foundation of the good roads movement was laid in the state, $1,416,778.92 was expended. In the next ten years, ending in 1915, the state's highway disbursements grew fifteen times and totaled $15,026,392.13, as the demand for hard surfaced roads began to assert itself.

From 1915 to 1924 the greatest development is indicated. During this time the state took steps to bring its roadways to a point where they could endure the tremendous necessities of traffic. Expenditures in the last decade totaled $44,799,326.79, or an average of $4,000,000 a year, compared to $1,500,000 a year during the previous ten year period and as against $100,000 a year during the first ten years.

Connecticut's first highway department in 1895 was operated under the triple headed commission plan. The commissioners were James H. MacDonald of New Haven, the late William R. McDonald and the late A. C. Sternberg. This organization was in force for two years. During the twenty-eight years intervening, there have been but three highway commissioners in the state. In 1897 James H. MacDonald was appointed and held office until Feb. 26, 1913, when he was succeeded by Charles J. Bennett. John A. Macdonald, the present commissioner, took office July 1, 1923.

Lying as it does between the two large commercial centers, New York and Boston, Connecticut occupies a unique and difficult position. Its highways are used constantly twelve months in a year, carrying not only the pleasure seeking population but an ever increasing tonnage of freight in addition.

The present system of highways in Connecticut aggregates 1,900 miles. Not so long ago, roads of fourteen and sixteen feet width were considered adequate, but now a road is not adequate unless it is at least twenty feet wide and the department has already made considerable progress in the widening of the Boston post road to thirty-six feet.

Highway appropriations by the general assembly in thirty years have totaled $36,900,000 which with automobile revenue turned over to the highway department aggregating $22,000,000, brings the gross expenditures to $61,000,000.

Strict Law.

It is mandatory upon the courts, according to the legal department of the California State Automobile association, to suspend a motor vehicle operator's license for a period of one year upon the first conviction for driving a motor vehicle while intoxicated, and to revoke the license upon a second conviction for such offense.

WATCH FOR CHILDREN.

Don't disregard the child on the curb. Remember he can start quicker than you can.

The Inquiring Reporter

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune. For today's question $5 is awarded to Miss Clara Sally, 1914 North State street, Chicago.

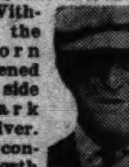
The Question.

What streets leading into the loop should be improved first to relieve traffic congestion?

Where Asked.

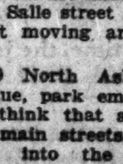
Lincoln park.

The Answers.

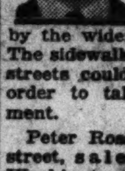


William Boehner, 744 North State street, manager—Without moving of the buildings, Dearborn street could be widened ten feet on each side from Lincoln park south to the river. This would relieve congestion for all north side traffic and make a new through route from the loop to the park. This street should have the first attention.

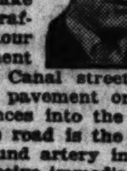
Richard Linden, 3211 West Fulton street, chauffeur — I think the first street to be improved in any campaign to relieve loop traffic is Monroe street. It could be repaved and widened from the loop west and be made into an excellent through route. We need more streets running west in order to serve the constantly increasing congestion.



William Haas, 1455 Larrabee street, fireman — La Salle street should be the first improvement in any congestion campaign. This street should be made a through thoroughfare and a bridge built over the river in order to take care of traffic from the middle of the loop north. La Salle street could be widened without moving any of the buildings.



John Coutre, 2949 North Ashland avenue, park employé—I think that all of our main streets running into the loop should be widened, especially La Salle street. Any one can see how much congestion has been relieved by the widening of Michigan avenue. The sidewalks on practically all of the streets could be cut down a little in order to take care of this improvement.



Peter Rosselet, 3409 North Paulina street, salesman—Washington boulevard from Halsted street east into the loop is the street that should be widened first to take care of congested traffic. Now a perfect tour is ruined the moment the driver strikes Canal street and the narrow, rough pavement on one of the main entrances into the business district. This road is the most important west bound artery in Chicago and should receive immediate attention.

Danger Spreads.

Traffic congestion on city streets and improved highways has increased the damage hazard to automobiles about 15 per cent during the last year, according to a study by the American Chain company. Fenders have borne the brunt of the battle. Because of the growing popularity of the open spaces among "week-end" city tourists, reliable shock absorbing bumpers and adequate braking facilities are found to be just as important on the concrete highway as on the metropolitan boulevard. Even the rural driver must now go equipped against possible damage to his car resulting from traffic collisions.

FARM AND GARDEN

Illinois Farmers Find Co-operative Management Pays

Business Methods Expel Money Losing Stock and Crops.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Through the transplantation of commercial methods into the field of agriculture, central Illinois farmers are able to mix brains, brawn, and business together, eliminate money losing crops and animals, and put farming on a more secure basis. The first coöperative farm management association ever organized in America has been started by 239 farmers in Woodford, Tazewell, Livingston, and McLean counties.

M. L. Mosher, former county agent of Woodford county and originator of the coöperative plan, is the association's manager. It is the outgrowth of farm management record work started by Mr. Mosher in Woodford county nine years ago. He is one of the oldest county agents in the United States, and is former president of the National Association of County Agricultural Agents.

Find Coöperation Pays.

In his early farm accounting work he taught the farmers in his county the value of keeping records. His proof was so conclusive that farmers in neighboring counties also wanted his services as a business adviser. Resigning from his county agent work, Mr. Mosher signed a contract for three years with the coöperative association about a year ago.

These farmers, with an aggregate investment of $14,000,000, or an average of more than $58,000 each, are convinced after a year's experience that a business manager will pay them big dividends.

The scale of membership fees in the management association has been worked out on the basis of the size of the farm. The smallest fee is $10 and the largest $20, or an average of $16.66. A farmer with as much as 245 acres of land pays the maximum fee. County farm bureaus and the University of Illinois' department of farm management help to pay the fee. For example, the Tazewell county farm bureau pays $5 of each farmer's fee, and in Livingston county the bureau pays all except $5 of the fee. Under the new arrangement the university will pay one-third of the fee, and the county farm bureaus and farmers will pay the rest.

Farmers Learn Bookkeeping.

The 239 farmers pay a total of $6,000 a year. The manager is paid $4,000 and allowed the other $2,000 to pay traveling and office expenses. Individually, of course, farmers could not afford to hire a business manager, but through the coöperative plan they get the services of an expert farm accountant. They have signed post dated checks to insure the permanency of the work for three years.

The farmers keep their own records in the simple standard farm account book recommended by the H. C. M. Case, head of the farm management department at the state university. The farmers are given a short course in bookkeeping by Mr. Mosher at the beginning of the year. Each farmer's inventory is gone over carefully so that the records at the end of the year are in ideal shape to be interpreted by the manager.

Mr. Mosher visits each one of the 239 farms three times a year—once at the beginning of the crop year, a second time during the growing season, and a third time after the crops have been harvested and thrashed. He notifies the farmer when he will visit his farm, so the books will be in shape for his examination. Farmers keep accurate records of every item entering into the cost of production of both crops and livestock. At the end of the year, as the individual farmers' records are gone over, they are interpreted to show the losses and gains.

Detecting His Losses.

Through this method of analyzing farm records under an expert manager's high powered "microscope" the losing and money making projects on the farm are detected. In planning future crops the manager advises the farmer what to eliminate and what to add. It takes the guess work out of farming. Merchants do not continue to handle a certain article of goods if it continues to lose money, but the farmer usually does, especially if he is not keeping books. Under the coöperative management plan the farmer's records serve as a confidential balance sheet of his year's business.

Rules and regulations that govern the association are laid down by the farmers; they boss their own organization.

The association's membership is fairly well divided among the four counties—Woodford, 63; Tazewell, 59; Livingston, 61, and McLean, 56.

The plan, which is nearly a year old, was recently outlined in detail by Mr. Mosher at the farm management extension workers' convention held at Sioux City, Ia.

Arouses Wide Interest.

Mr. Mosher's pilot demonstration of what can be done through coöperation in the handling of the business side of farming has stimulated interest throughout the country.

The American Farm Bureau federation will urge the state and county units to take advantage of this successful demonstration in coöperative farm management, according to E. P. Taylor, the federation's organization director. In a recent survey of the 1,700 county farm bureaus in the United States, Mr. Taylor found that farm accounting and business practices were common in all parts of the country. With this as a foundation the coöperative scheme can be easily made a universal practice in all of the agricultural counties.

Through the accumulation of the records kept under a coöperative plan valuable information will be gathered which can be used in building practical courses in marketing for the agricultural colleges. It will also give valuable information which can be used in determining costs of production and working out intelligent coöperative marketing projects.

Farm Bureau Picnic.

The Illinois Agricultural association's annual farm bureau picnic will be held this year at Taylorville, Christian county, some time in August, according to a decision made by the organization's executive committee.

Strength apparent in the hog market on the previous two sessions vanished on early trading yesterday. Prospects of an increase in receipts early next week were the dominant weaking factor. Week-end offerings at other western points were liberal, which usually indicate an increase here.

Omaha and Sioux City reported 14,000 each, against around 2,000 each previous Saturday. Prices ruled steady to 15c lower compared with the different angles of Friday, with medium and weighty hogs off most for the day and up least for the week. The day's top at $12.80 equaled initial day of the week and stood 55c above previous Saturday, while average cost, at $12.25, was 30c under last Monday and 25c above a week ago, the increasing number of butchers helping to hold costs down. Range of prices is widest in some time.

Hog receipts last week at 114,900 were third smallest in over six months, being 25,100 under previous week's arrivals, smaller than any corresponding week in over seven years, and 12,100 under the five year average. Estimated average weight of hogs at 238 lbs stands heaviest since last October, 5 lbs heavier than previous week, and the same as the five year average. General average cost last week at $12.35 was 10c under the week previous and $2.75 above the five year average.

Cattle Receipts Smaller.

Cattle receipts last week at 54,200 were smallest in a month's time and 10,000 smaller than a year ago. Beef steers comprised most of offerings, but carried few strictly desirable light and handy kinds, which closed strong to 25c higher. Others sold weak to 25c lower. Butcher stock prices declined, excepting on better grades of cows and heifers. The week's top for load lots of steers rested at $11.50, with 6 head of 1101 lb averages at $12.00 being the only sale higher. Average cost of beef cattle moved down 5c at $10.00, being 50c above a year ago.

Lamb Prices Low.

Sharp breaks in the market early last week, coupled with the fact that the season for fed wool lambs is practically at a close, forced the average cost of lambs down to $12.65, the lowest weekly average since December, 1923. Sheep averaged $7.10, within [illegible]c of the year's bottom. However, market improved after a lower start and all but springers recovered the loss. The latter closed mostly 25c under a week ago. Top California spring lambs Monday $15.50, and Thursday $15.85, against $16.35 early previous week. Top shorn lambs Monday $12.75, and Friday $13.00. The week's sheep receipts at 77,100 were smallest in over a month, but compare with actual arrivals of 40,204 a year ago, when the fed lamb season ended early and marketward movement of springers was late. Receipts for Monday are estimated at [illegible],000 cattle, 40,000 hogs, and 19,000 sheep, against 19,042 cattle, 29,484 hogs, and 22,454 sheep a week ago, and 22,073 cattle, 60,179 hogs, and [illegible]4,397 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 55,000 cattle, 130,000 hogs, and 70,000 sheep, against 52,645 cattle, [illegible]6,010 hogs and [illegible],190 sheep a year ago.

GRAINS ADVANCE WITH ADVANCE IN TEMPERATURES

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

What was described by the department of agriculture as remarkable weather conditions was responsible for a bulge in wheat to a new high on the present movement, July touching $1.56⅝ and September $1.49½, with the close at the top at net gains of 1⅛@1⅞c. September led in gains, being about 7¼c under the July at the close. May closed 1⅛c higher at $1.69⅝@1.70. Temperatures of around 100 which prevailed in the northwest on Friday were followed by a drop to around freezing, and while there was selling early on the cooler weather the trade quickly took the buying side on the forecast for freezing in parts of Minnesota and North Dakota and on reports of snow at several points in Canada.

There was much less pressure on coarse grains. With wheat strong, an advance easily was attained, corn gaining 1@1⅝c with oats up ⅜@1¼c, the latter on September, while rye gained 1½@2¼c.

September Wheat Leads Upturn.

Deferred deliveries of wheat advanced irregularly the last week, offerings increasing on the bulges, but each break brought in a good class of buying and the best figures of the week were made at the last and fully maintained with September leading, the latter gaining 5c and July 3⅛c as compared with the previous week. May was ⅞c lower. Corn advanced ⅛@⅝c with a light trade while oats were ⅝c lower on May and ¾@⅞c higher on the deferred futures. May rye was off 3½c, July, 1⅛c higher and September 2⅜c higher. Provisions fluctuated erratically closing with lard 10c higher to 2½c lower, ribs 17½@45c higher and bellies 40@60c higher for the week.

To have the prospective spring wheat crop both sides of the international line burnt up one day and frozen the next is a new experience for the grain trade, and there was a great deal of apprehension of damage, especially as the torrid weather of the last few lays followed a period of freezing. The plant is regarded as having been greatly weakened and in no condition to withstand much adverse weather from now on. Relative high temperatures prevailed during the day in the southwest to be followed by cooler. ,?Q?..m0 e.. c2 ETAOIN SHRDLUCF

Market a Weather Affair.

The wheat market is a weather affair, and other developments counted for little. A local professional who was said to have sold freely on Friday was credited with being a free buyer yesterday. Export demand was slow, with sales estimated at 300,000 bu in all positions. The trades look for bullish world's statistics on Monday and for a good decrease in the domestic visible supply. Liverpool closed 1@1¼d higher, and on the basis of the action of Chicago 1½d higher is due on Monday.

With limited pressure it was easy to advance coarse grain prices, pit shorts covering freely on the way up, despite a slow cash demand. September oats were in suspense and finished only ½c under the July, on prospects of damage to the northwestern crop.

Rye was dull but firmer, in sympathy with wheat. The seaboard reported 100,000 bu sold for export.

Provisions were easier on a lack of aggressive buying. A feature was the selling of a line of July against purchases of September lard at 25c difference, credited to a leading packer. Closing trades were 7½@12½c lower on lard, with ribs 10c higher to 15c lower, and bellies were unchanged. Deliveries on May contracts were 300,000 lbs ribs and 50,000 lbs bellies. Prices follow:

CASH GRAIN NEWS

Export trade in grains at the seaboard was slow with sales of 300,000 bu wheat, 100,000 bu rye and 150,000 to 200,000 bu oats, the latter being mainly domestic.

Domestic shipping sales here were 3,000 bu wheat, 20,000 bu corn and 80,000 bu oats, with 20,000 bu wheat and 15,000 bu rye to go to store. Deliveries on May contracts aggregated 245,000 bu wheat, 17,000 bu corn, 158,000 bu oats and 215,000 bu rye.

A feature in the cash wheat markets was a decline of 3@5c in red winter at St. Louis, the decline bringing in a better demand while hard winter was 1c higher. At Kansas City hard winters was unchanged to 1c lower and red unchanged, and hard winter at Omaha was 1@2c higher. Local spot basis was unchanged with No. 2 red 20@25c over and No. 2 hard May price to 3c over.

Basis on cash corn here was quoted as ½c higher to 1c lower. No. 2 mixed was May price to ½c over and yellow 2½@3¼c over, while No. 3 yellow was May to 1¼c over and mixed 2c under. Demand was only fair. Outside markets were ½@1½c higher with Omaha leading the advance.

Offerings of cash oats were not large, but the basis was easy at 1¾@3c over May for No. 2 white and May price to 1c under for No. 3 white.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 196 cars; corn, 169 cars; oats, 58 cars; rye, 16 cars; barley, 9 cars.

How a Bank Manages Depositor's Money.

Every one who deposits money in a bank is naturally interested in how the bank manages his money. If the money is wisely and conservatively handled it is safe and at the same time usefully employed. The best way of finding out what becomes of such funds is by studying the statements published by the bank from time to time. As these statements mean very little to those not familiar with the banking business, we shall endeavor to give our readers a brief and simple explanation which may assist them in analyzing and understanding these statements.

In the first place, when a bank accepts a deposit it agrees to repay the money instantly when the depositor asks for it. But deposits cannot lie idle in the vaults. They must be put to work for the good of the community in the shape of loans to merchants and manufacturers, investments in bonds, mortgages, and government issues. Business would stop if the banks refused to lend money, and yet if depositors ask for their money it must be forthcoming. How can a bank lend money and at the same time have it available to pay depositors? The answer lies in the bank's reserves of cash and of securities on which cash can immediately be raised, plus its other assets and especially its surplus of assets over what it owes depositors. In order to be always ready to pay depositors their money on demand the bank has the following items:

Cash. A substantial amount of the money deposited, instead of being put to work, is held as a reserve. Part of this is kept in the bank and part (in the case of member banks) is deposited with the federal reserve bank, where it can be obtained on a moment's notice.

Checks on other banks. A large part of a bank's deposits consist of checks drawn on other banks, which will be converted into cash as soon as they have passed through the clearing house or been otherwise collected. This requires one day.

United States government securities (bonds and notes) usually form part of the investments of a bank. As these are among the safest investments possible and are readily salable, they are an additional safeguard of the depositors' money.

Loans to individuals and corporations are secured by marketable collateral of a value substantially in excess of the amount loaned. If the value of the collateral declines the bank demands additional collateral in order to keep the loan secure. Such loans are very liquid, as they are repayable on demand whenever the bank asks for them.

Bonds of railroads, industrial and public utility corporations, etc., constitute another form of investment for the bank's funds. These can readily be sold and converted into cash should the occasion arise.

Loans to customers to enable them to carry on their business are largely secured by collateral and payable on the average in ninety days or less. The notes given for these loans can usually be discounted and converted into cash at any time.

Real estate and mortgages usually represent a small percentage of a bank's investments. While such assets are not as easily and quickly converted into cash as those previously mentioned, they constitute an additional guarantee of the bank's ability to meet demands upon it.

Bank building, furniture, etc., also represents the investment usually of a small proportion of the amount owed depositors.

Surplus is built up out of earnings and accumulated from year to year. Capital and surplus thus become an additional guarantee to depositors that their debts will be paid.

COTTON MARKETS

Cotton prices had a sharp advance and closed with a moderate recession from the best of the day with gains of 39 to 58 points. In Chicago gains were 45 to 56 points.

Buying developed that towards the last, mainly in covering shorts for the week. Weather reports over a greater part of the belt suggested a favorable crop progress. There were, however, some complaints of need of rain in south Texas. Trade reports from the east were more favorable. The impression prevailed that the bearish influences had been discounted. NEWS OF THE CROPS

There is freakish weather all over the country. On Friday the northwest was too dry and hot with abnormal temperatures. The west and southwest had temperatures of 95 to 102. It was 100 in some parts of Iowa, with the highest 102 at Cedar Rapids. There were freezing temperatures in parts of North Dakota and Minnesota Friday night and a cold wave with temperatures near freezing with rain or snow over a good part of North Dakota, was predicted for Saturday night. Colder over the southwest following the exceedingly high temperatures. It is impossible to tell how much injury has been done to the crops.

LeCount, the Stein, Alstrin & Co. crop expert, wired from Madison, South Dakota, "Drought situation in southern South Dakota rapidly becoming acute. Pastures burnt up. Some moisture still remains in cultivated fields, but crop is at standstill, showing effect of drought. Serious damage will result if rain does not come soon. Oats damaged by frost."

Winnipeg Free Press crop report, says conditions are generally satisfactory, and two weeks in advance of 1924. No increase in wheat acreage indicated. Germination appears good. In some districts of southern Alberta, winter rye is two feet high and heavy. Seeding coarse grains well advanced.

George C. Bryant's report to Jackson Bros. & Co., from Lincoln, Neb., said: "Nebraska wheat conditions about the same as on May 1. Starting to deteriorate with hot weather. Corn seeding practically completed. Oats going back."

PRIMARY RECEIPTS LARGER

Primary receipts of grains last week was the heaviest in several months, aggregating 12,441,000 bu, an increase of 4,156,000 bu over the previous week, and 2,978,000 bu, as compared with last year. In all they were 7 per cent above the five year average. There were gains practically in all grains for the week. Comparisons follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Wheat traders are mostly bullish on crop and weather conditions. The northwest and southwest were good buyers of July and September here, mostly the latter, and the largest local short sellers of Friday were said to have covered at the last, helping to strengthen values. The impression is that unless there is a radical change in crop news that values are to work irregularly higher.

Nearly all the new trade is going into September wheat. There was said to be buying by foreigners, which helped to create a more bullish feeling and advanced prices. For the time being, export news is only a secondary consideration.

Shorts in corn are nervous and are covering, finding little pressure from sellers. Indications are for a larger movement from the country this week, as local purchases of corn to arrive made on Saturday were for several hundred thousand bu, one house reporting around 100,000 bu bought. Bids on No. 2 yellow to arrive were advanced ½c yesterday to ½c over July.

A feature in the lard trade was the sale of 3,000,000 lbs of July and purchase of 3,000,000 lbs of September by the Anglo company, who offered to change 3,000,000 lbs more at the same prices.

A Baird & Warner Plan made this possible

OFF to college—"Good-bye, my boy, and good luck." The above illustration presents the son of a Baird & Warner investor of many years standing. In a recent letter he advises us that he is sending his boy to Ann Arbor on the coupons he clips from his Baird & Warner real estate bonds.

Wise father. As a young man he realized the responsibilities and demands of the future and the need for scientific building. Today he is independent and enjoying the "good things of life."

You, too, can safeguard the future if you only have the will. A Baird & Warner plan makes it possible for you to achieve financial independence regardless of your present income. For 70 years we have been investing the funds of thousands of Chicagoans, numbering three and four generations in a single family.

It will cost you nothing to learn all about a plan for the building of estates. Drop in our offices at 134 S. La Salle or write and one of our service men will call at your convenience.

UTILITY STOCKS HELP TO SPREAD INVESTMENT IDEA

BY SCRUTATOR.

Here is an estimate by an insider of the principal effects, internal and external, noted to date from the wider ownership of the securities of Illinois public utility corporations of varying types. This summary coincides with other expressions obtained by the writer.

"The campaigns for customer ownership have made capitalists out of great groups of people who previously owned nothing except a few household effects and insurance. Home owners and automobile owners have invested, but there is no doubt that these campaigns have started thousands on the road to acquiring other property.

"On the community the effects have been marked and varied. Investors have had hammered home to them the essentials of safe investment, safety of principal and dividends and the necessity of good management. It is becoming more difficult for the get rich quick swindler to operate in communities which have been thoroughly worked by the public utilities in the sale of their securities to customers.

"The ownership of such securities has tended to conserve local capital for local uses, thus scattering improvements more evenly in the American area and diffusing civilization, exactly as was accomplished by our original railroad building and ratemaking policies.

"Young couples making a safe first investment have their whole subsequent lives colored by the experience and their views as to business are healthy from the start. Where the first investment venture is in a swindle, and savings are wiped out early in life, the individual's whole subsequent viewpoint may be warped and frequently has been.

"People who have been thus swindled make up a large part of those who regard all business as crooked and employment only as a meal ticket. Two or three of them in a plant will reduce working efficiency notably, just as the presence of one or two radicals in a working force is felt in the output.

"Many employers have asked utility companies to come into their plants and sell securities.

"The vast majority of purchasers of utility securities never owned a stock or bond before, except Liberty bonds. About 34 per cent of the purchasers are women, 47 per cent men, while the remainder of the purchases are by churches, lodges, trust funds, and joint tenancies.

"Only a small per cent of such purchasers have ever sold their securities. The 650,000 holders of utility securities in Illinois are the largest group of security owners in all probability, because such a large number of the small holders of Liberties sold after the war."

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

The trend of the local unlisted securities market continued upward last week, but with trading in most issues on a rather limited scale on account of the scarcity of offerings around current prices.

Acme Steel Goods advanced to sales around 42, at which price more stock was wanted with small offerings at 43. A good demand was noted for Benjamin Electric preferred at 98½ with little stock appearing in the market. Bucyrus common continued its upward movement, sales at 161 representing an advance of about 6 points for the week. The preferred was about 3 points better at 107 bid, 109 asked. After being traded in around 142, Congress Hotel was wanted at 150, another 10 points improvement.

Federal Electric common was quoted 6 to 7 with little stock actually changing hands; while the preferred was in demand at 31½ to 32½. W. F. Hall Printing moved up to 21½ bid, offered at 22. Elgin National Watch was firm at 70, extra dividend. By-Products Coke was neglected, stock being offered at 65 with buyers at 63. Interstate Iron and Steel was traded in exdividend 90½, closing with this price bid and offerings at 93. Albert Pick preferred changed hands between 95½ and 96½, and Fairbanks Morse between 104 and 105, exdividend. H. O. Stone Units sold at 120, up 10 points. Butler Brothers remained within a narrow range at 33 to 33¼.

Numerous advances continued to feature the public utility group, American Light and Traction moving up to sales at 172, and later reacting to closing transactions around 168. American Super Power "B" scored 5 points to sales at 40½, and closed at 38½ bid, 39 asked. Commonwealth Power Corporation common was a feature, high sales taking place at 173, an advance of almost 30 points, which was well held, as the close was steady at 163 bid, 165 asked. The warrants advanced from 57 to 80, while the preferred ranged between 82½ and 85. Lehigh Power Securities moved up about 7 points to sales at 132. The second preferred sold at 83. Considerable activity was noted in Western Power which rose over 10 points to sales at 53; the preferred was traded between 92 and 93.

United Light and Railways 6½ per cent prior lien preferred reflected the advance in United Light and Power Class "A" common, selling up to a high of 134 and closing with stock offered at this price and buyers at 130. United Light and Power warrants sold between 30 and 32. While trading was in limited volume, American Public Utilities common reached a high of 90 and was later offered at 90 with buyers at 85. The participating preferred was steady at 81 to 82, and the prior lien quiet at 89 to 91. A better demand existed for Arizona Power common at 24½, up 2—with little stock appearing in the market. Although Puget Sound advanced from 51 to 59, it was later offered at 57 with little stock showing on the buying side.

$2,500,000

THE NEW WHITTIER

First Mortgage 6½% Serial Gold Bonds

Security: These bonds will be secured by a direct closed first mortgage on the land owned in fee simple located on Burns Drive, between the Detroit River and Jefferson Avenue East, Detroit, Michigan, and the fourteen-story apartment hotel building in process of construction thereon, together with the furnishings and furniture. Included in the security is a 250-car fireproof garage building which will add greatly to the convenience of the residents. The security, including land, building, furnishings and furniture, has been appraised at $4,550,000.

Location: The New Whittier will be erected South and on the river side of the present Whittier, in the choicest portion of the exclusive Indian Village District. To the East, the new building will front on Burns Drive, which separates it from Memorial Park. A short distance to the West is the beautiful Owen Park. In the immediate neighborhood are the picturesque homes and estates of Indian Village, and to the South is an unobscured view of Detroit River, Belle Isle Park and Lake St. Clair.

Building: The building will be fourteen stories in height, of fireproof reinforced concrete construction. The first story of the street elevation will be faced with Indiana limestone, and all the remainder of the exterior walls with face brick, trimmed in terra cotta. The building will contain 208 apartments of one, two and three rooms each, exclusive of the maids' and chauffeurs' rooms.

Summary: In the New Whittier, residents will be able to enjoy all the advantages of a luxurious hotel, the conveniences of a home, as well as the recreational facilities of a country club. The unusual atmosphere of refinement, the high character of the building, combined with the exceptional Park and River front location, assure the immediate success of this property. The fact, that the present Whittier is over 95% occupied with a waiting list of applications, indicates what the demand for accommodations will be. The constantly increasing value of the land in this exclusive and restricted section, together with splendid income producing character of the building, are features which will appeal strongly to the conservative bond buyer.

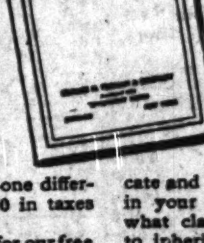
YOUR SECURITIES! Are Now Open to a Score of Overlapping Inheritance Taxes

Appalling shrinkage may have taken place in your securities. Forty-six states have passed recent legislation that vitally affects the size of your estate. Many of these inheritance tax laws overlap and reach far across the country from one state to another. You may be holding stocks or bonds of prominent corporations that are today subject to as many as six state inheritance taxes.

FREE BOOK Saves As Much As ⅓ of Your Estate



A total tax assessment of 25% is not uncommon. 50% and more is quite possible. Small holdings frequently sacrifice more than large ones. Everyone who owns a share of stock should awake to the possible need for rearrangement of his investments.

A $400,000 estate was taxed $152,000. A $100,000 estate was taxed $24,300. Twenty-one different jurisdictions took $700,000 in taxes from an estate of $3,000,000.

The simple act of sending for our free book—"Investor's Inheritance Tax Guide"—may save your estate thousands of dollars. State inheritance taxes vary according to charters, domiciles and degrees of consanguinity of investors and their beneficiaries.

Post yourself on these little-known laws. Scrutinize your investments in the light of this book. Weed out the ones that are subject to multiple taxation. Reinvest in securities that are safe from the new menace of excessive inheritance taxes.

George M. Forman & Company are competent to point out to you the duplicate and triplicate tolls that lie hidden in your holdings, and to advise you what classes of securities are subject to inheritance taxes only in the state of your domicile. We want every investor to feel free to ask for this counsel. There is no obligation. Clip and mail coupon for your copy of "Investor's Inheritance Tax Guide."

New York, May 23.—(AP)—The stock market was strong in spots today despite an unusually large volume of profit taking and short selling. More than a score of issues were lifted to new peak prices for the year. Public participation was again on a broad scale, total sales running above 940,000 shares for the two hour session with brokers reporting very heavy buying from the middle west.

Professional traders were quick to take profit in recent strong spots and to buy other stocks considered "out of line" with the general market. The bear selling was based on belief that a technical reaction was warranted after three weeks of rising prices. Operators on the long side were encouraged, however, by the continued ease of money, stiffening commodity prices and more cheerful trade news.

Oil Shares in Demand.

Reports from the oil trade that an increase in Mid-Continent crude prices is imminent brought fresh buying into those shares, but the advance was held in check by realizing. Tobaccos gave a good demonstration of group strength. Paper stocks were bid up briskly just before the close, International Paper being run up 3½ points to 72½, the highest price in several years, while Union Bag and Paper soared nearly 8 points to 57¾ and then eased to 56.

Other strong spots in the industrial list included American Can, Nash Motors, America Tobacco, May Department Stores, Consolidated Gas, Wright Aeroplane, National Distillers Products, National Dairy Products, United States Industrial Alcohol, Simmons company, International Shoe, Brown Shoe and Pierce-Arrow common and prior preferred, all of which broke through to new 1925 maximum prices.

Rail Group Is Picked Over.

Buying of the rails was of a selective character, with the best demand noted for those issues which are expected to make a favorable showing in their April earnings statements, to be published next week. Special strength in Lackawanna revived rumors of a possible distribution of its Glen Alden Coal company bond holdings.

Bond trading ended today with prices again riding the crest of the week's advance, which carried the "averages" of represenative issues to the highest point in several years. Buying of railroad issues centered in bonds of the western carriers, including Chicago Great Western, Chicago, Terre Haute and Southeast, and Denver and Rio Grande obligations. Strong spots in the public utility list included Laclede Gas 5½'s, Northern Ohio Traction 6's, and Tennessee Electric 6's, while speculative interest in industrials shifted from the oils to such issues as American Sugar 6's, International Paper 5's, and Midvale Steel 5's.

Curb Market Is Active.

Trading on the curb exchange today was in large volume with a fairly strong undertone continuing in the more prominent industrial stocks. At the opening the tendency of the general list was inclined to easiness, but renewed buying appeared on recessions with resultant rallies on compartively small business. Petroleum shares yielded gradually on small transactions. There was a number of particularly strong issues, however, among the miscellaneous oil issues.

Foreign exchanges held relatively steady in quiet trading. Demand sterling ruled virtually unchanged around $4.85¾, and French francs around 5.11 cents.

A decrease of $19,934,000 loans is shown in today's weekly statement of the New York clearing house banks, despite the active buying of stocks which has gone on. Demand deposits decreased $27,048,000, and time deposits gained $207,000. The surplus reserve decreased $14,237,360, leaving a balance of $41,439,280.

WALL STREET NOTES

Argentina had closed negotiations with a banking group headed by J. P. Morgan & Co. for flotation of $45,000,000 refunding loan. The proceeds will be used to consolidate a number of short term issues, three of which mature this year. The transaction marks two important changes in Argentina's financial policy—the establishment of new banking connections and a switch from short term to long term financing.

The financial district hears that an agreement has been reached between Hupp Motors and Murray Body corporation by which Murray Body takes over the Hupp plant at Racine, Wis., and will produce exclusively all Hupp bodies for five years. The price involved in the transaction was not revealed but it is believed to exceed $1,000,000.

The decline in April earnings of the St. Louis-San Francisco railway is only a temporary situation, according to President J. M. Kurn. He attributed the reduction in freight revenue to heavy movement of cattle from the dry sections of Texas for pasture in Kansas and Oklahoma, all moving under low rates, which cut earnings about $7 a car.

Ernest Parkinson, vice president of the U. S. Rubber company, said he looked for the present high price of rubber to continue for some time and that advances in tire prices were inevitable. The company's business was running well ahead of last year, he said, and he expected better than $5 a share would be earned on the common stock in 1925.

Clarence Dillon of Dillon, Read & Co., said he expected business of Dodge Brothers, Inc., for the first six months this year to be double what it was last year. This improvement should more than continue throughout the year.

Charles W. Nash, president of the Nash Motors company, says no changes in the company's financial structure are contemplated. He placed second quarter earnings at least $500,000 in excess of the first quarter, when net income was $3,099,000. The May production schedule at Milwaukee and Kenosha calls for 8,500 cars, against 3,000 cars in May last year.

CHICAGO BANK CLEARINGS

Chicago bank clearings last week totaled $676,600,000, a decline of $27,300,000 from the preceding week but an increase of $108,000,000 over the corresponding week in 1924. Balances last week totaled $59,100,000, an increase of $11,000,000 over the preceding week and also a gain of $13,600,000 over the corresponding week last year. Seip-Schmidt Group Gets Cottage Grove State Bank

The Cottage Grove State bank has been added to the chain of outlying banks controlled by Emil G. Seip, president of the Illinois Bankers Securities company; Walter E. Schmidt, treasurer of the sanitary district of Chicago, and associates. With the change of control and management, Mr. Seip was elected president to succeed Dr. Thomas H. Kelly, and Allan M. Summers was elected vice president to succeed Harold N. Snapp. Albert H. Johnson was elected cashier and secretary, and Howard Ellis was appointed attorney. Other officers and directors remain unchanged.

The Western State bank has purchased a site at the northwest corner of 56th avenue and West 22d street, and will erect a new bank building.

90 YEARS Experience

Where will THEY find SAFETY?

OF COURSE, you may have luck with speculative investments. You may be able to watch the markets, buying and selling at just the right time to make money and avoid loss—but how about your wife and children? Have they your knowledge—and luck?

Some day you will leave them a lock-box full of securities that you have bought. Will these help to support your loved ones or cause them untold worry, disappointment and loss? Remember they won't have your investment skill. The chances you take may ruin them.

It has been estimated that 85% of all insurance money paid in bulk to beneficiaries is lost within seven years. It may not be as bad as this, but catastrophe certainly awaits the inexperienced who make speculative investments.

Why not then be sensible and guard those dear to you from such a deplorable misfortune? Clean up your holdings now. Get rid of everything speculative. Let us help you.

Bonds That Never Lost a Dollar

Why not drop in and discuss this matter with us? Your safety deposit box filled with our First Mortgage Bonds would be a source of comfort, not anxiety, to you. The portion of your estate consisting of securities and the income from it would always remain intact. What is more, your wife and children, seeing the soundness of your judgment, would buy nothing but absolutely dependable bonds—our bonds that never lost a dollar.

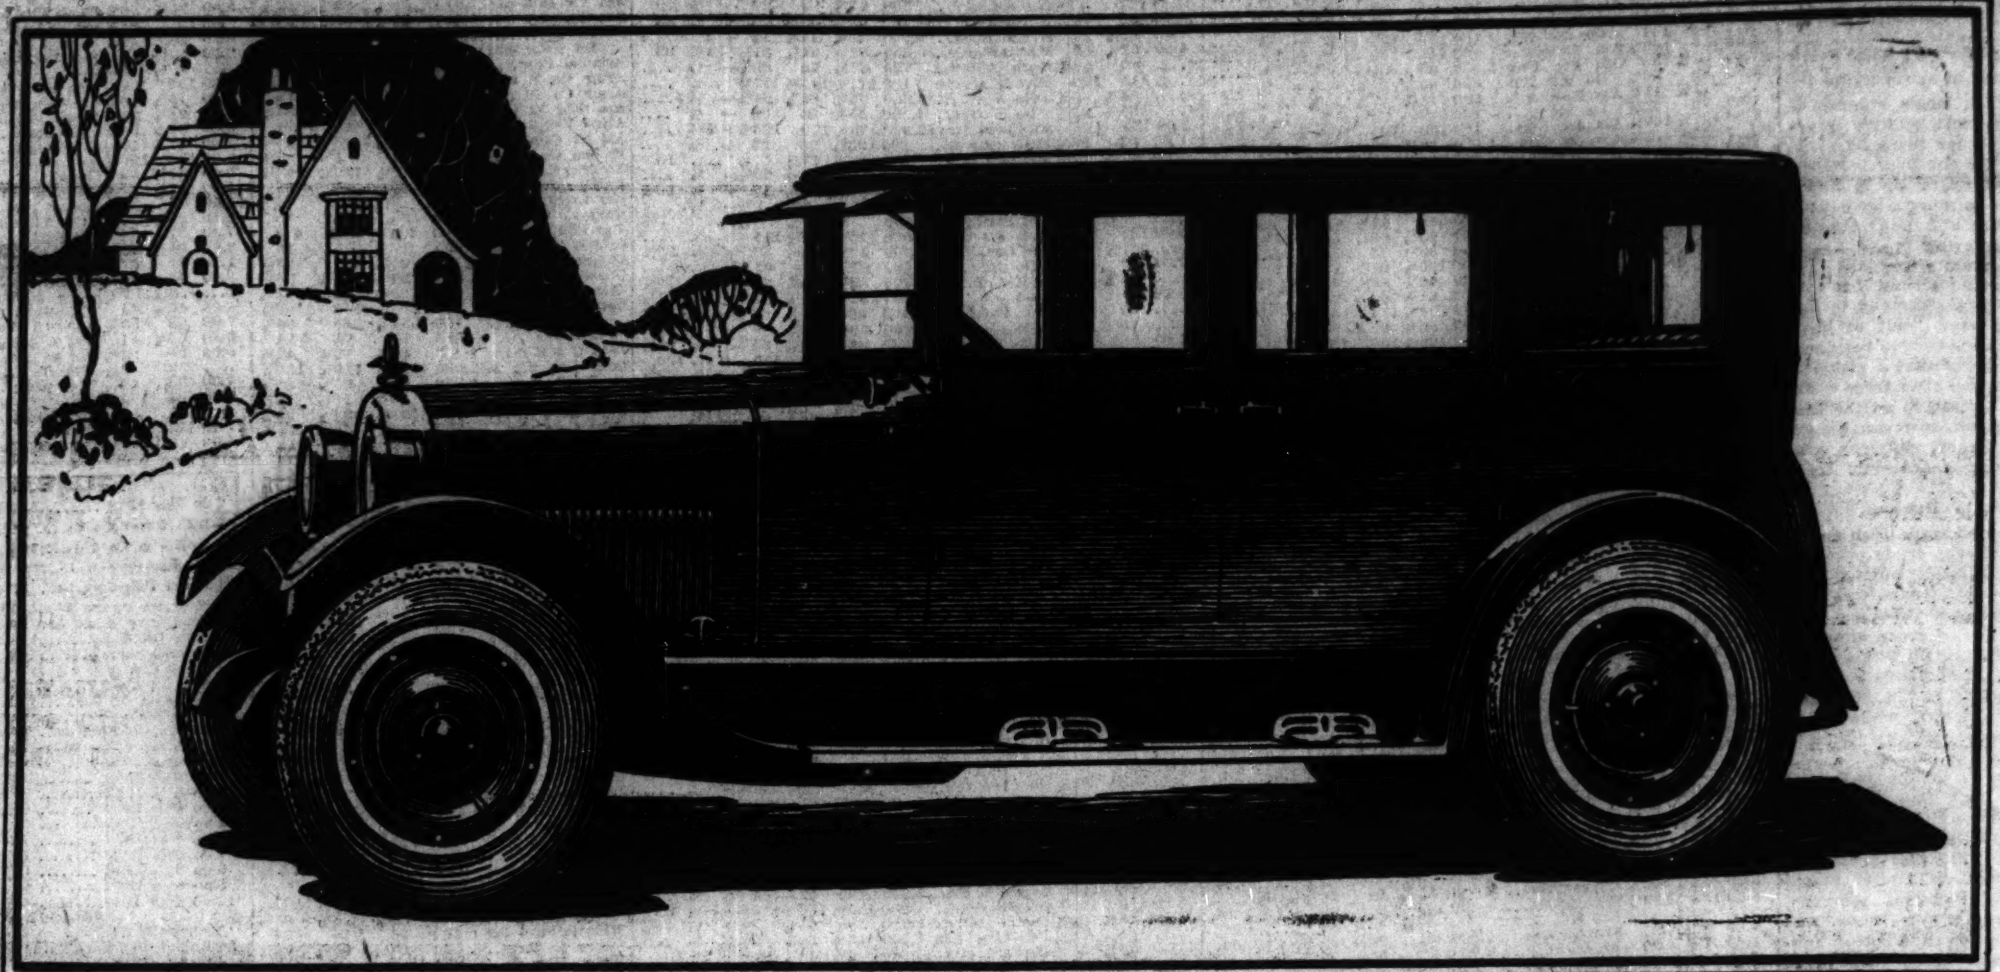
The Reo Safety Control In Chicago

One Of The Exclusive Reo Features In The Gold Standard Sedan—$2085,
At Lansing, Add Tax—
Is The REO Safety Control

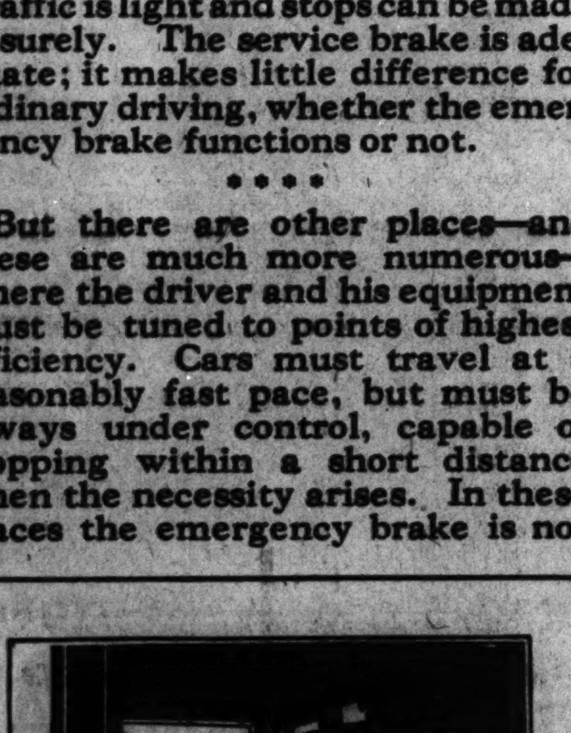


A discussion of the meaning of this distinctive Reo feature to people driving in the city where human-faculties and mechanical methods of control must be co-ordinated to the highest degree.

There are still some places where people can drive without much thought for their control equipment. Traffic is light and stops can be made leisurely. The service brake is adequate; it makes little difference for ordinary driving, whether the emergency brake functions or not.

* * * *

But there are other places—and these are much more numerous—where the driver and his equipment must be tuned to points of highest efficiency. Cars must travel at a reasonably fast pace, but must be always under control, capable of stopping within a short distance when the necessity arises. In these places the emergency brake is not necessarily used often; but when it is needed, it must be right.



* * * *

Chicago is our best example of the latter type of motorists' stamping grounds. There is no room in Chicago for the driver who is not alert, and no room for faulty brake equipment.

* * * *

But while it is necessary that drivers be wide-awake, there is nothing to be gained by complicating their jobs with equipment that works against the instincts rather than with them.

And that is what ordinary systems of braking do. Because—pushing a service brake pedal forward and pulling an emergency brake lever backward represent opposed motions!

* * * *

The Reo Safety Control works with the instincts by making the very motions that follow sudden discovery of potential danger stop the car.

* * * *

Before designing the Safety Control, in which both brakes as well as the clutch are operated by the feet, leaving the hands on the steering wheel where they belong, Reo engineers studied the actions of "back-seat drivers." Even though many of them were used to driving their own cars, when their instincts warned them that the car in whose back seat they were riding should be stopped quickly, they jammed both feet hard against the front seat or against the foot rest. Not one was ever observed reaching for a hand brake.

* * * *

On the strength of this, Reo engineers designed the Safety Control in its present form, making it possible for Reo drivers to disengage the clutch, apply the service brake, and apply the emergency brake all with that instinctive pressure observed in the "back-seat" tests.

The exceptionally clean front compartment obtained by eliminating the hand-brake is a by-product and a welcome one, too.

* * * *

Aside from the matter of working with, rather than against, the instincts, there is one other respect in which the Safety Control scores.

* * * *

Tests conducted by the Bureau of Standards in Washington a few months ago proved conclusively that the hand brake is a badly neglected piece of mechanism, and that in many cases it is no brake at all.

* * * *

This is attributed to the fact that hand brakes are used so seldom that their adjustment is neglected. It is not natural for drivers to use them except in parking their cars, and accordingly they are seldom aware of the fact that their brakes are nearly useless.

* * * *

With the Safety Control, in which the emergency brake as well as the service brake is under foot, there is a tendency to use the emergency daily. As soon as the brakes get the least bit out of adjustment the driver knows it. Every time he uses the brake he is reminded of it, and it is not long before the condition is corrected.

* * * *

Good, reliable brakes are a necessity everywhere and especially in Chicago. Reo's Safety Control gives the most positive check there is to brake conditions—and provides a braking system that is applied most naturally.

* * * *

These are assets extremely valuable and not apt to be under rated be Chicagoans.

POOR HAND BRAKES

Tests made recently by the Bureau of Standards on about 200 cars picked at random in Washington, with a view to setting safe standards of braking performance resulted as follows (All readings in feet to stop from 20 m. p. h.):

FOOT BRAKES ON DRY ASPHALT

	Number of Cars	Per Cent of Total	Average Distance to Stop
Poor (50 ft. or over)	32	18	58.05 ft.
Fair (40 to 50 ft.)	43	23	42.8 ft.
Good (30 to 40 ft.)	79	44	32.6 ft.
Excellent (30 ft. or under	27	15	27.36 ft.

Best stop 17 ft., poorest 80 ft., average 45.4 ft.

HAND BRAKES ON DRY ASPHALT

	Number of Cars	Per Cent of Total	Average Distance to Stop
Poor (50 ft. or over)	107	70.8	90.0 ft.
Fair (40 to 50 ft.)	17	11.25	42.6 ft.
Good (30 to 40 ft.)	19	12.6	36.2 ft.
Excellent (30 ft. or under)	8	5.3	29.4 ft.

Best stop 25 ft., poorest stop 200 ft., average 137.6 ft.

Certainly this is not a very creditable record for hand brakes—over 70 per cent classed as poor, only 12.6 per cent as good and but 5.3 per cent making a really creditable performance.

This bears out exactly what has been said in the past about the inadequacy of hand brakes on most American cars. One engineer has characterized them as "nickel plated levers attached to wires with a little bit of faith at the far end." Isn't it time the industry got busy and did something about it?

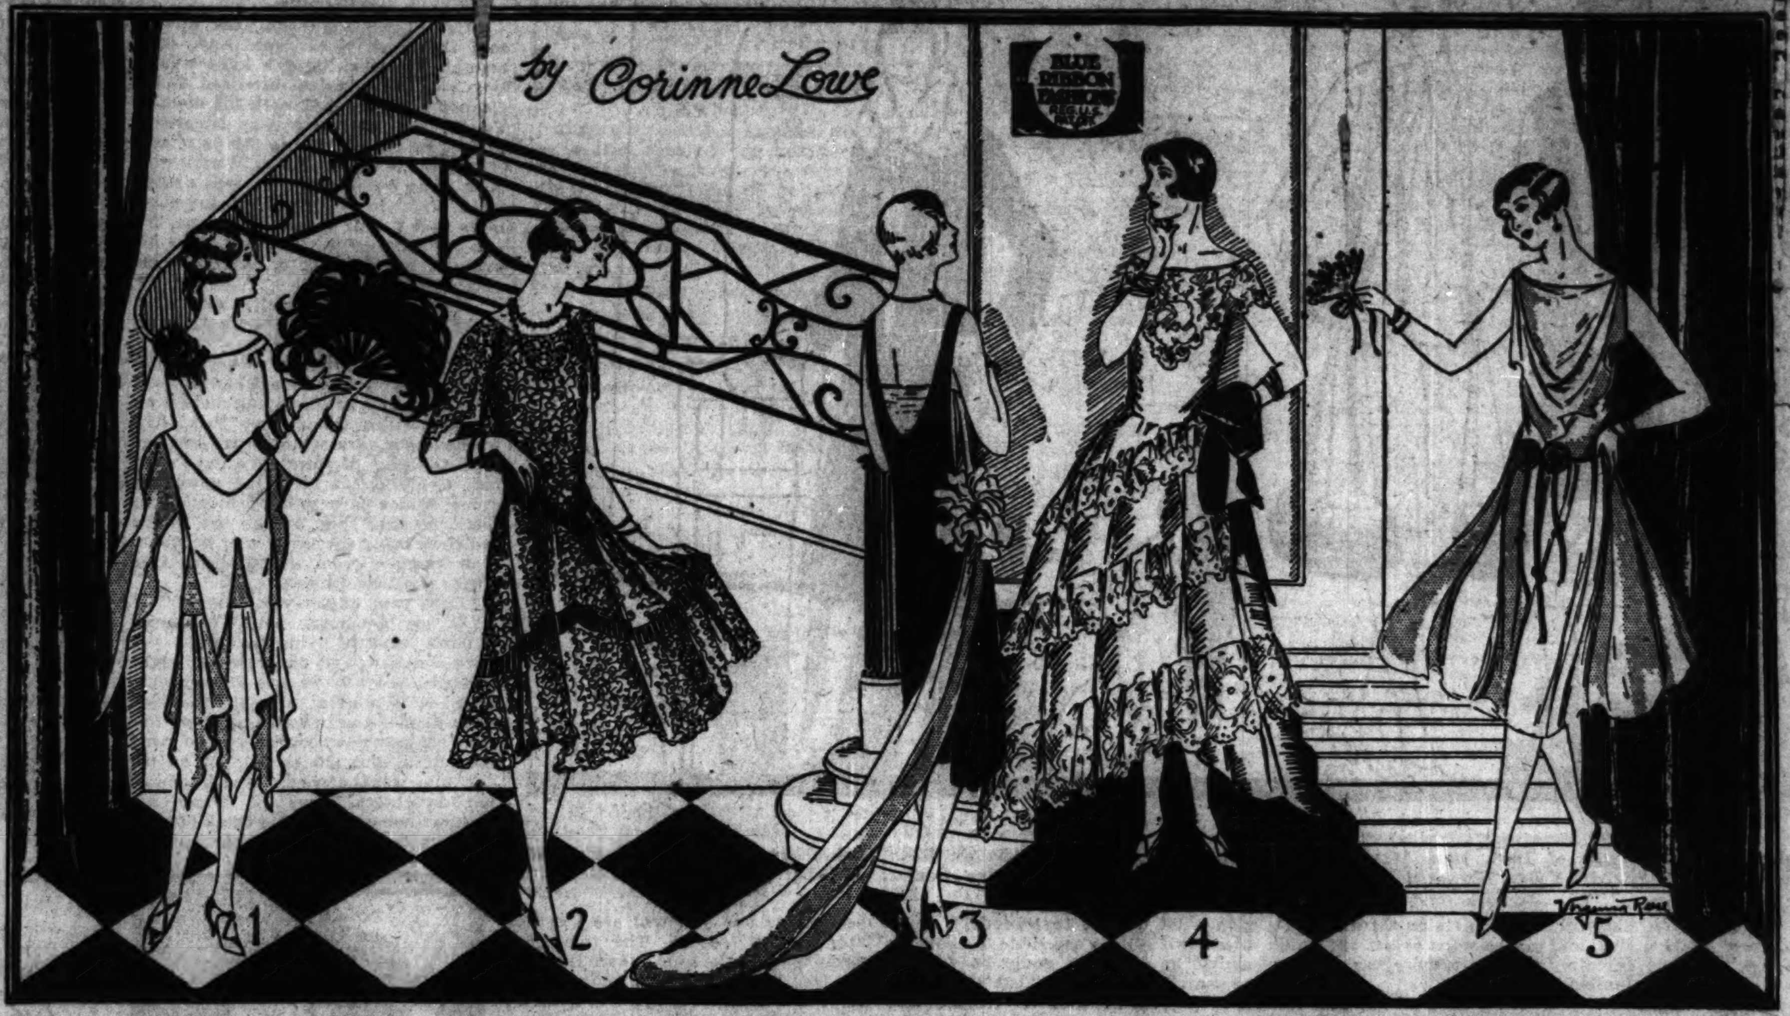
THESE KEEP IN STEP WITH THE SPRING DANCE

by Corinne Lowe



To a blonde satin foundation Philippe and Gaston affix skirt and shoulder draperies of blonde chiffon. The one accent of color is marked by a large red poppy on the right shoulder. Next, an imported model affirms in a golden brown lace over flesh color satin the popularity of full skirt, molded bodice and shoulder cape. The trimming consists of finely plaited bands of flesh satin. Naturally, we don't feel like editing "blue pencil blue" chiffon when Louise Boulanger achieves it with a rose color chiffon sash starting under the arm and weighted with a huge flower of matching chiffon. The vestee of plaited white chiffon gains added distinction through matching blue ribbons tying in front. The slanting lines of real white lace on a period frock of white taffeta are balanced by a peak of untrimmed material on the opposite side. A black velvet bow affords the contrast. Last, Patou designs in the favored pervenche blue a chiffon model touched with silver ribbon.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—I should start my own version of a certain famous nursery ballad, not with "Mary had a little lamb," but with "Mary had a great deal of lamb." Also I should bring it straight up to date by saying she was given to tasting, not the apple, but the pineapple. Such alterations of the classic have been prompted by some tragedies which I have lately witnessed. Twice in one week I have gone out to dinner to find my respective hostesses nibbling at a single lamb chop and a slice of pineapple. While I have gambolled through all the various courses of a swell repast, these aspiring characters have limited themselves to the said chop and fruit. Furthermore, they have informed me with sobs in their voices that their breakfasts and lunches consist of the same bill of fare.

Perhaps if you are astute you may have already suspected that the purpose of the chop and the pineapple is to reduce. This theory is entirely correct. It is the latest fad of Paris in the way of dieting, and its devotees assure me the system will do more than an unhappy love affair to change your figure from Chippendale to Sheraton.

And what has all this got to do with fashions in general and evening clothes in particular? Simply everything. There was probably never a period when a slim figure was more necessary to an effective wearing of clothes. Let us take, to begin with, the tailored overcoats that are prescribed by the Paris mode. If you haven't a boy figure to go with the boyish coat, you are almost boy-cotted. You look like a wandering mushrom wild. Here my typewriter quivers with emotion, for I myself have gained twenty pounds, and I have tried on said boyish coats.

As to the modern dance frocks, let us take them in their essential details. They have waistlines just trembling on the brink of being normal. They have skirts which are excessively short and which begin their fullness often just below the waistline. They are addicted to capes, and often the bodice is molded—not, of course, in the manner of the 1880 basque, but snugly enough to betray any short-comings of the wearer's figure. Here is absolutely the new dance frock silhouette that is being cast by the hour.

Now it goes without saying that a frock of this ilk cannot be worn by any save the possessors of the coveted boyish physique. Those who have five pounds excess avoirdupois are almost sure to look that terrible word—bunchy! Even the shoulder cape is a challenge, for this detail always gives an impression of breadth. Is it any wonder, then, that most of us take to dieting before we take ourselves to dressmakers and shops for our summer outfits?

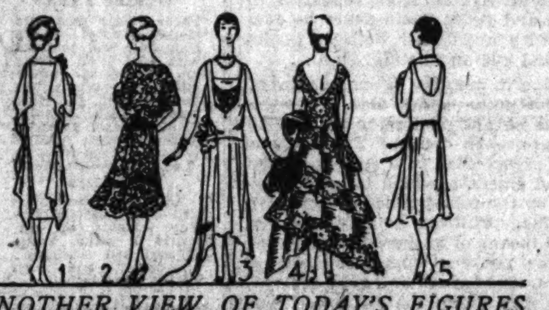
I have directed this page chiefly to the girls who expect to attend some commencement festivities next month and, save for the one period frock sketched, the drawings all bear out my words concerning the trend of the season's dance frock. To this word concerning line I now hasten to add one concerning fabric. Chiffon, by all means! Never more, in fact, was it more impressively a case of chiff-on with the dance. The truth of it is that this cloudlike material is perhaps better adapted to convey the message of exquisite tint and dominant style points than is any other material. When you see the full skirted, shorter waisted dancing mode of the present in chiffon, you see it at its best.

But you can do right by the prom in various other fabrics to which fashion has also given her approval. Among these is mousseline de soie, which is used enthusiastically by the French designers in this province. There is also some satin and taffeta and a great deal of lace.

If I were a young girl going to commencement dances next month, I might possibly be confused, but as I fulfill neither of these conditions I can speak with the wisdom of absolute detachment. I think I should select a chiffon in some shade of pink. The shade might be the faintest possible blush or it might look like a gouty old genletman's wrath. But it would be in this tint. And why? Simply because pink is so far the most esteemed tone of the dance floor.

Next to this comes either white or blue. After all, too, I can't say whether I should be so firm about that pink—not when I was given a chance at either ciel or pervenche blue. For nothing—not even Peter Paul Reuben himself—was ever so kind to blonde tints as are these shades.

At the right of the page Patou has developed a typical mode in that pervenche blue—we call it periwinkle in our language—and he has let the exquisite tint express itself without any oratory of trimming save the narrow girdle of silver ribbon with its three short ends touched with matching flowers and its two spirals of the silver in the direct front. The skirt of this is frankly full and the waistline frankly normal. The one whimsicality is found in that kind of biblike drapery which in the front alone defines a V-shaped section. Simple and charming, lovely of hue, and essentially youthful of spirit, this Patou model represents supremely the latest frock step in the dance.



ANOTHER VIEW OF TODAY'S FIGURES.

It seems to me in looking over the clothes now being shown that godets figure much less conspicuously than some time ago in the production of the full skirt. Just a frankly full skirt is frequently joined sometimes with the aid of rows of shirring to the shortened corsage. Tiers are also in high repute. The apron front is quite ofen utilized, and we find a thousand and one enditions of that familiar theme. the floating drapery.

This last named device is the one selected by Philippe and Gaston for the frock of blonde satin at the extreme left. As quite frequently happens, the satin foundation is combined with chiffon draperies. These are in this case of matching tint, and their application to the front and sides of the skirt is characteristic of the moment. Let it be said right here, in fact, that a tremendous amount of ingenuity is exercised upon this detail of just how the draperies be affixed.

No operatic tenor was ever more addicted to shoulder capes than are the dance frocks of the hour. In this Philippe and Gaston model described the cape is abjured in favor of long flying strands of blonde chiffon attached to the shoulders and partially covering the back. These flying draperies are much more becoming to the slender girl who wishes to appear taller than is the shoulder cape, for the latter subtracts rather than adds to our allotted inches. You will see from the flower appearing on one shoulder that this botanical exploit is still as good as ever. Here the bloom consists of a big red poppy, exceedingly effective against the blonde background.

A good example of the "mold of form," which it is possible for any ambitious bodice to obtain this season, is afforded by a glimpse of the imported model second from the left. Behold this corsage—the way it is fitted and the manner in which it points at the front—and agree that it descends in the line royal from our great-grandmother's basque. To soften the effect again the cunning little shoulder cape is recruited. Once more in this model we encounter the skirt which is just candidly full and which doesn't rely upon draperies, godets, or tiers to convey its intention.

The medium is of lace—a lovely golden brown mesh—made up over a slip of flesh colored satin. These blonde and golden brown laces are much to the fore again in evening modes and their alliance with flesh or a deeper pink is given special sanction. The blush of the foundation is echoed in the charming decorative impulse that defines the waistline and bands the skirt with finely plaited flesh satin. This model provides quite a study in counterpart. The dip of the bodice in front is approached by a point of the lace, and similarly in the back V of the cape reacts upon the band in another upward movement.

As against these extremely short little dance frocks of the hour, the period frock continues to maintain all its former authority. In considering this long skited bouffante mode, however, one should always remember that not every girl or woman is a talented period frock wearer. Of the girl who is either five feet two or five feet nine it has always seemed to me that the period frock took unfair advantage. Somehow it makes "the daughter of the gods" look a bit too mountainous—no matter how slim she is. And the extremely petite need more length of line unaccompanied by such breadth of effect.

The ideal wearer of the period frock is the slim girl of medium height—she who stands five feet six or seven in her shoes. To this type it is nearly always wonderfully becoming, and she who wore the white taffeta frock second from the right qualified exactly. She is one of New York's most popular debutantes, and she was ready, not only with the height to carry off that bouffante skirt, but also with the coloring to make white look its best. That is to say, her hair is jet black and her skin the most dazzling white. As she appeared in the ballroom in this white taffeta with its diagonal ruffles of real lace and its bow of black velvet she was a worthy subject of a master's brush.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

OBSERVED AT THE RACES.

By Bettina Bedwell

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Foulard is a winning fabric in spring styles. The fabric makers have spotted it for a favorite, imitating the celebrated markings of the leopard, and bringing back the old time polka dot, which has been associated with foulard ever since the first piece was woven. Most of us think of it as a practical silk to be made up into an everyday dress; one which has the genuine virtue of durability, without any of the useless, but, O, so important—charm of elegance.

The usefulness of foulard, however, can be camouflaged, so it delights the eye without suggesting its plainer virtues, and this is what the Parisienne is doing to it this spring. The chief aid in accomplishing the change is fur, which, as everybody knows, does add tone to almost any garment. In combination with the airy freshness of foulard it makes for a decidedly distinctive effect. Of course, they don't use the ordinary furs when they set about dolling up foulard in Paris, nor do they use fur in the ordinary way—that's where the difference comes in. All of those novelty furs that came into prominence last season are beautifully adapted to the spring ensemble, especially if it be of silk imprimé, and French silk makers have thoughtfully printed their silks to match the markings of the fur, so you can get tiger printed foulard, panther, leopard and karondoucki. This, in combination with the fur it apes, makes for originality, and increases the sum total of elegance.

Last Sunday at Auteuil, when the first great race of the Paris season was run—the Prix du President de la Republique—I saw a number of these fur patterned foulard ensembles trimmed with the fur that inspired their designs, and they were about the most stared after of all the parade that represented the best of spring fashions.

The smartest of all was the ensemble shown in our first offering, a costume from Worth, worn by Mme. la Princesse Faucigny-Lucinge. The coat is made of leopard printed foulard, our old standby, all tricked out with this new kind of spotting and trimmed with the finest of leopard fur. You could scarcely tell where the silk ended and the fur began, except for a certain added richness and luster. The long shawl collar of fur blended beautifully into the body of the coat, as did also the shaped bands of leopard that finished the flaring sleeves. A single brilliant purple flower on the fur lapel, and a small hat of purple formed the inimitable touch of color contrast. The cut of the coat is particularly smart, with its circular sides and its semifitted bodice portion, balanced by the flaring sleeves. Worn over a simple dress of beige crepe de chine, plaited from a deep shoulder yoke and belted with leopard, it is an ensemble of rare distinction.

If you are one of those women to whom figured silk is attractive but dangerous, because of a lack of height or too many inches of hip measure, you will find a compromise in our second offering, another successful race frock, that does a lot to aid those lacks and excesses in the matter of inches. There is a smart slip of yellow and blue foulard, with modified bishop sleeves of plain yellow, and over this is worn a sleeveless knee length tunic of dark blue kasha, cut, as you will observe, to imitate the Chinese shift, with a generous V in front that allows the smart foulard a good measure of visibility, but not too much. The little trick of the V results in diminishing hip defects, and the side slits, which stop just below the hip line help along this same cause.

Richness is added to the whole costume by the tunic bands of shaved lamb, that are tinted to appear yellowish. They give solidity of design, and the fur helps to increase the costume's elegance. A tunic such as is shown here also acts as a transformation, and can be worn or left off; which certainly does give more variety to a limited wardrobe.

But fashion is not all fur and foulard. Many women will not wear a figured material, no matter how chic or charming it is, preferring the plain materials that can get by a great many more times without becoming conspicuous or being dated. For such the simple distinction of our third offering is particularly appealing, and it is especially attractive for the tall woman with generous curves. At the races this ensemble was worn by a regular young Juno, who could carry off well the classic lines that reveal the art of Drecoll.

The cut of the coat is just varied enough from the familiar lines of the season to make this costume unusually elegant. It is fitted above the hips and flaring below, the flare being accentuated by a wide band of blue fox. Drecoll manages cleverly to take away the super-dignity of this silhouette by the device of a soft turnover collar and tie, made of the same bois du rose kasha that is used for the rest of the costume. Those fitted sleeves, that button about the wrist, are daring for a coat and will not permit of more than a wisp of sleeve beneath, but they do give a lot of chic to the effect. The dress half of this ensemble is about as simple as anything could be without becoming monotonous, but the kasha gilet that is laid over the front of the waist and attached by means of rows of bois du rose bone buttons prevents anything like that.

The whole is the kind of costume you can wear to any daytime affair in Paris and be sure your clothes will be among those noted, without getting near the conspicuous class. It is the kind of outfit that six out of ten smart Parisiennes live in from luncheon to dinner, and yet it could never be confused with any other because of its individual cut and detail.

The fourth member of our quartet of race costumes comes also in kasha and has several claims to distinction that cannot be denied. The color is a new green, that is a cross between nile and emerald, which is beautifully set off by the folded collar of imitation chinchilla. Fullness is added to this coat by means of gathered sections set in below pockets, which are unique affairs made of green and gray foulard, embroidered along the pattern. Naturally, the dress that accompanies this coat is also of gray and green foulard, as is also the lining of the coat.

The closing of the coat merits special mention as one you will see more of later in the season. The two sides barely meet at the hips, where they are attached by invisible fastenings, and the V above this closing lets a bit of the gray gilet of the dress show.

The Adventures of Fuzzy Wuzzy

The Ant Astonishes Fuzzy Wuzzy.

BY RAYMOND KELLY.

"EXCUSE me, little bear," said a wee small voice, "I dislike to disturb you, but you are sitting on the city. Would you mind moving over two or three feet into the suburbs?"

Fuzzy Wuzzy did as he was requested, and then looked about him to see who the speaker could be, but he could see nobody at all.

"Here I am, right on your knee," said the small voice again and, sure enough, there on Fuzzy's knee was a tiny, red ant, wiggling his head as he cleaned his front feet with his mouth. To say the little bear was surprised at hearing an ant talk to him is to tell only half the truth. Fuzzy Wuzzy was more than surprised. He was astonished, which is equal to being surprised three and a half times. However, he was too polite to give any signs that he was not in the habit of talking with ants every day.

"Have you really a city, and is it really so close to here?" he asked the ant.

"O, yes. It is, in fact, rather a large town; there are about a hundred and fifty thousand of us living here and we have many industries. Then, too, we have our farms, which are just beyond the edge of town. We have over half a million cattle. Our cows are green, which is a great protection to them, because they live on the leaves and their being the same color prevents their enemies from seeing them. Our cows are called aphides."

"Does your city have a mayor?"

"O, my goodness, no! We simply couldn't think of living that way. We have a queen, and she rules by right of birth, because we are all her children. It is a great pleasure to us to work for her and to wait upon her. She is an old lady now, coming twelve years next June, but she is as spry as the day she was hatched. Not a one of her daughters, some of whom are queens themselves, would think of making any decision of importance, without first consulting her."

"You speak of many industries," said the little bear. "What are some of them?"

"Well, we have building and city repairing. This takes a great deal of our time, because so many people and other animals pay no attention at all to where they are walking. It's a great annoyance to spend days digging tunnels and carrying out the heavy grains of sand only to have some clumsy person step on your work nad ruin it. I've had to dig myself out many a time.

"Then we have a great deal of farming to do. We have to select the plants whose sap is the best suited to supply us with honey dew. We must collect the honey dew and store away what we don't need for immediate use. We must see that our aphis cows are kept on nourishing bushes, and must tend to our milking at regular times. Besides all this, we have an immense amount of hunting to do, for we are fond of fresh meat. I like beetle meat the best, but butterfly wings are excellent when they are really fresh. Hunting is hard work, but it is great sport, too, for it gives us a chance to use our great strength. We are strong, you know; I for one, can easily drag away a stick of wood that weighs two hundred times as much as I do."

"Well, well," said Fuzzy Wuzzy. "You are certainly an interesting person to meet and I am glad to know you. I should like to have you come home with me and meet my mother. We have a pleasant den and I'm sure you'd enjoy visiting us."

"I'd love to come," said the red ant, "but I am really too busy this morning, and this afternoon I am going to a party. We are going to have a war with the black ants, who live around the corner between the roots of the hackleberry tree, and I wouldn't miss being there for worlds. The black ants are wonderful fighters and I always enjoy going to war with them, though, of course, we always beat them."

"Good-by, ant," said Fuzzy Wuzzy.

"Good-by, little bear," replied the ant, walking down from Fuzzy Wuzzy's leg and returning to his city.

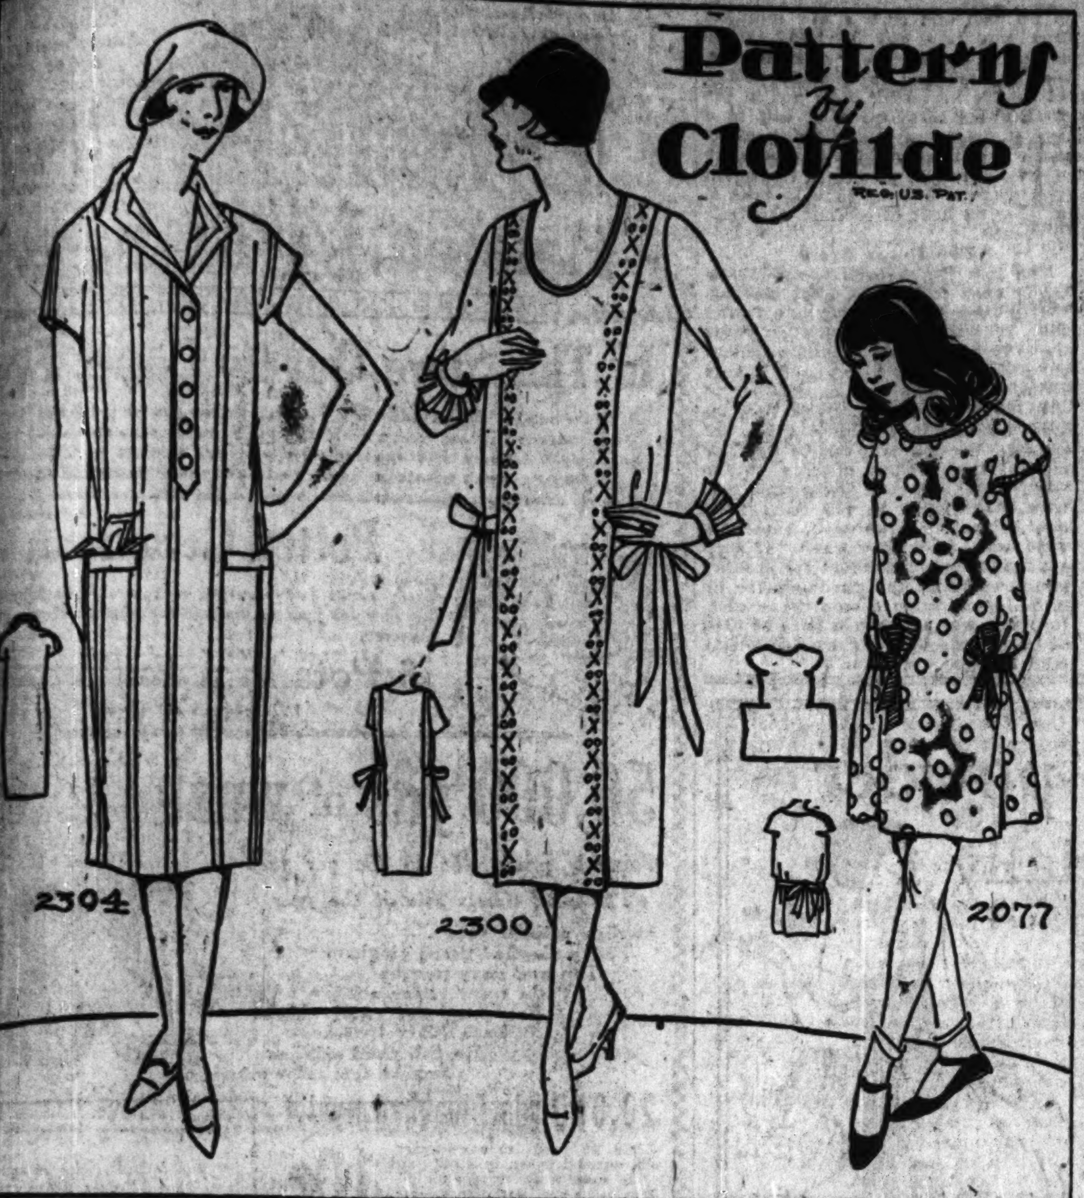
Patterns by Clotilde



2394—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 years and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅜ yards of 40 inch material, with ½ yard of 27 inch contrasting.

2300—Woman's dress. Sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4¼ yards of 40 inch material. The hot iron transfer pattern, 730, comes in blue and yellow, and costs 15 cents extra.

2077—Girl's dress. Sizes 6, 8, 10, 12, and 14 years. Size 8 requires 1¾ yards of 40 inch material.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

THE long lines of the front and back of pattern No. 2300 make it an especially becoming design for a large figure. There is a panel back and a panel front, with side front and back pieces. The front has a shoulder dart on each side. These darts give the proper ease over the bust. The under arm seams gore out towards the bottom so the skirt will not be too tight there—it measures at the bottom for size 36 about 1⅝ yards.

The edges of the panels should be turned in and basted down before being put on the dress; and then they should be basted to the dress from the top, down. If the edges are embroidered or trimmed with braid, no other trimming will be needed to make the dress pretty. Tie strings of the dress material are set on under the panel edges and tied over the sides. These hold the slight fullness there perfectly in place.

The long, dart fitted sleeve is perforated for a shorter length, and the neck is finished with a binding. Plain colors will make a person look more slender than those materials that are patterned. Satin back crepe—using the satin side for the panels, and the crepe side for the rest of the dress—would be attractive or one of the flat crepes, surah, bengaline or plain satin would be suitable. The sleeve pattern is perforated for a short length, and many women will prefer them short for a summer frock. If the edges are bound, matching the finish at the neck they will look right.

Pattern No. 2077 is a one piece dress that is closed on the shoulders. It is a dressy little design, and will be suitable for taffeta, organdy, printed crepe, and so on. It is slashed in from the under arm edges, front and back, and the lower edges are gathered and brought back so that the under arm seam, from the arm hole to the bottom of the skirt will make one unbroken line.

This side gathering is a becoming and pretty feature, especially if ribbon is used to tie over the fullness. Or the ribbon could be started where the gathers begin towards the front, and left long enough to tie in a bow and ends in the middle of the back.

The neck and edges of the sleeves may be bound with silk, matching the ribbon in color, and really the dress needs no further trimming. Narrow plaited ruffles are also pretty. A deep hem should be allowed for in cutting out, and this should be put in by hand so that the hemming is as nearly invisible from the right side as possible.

In binding the neck and sleeve edges, the binding should be basted on before stitching; then after the bastings have been removed, it will be a good idea to hold the right side of the dress next to you, and lay the binding up straight so that you can baste it down close to where it was stitched. Then still holding the right side next to you bring the binding up straight and baste near the top of the seam. Then turn to the wrong side, bring the binding down and turn the edge in and hem by hand. The reason for these several bastings is that one often sees twisted looking bindings—and a thing of this kind will give that home made appearance that no woman likes.

Pattern No. 2394 is an excellent design for a pretty morning dress; and gingham, percale, or poplin will make up attractively. The dress opens in the front—a plait being set on through which the buttoning is done. The plait pieces extend up to the neck edge, and are there joined to the collar. These edges roll back, forming revers. There are inserted pockets, the openings finished with bindings. These bound openings, and the front plait, collar, and sleeve edges will be pretty if made of a contrasting color.

If you are making a dress that is to be frequently laundered, it will be the part of wisdom to use buttons having a shank, and work eyelets to slip the shanks through, so that the buttons may be removed before the laundering. This is easier in the long run than removing broken buttons, and the buttons don't lose their luster.

ISN'T IT ODD

by William Atherton Du Puy

ISN'T it odd that a snake, which seems to have no legs at all, should be classified, and quite properly, as a four legged animal?

The snake creeps on the ground, pushing itself along with the coils of its smooth body, and it is but natural that the observer should conclude it is legless. But it is not legless. It is a quadruped.

There was a time when snakes walked on four feet, as do lizards and other reptiles. Living in the morasses of an earlier world under conditions where squirming must have been more effective than walking, the snakes found it advisable to abandon their legs and take up a different mode of locomotion. The legs, being unused tended gradually to disappear.

They did not entirely disappear, however; have not yet entirely disappeared. If one dissects the carcass of a snake, he will find, underneath its skin, the remains of what were once legs. Probing carefully, he will find the suggestion of the different parts of those legs.

Aside from those of the insects, there was never but one model of legs in this world. It was the same model as that worn by man himself. It had the one bone of the thigh, the two bones that appear below the knee, the same bones in the ankle and the toes. Remnants of the bones that make up this leg structure are all buried there beneath the skin of the snake. It is a quadruped, as are turtles and alligators, as are horses and cats. Trace these animals far enough back and they were children of the same mother. They are different today, because they have traveled different paths from then to now and have diverged as the centuries passed.

Bright Sayings of the Children

Billy had gravefully offended and been naughty. When father came home he ordered him to beg mother as well as grandmother to pardon him.

So Billy went downstairs, his head hanging.

A few minutes later, rushing up the steps, he called, "It's all right, daddy! I pardoned 'em both!" E. D.

Betty and Jean were going to play house and were ready with their dolls and dishes when Jack came upon the scene.

"Now, we don't want any boys to play with us and spoil everything," said Betty with finality, "we are going to play house."

"Well," said Jack knowingly, "you will have a heck of a time if you try running a house without a man to pay your bills." D. L.

Dad, accompanied by Bill, the hired man's son, was driving the truck into town. Being very well acquainted Dad would wave to most passing cars.

Finally, as the truck was making good speed, Bill got uneasy and said, "Suppose you just keep your hands on the wheel and I'll wave for you." W. M.

Doris and Dean are twins. Both have their hair bobbed and when their mother made them bloomer suits they looked much alike.

I laughingly remarked, "Well, which is the boy and which the girl?"

Dean straightened up and proudly replied, "Can't you see I's the boy cause I wear boy's shoes?" E. M. C.

The TRIBUNE Cook Book

By Jane Eddington

All recipes here have been scientifically tested by Mrs. Eddington, with current market materials, and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

THE OUTDOORSMAN'S COOKERY.

THE real outdoorsman can cook a little, or well. Kin of his is the boy by a rock or a river who will roast a fish on the most primitive of spits, a string which constantly twists and untwists because it is so weighted and fastened. And there is another boy, or the same one, who gathers choice memories to cheer him a long life through by baking potatoes in hot ashes. Of this clan, too, are the men or women who can stay, and brace a straight stick or rod so as to make of it a wonderful crane on which to boil water or cook a pail or kettle of stew. With rock braces at its base, and resting a little way along on a small rock, its free end may be effectually near a fire built below it which will be quite near enough the bottom of a pail hung on it to heat its contents rapidly.

Camp kits de luxe; nested utensils—kettles and plates and cups—thermos containers for foods and drinks; whole kitchenettes which can be folded up to the size of a small steamer trunk yet contain stools, a table, and a buffet of supplies, camp stoves—from those no more than four inches by four inches to quite complete cooking stoves with oven, a toaster at the side and a grill on top, altogether fascinating pieces of furniture; all these and more are now procurable with all their conveniences and perhaps with all their demoralizing civilities. They discourage the inventing of devices to suit the time, place and special needs of any one or many persons.

Tricks in Outdoor Cooking.

Though it is the best of plans to practice cooking at home what you want to cook in the open, and practice well, there will be many tricks to learn when you come to cook out of doors. Fires by or between rocks last longer, and usually can best be protected from the wind, but with canned heat a canvas pail or any other sort can be used to advantage. In making toast over coals, delicious toast, this can be kept hot for some time if it is immediately wrapped in a paper napkin.

Bread and crackers can both be toasted in a long handled corn popper—the toasted crackers to go with cheese or a chowder and the reason for toasting them sometimes may be because they need to be crisped. Bacon chops may be broiled over coals in a long handled corn popper. Improvised pot hooks, when a large party is to be cooked for, are quite valuable. Strong wire will do for them.

A List of Supplies.

Raisins and chocolate are so much used nowadays by "hikers" and country week enders that too much esteem has been awarded them. They should be regarded as strictly emergency supplies, of the nature of a dessert or sweet. It might be even worse judgment to think them equal to an out of door meal than to think them equal to an adequate meal at home. Invaluable as a portable sweet as they are, effort should always be made to have them just that and nothing more.

Good bread closely wrapped in waxed paper will make good toast at the end of a week, or longer, unless it should mold. Sponge cake in the right kind of tin box will keep even longer and it, like bread, is excellent toasted.

What canned foods will be taken out depends largely on the taste of those who go, but more economical and lighter by far than these are the various sorts of dried beans and macaroni. Big hominy and oatmeal and cornmeal are invaluable in the hands of the one who knows how to make good use of them. The starchy foods are especially needed for the main foundation of the diet when one's appetite is what out of door living makes it.

Outside the starchy foods and perhaps the stimulating tea and coffee which comfort the weary, there is no one supply that can be made more serviceable than salt pork, not bacon, but old-fashiond salt pork.

Salt Pork Cookery.

When fish are to be fried — first cleaned and rolled in cornmeal—there is no better fat in which to cook them than that cooked out of salt pork. It is equally good for frying chicken or for frying potatoes—camp fried potatoes. It is invaluable as a fat for fish chowders, or plain potato chowder, or corn chowder, or a cabbage soup. It is the thing to use in seasoning baked beans which may be baked in a hole in the ground on a bed of hot coals. When other meat is lacking plain boiled potatoes with salt pork fat may be most palatable and even dainty. The pork may be used in the same way for big or pearl hominy, cooked slowly for from three to eight hours, in eight times its measure of water. One can get a little experience in cooking little dice of salt pork, which preparation may be such a basic thing in the cooking of the list of things just mentioned, by buying a small piece and gently cooking it so that the small dice in which it is cut will be a crispy brown and the fat itself unburned and pleasant with new potatoes, small ones, boiled and dried over the fire. Or after the pork is fried crisp it may be taken up and a thin white sauce made by mixing a tablespoon or so of flour in the fat and then adding milk.

A Butter Sauce.

A plain butter sauce of butter or other fat, flour and boiling water will often serve the one who is preparing several meals out of doors. It is excellent with boiled fish and for this purpose eggs, hard cooked, are sliced and added to it. When bread gives out, crackers softened in the sauce are not a bad substitute, or this combination with a jelly or marmalade may be used for a dessert; or sugar may be added to this sauce with perhaps some fruit juice to be used with a plain cooked cereal as a pudding.

Cooking Macaroni.

Perhaps not all macaroni can be cooked as easily and without any utensil except the kettle as some sorts can, and finely cooked in that fashion. Add to the macaroni twice its measure of cold water and put in a closely covered kettle, preferably a flat bottomed one, and let the water heat slowly. In an hour with the slowest sort of cooking the water will be all absorbed and then it is ready to be well turned over in butter and have cheese sprinkled over it, or to have a sauce which can be made in the frying pan added to it, a meat sauce or a cheese sauce or what you will.

When the cheese is in a piece instead of grated, fine bits of it may be cut over the macaroni over the fire, the cover put on and left on for ten minutes, and it will then be melted and may be stirred into the macaroni, and nothing easier and more substantial can be prepared. Its palatability will depend upon the quality of the cheese.

Cooking Dried Beans.

Four cups of cold water to one cup of beans is the standard and reliable proportion to use. If the beans in this amount of water are allowed to come as slowly as possible to the boiling point in a covered kettle and then just simmer, never boil, they will cook soft in about three hours. If dried Limas are added an onion and some sliced carrot they may be agreeable enough to eat without butter, which would always improve them. Treat kidney beans in the same way.

Navy beans to be baked in the ground may be prepared just as the others are, but should be brought to a boil and allowed to cook for twenty minutes before they are put over the prepared place for them, covered with hot ashes and coals, and left in for ten hours or so. A piece of salt pork is all that is needed for seasoning them. It requires some experience to learn to make and use this sort of oven, but if the beans are boiling or at that point and they can stand on a rock heated and then buried they should come out all right. The heat should not be great enough to make them boil hard.

Porridges.

No one need go hungry who can cook oatmeal, cornmeal and so forth. Long ago the Boy Scouts were taught to prepare and cook porridges or breakfast foods, make toast, cook eggs, make tea, coffee and cocoa, and from this to go on and learn other things. Cornmeal, treated just as beans are, which are baked in the ground, could be prepared over night. To whatever measure of cornmeal used add four times as much water and bring slowly to the boil and cook a few minutes, then put into any devised fireless cooker, in the ground or elsewhere. In cooking cornmeal in a double boiler all that is necessary is to put in the meal, about a teaspoon of salt to a cup of meal, and add four times as much water as meal. There is no need to stir it at all unless the quantity is large, unless ready to take it up after an hour of cooking, then stir to even it.

The Dutch Oven.

The iron Dutch oven is an invaluable utensil for out of doors cooking. If it is large it may serve as a frying pan. It is a fine bean pot when beans are to be baked in the ground, excellent on account of its heavy and closely fitting cover. Any stew or chowder or soup can be made in it. It has, indeed, an all round sort of value, for among other things it can be used for pot roasting, and a chicken not so very young can be disjointed and cooked slowly in it, pot roast fashion, so that it is as good, especially when cold, as fried chicken. If such a kettle is purchased just for cooking in the open, all the directions for its initial preparation should be as carefully followed as when it is to be used at home, otherwise it rusts even while food is being cooked in it.

Stomach Disordered?

Take Haley's Magnesia-Oil—milk magnesia and mineral oil combined

There is a cause for disordered stomach. And that cause will most often be found in the lower bowel, the seat of most so-called "stomach trouble." Acids from fermenting, accumulating waste matter must be neutralized and waste matter eliminated. Two things are necessary—both are done at one time with Haley's Magnesia-Oil (milk of magnesia combined with mineral oil).

Both oil and magnesia work together as they should. The oil carries the magnesia straight to the lower bowel where it is needed. Acids are neutralized, clogged tracts are lubricated. Action is prompt but devoid of griping or distress.

Get a bottle of Haley's Magnesia-Oil today. There is no oily taste. If your druggist can't supply you write us. We'll send postpaid on receipt of price. Large family size, $1. The Haley M-O Company, Indianapolis, Ind.

CORNS

Lift Off—No Pain!

Doesn't hurt one bit! Drop a little "Freezone" on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers.

Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the foot calluses, without soreness or irritation.

Easy Way to Remove Superfluous Hair Roots

What beauty specialists regard as one of the most important discoveries in recent years is the Phelactine method of removing superfluous hair. Its great advantage, of course, lies in the fact that it actually removes the hair roots. It does this easily, quickly, harmlessly. Sufferers need no longer despair. The actual hair-roots come out before one's very eye, leaving the skin smooth and hairless as a babe's. Because it offers such complete relief, a stick of Phelactine is the most inexpensive thing one can buy for the removal of hairy growths. Druggists are having a big demand for it.

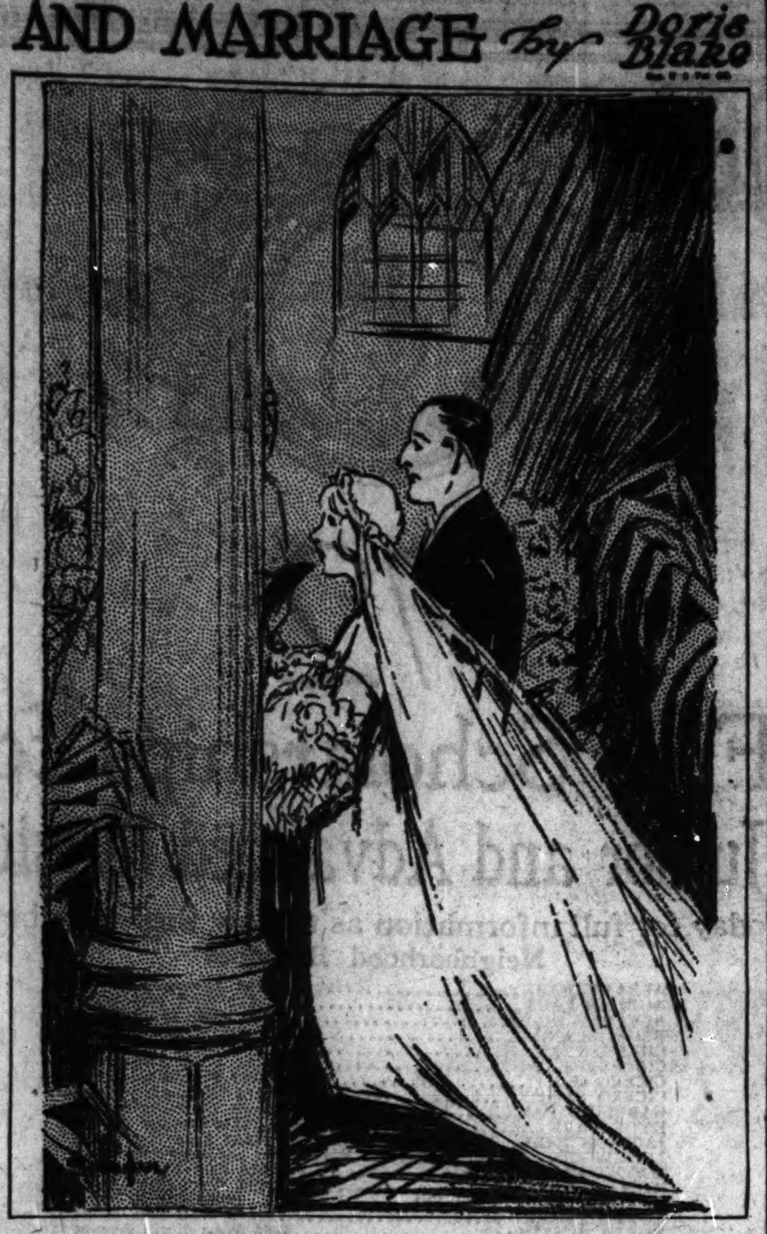
PREJUDICES AND MARRIAGE

by Doris Blake

Should a Christian Girl Marry a Jewish Boy? Should a Jewish Boy Marry a Christian Girl?



I AM always being asked for advice on these intermarriages. I am told of the prejudices that confront a young couple of opposing faiths. It is an acute problem, and one steadily on the increase in America, where Jewish and Gentile boys and girls go to school together, to college, work side by side and fall in love.

Advice on intermarriage I avoid as far as possible. It somehow seems the business of a higher authority than mine, where a decision is to be made. Where two persons are strong adherents of their respective faiths and those are opposing ones it makes marriage a ticklish job. Prejudices—family and otherwise—do affect marriage.

Her Friends Doubtful.

Perhaps the letter from Lydia may explain more clearly.

"As a Christian girl who married a Jew, I sometimes wonder why it is that the way of intermarriage is made so difficult. When we worked in the office nearly every girl friend of mine was only too willing to go out with him. They considered him a splendid chap. They praised his gentleness and his manliness. But when I announced our engagement these same girls remained open mouthed for some moments, wondering, as though I had told them something bordering on danger, or, at best, mysterious uncertainties.

"Since we've been married, friends who come to the house look into my eyes wondering whether I am not going through a great tragedy, and my husband's friends look similarly to him, wondering whether the experience in any way affected him unfavorably. I am treated as if I had just come out of the hospital and was convalescent.

"Neither my husband nor I can see the point of singling out those who are intermarried for suspicious glances and for constant observation, as if they had taken certain kind of germs that sooner or later would play havoc with them.

"I remain as good a Christian as before I married. In fact, I think I am a little better Christian now than before. I am more interested in religion and I have learned more about the Hebrew faith, which underlies Christianity. I think I understand more today of the essence of religion and the essence of Christianity than most of my girl friends, and I think I practice my religion just a little bit more. As for my husband, he has not changed his belief and I do not see that this is essential.

"I do not see why in this day and age, when we give each other so much freedom in politics, in morals, when we are so lenient of the conventions, why we should not be more lenient in the matter of religion and agreeing on the basic things—on the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man.

Tolerance Is Needed.

"It is not human to expect boys and girls to go to school together, play together, belong to the same political and social organizations of the community, work in the same office, be partners in business, have trust in each other to the extent of thousands and millions of dollars, share all business secrets and even personal secrets, and then put the padlock on the emotions, saying, 'This is all very well. You can like each other, respect each other, bring devotion to each other, but you cannot marry. Why? Because every one about you will make life a veritable hell for you by suspicious looks and poisonous whispers, by constantly flaunting and accentuating the difference in race and religion.'

"I wish there was somebody big enough and great enough to make a plea to the great mass of people to be more tolerant of those Jews and Christians who believe in tolerance sufficiently to marry each other when they love each other. I know several cases of boys and girls of Jewish and Gentile faith, in love with each other, who have been going around for years wanting to marry, remaining loyally in love, and afraid to risk marriage.

"I think this the acme of tragedy."

Novelist Touches It.

A novel, "God of Might," which makes intermarriage the theme, has just been done by Elias Tobenkin. Ministers of Christian and Jewish denominations have preached sermons on it. So that it is becoming one of the most discussed topics. The story of Samuel Waterman and Jessie Grant, by Mr. Tobenkin, is one of the marriage of a Jewish boy and a Christian girl. It becomes all the more important when you consider the business world of today.

Go into any office in New York, Chicago, St. Louis, or San Francisco, and find girl stenographers of Christian and Jewish origin, employers, business men, professional men, inventors, engineers, working side by side. While the question of race or creed comes up in the case of many, there are thousands who take each other as human beings, and the consequence is intermarriage.

And then with intermarriage, what happens? Mr. Tobenkin tells this in his story. There is one passage in the book which startles me. It is a phrase by the Christian wife, Jessie: "O, if there were no Sundays and no holidays, if life were but a matter of nights and love!"

As Lydia discloses in her letter, the disagreements are not disagreements between the two who have intermarried, but come from the outside. It is the world that often makes intermarriage unhappy, the world with its prying questioning eyes and its prejudices.

Marriage is the most important problem in the world. Yet all marriages are problematical. You may marry the man who belongs to your church and find in him a thousand objectional characteristics. You may marry the man who is out of your church, yet with all the virtues that will go to make you happy.

The only advice I would offer the girl who thinks of marrying outside her race and creed is that she be sure she has sufficient stamina to rely upon herself and to discount the criticisms, views, and curiosity of others. She must be sure she can stand by her convictions regardless of whatever unpleasantness may arrive. The marriage need not be unhappy. But to make it happy, a great deal of character and independence is required on the part of both entering into it.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

He Understands.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 19 and am not in love as yet, but there is a young foreigner who is deeply infatuated with me. He says it is love, but I'm sure it isn't, as I have absolutely no feeling for him. Now he has given me flowers and candy and has even taken me to a few shows, and always acted like a gentleman. I have told him that I could never be more than a friend to him; also that I do not think I ought to take these gifts from him, but he says I should not deprive him of the only pleasure he has in America. Is it wrong for me to accept these gifts and if it is will you tell me how I can refuse them without hurting his feelings? ANXIOUS."

Candy and flowers may always be accepted with propriety, Anxious. You have been frank with him and he fully understands your position. If it gives him pleasure to do these nice little things for you you should feel no hesitancy in permitting it. It is in appreciation of your friendliness to one who undoubtedly spends many lonesome hours.

Flowers Are Appropriate.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 19 and am keeping company with a young man two years my senior. We received an invitation to a birthday party from a girl friend of mine who also knows my boy friend. He said he'd buy Helen one of the rings he bought me. It is a novelty cross-word ring and the first letter of the seven jewels in it spells the word dearest. Would it be proper for me to oppose him in giving this gift even though it is only a novelty? CARRIE."

I know of nothing which would be more thrilling or would give greater pleasure to a young lady than to be remembered with flowers, and particularly now when the spring flowers are in season. I am sure they would bring her much happiness on her natal day, and would be more appropriate than the ring he has in mind. Don't you think he would welcome the suggestion from you, Carrie?

Jealousy Can Be Overcome.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been keeping steady company with a girl for three years. I am deeply in love with her. It seems I can not bear to see her look at any strange fellow. I always think she is flirting. She is attractive and I know many boys who are just anxious to try and get her to go out with them. She always claims I imagine she's flirting and gets angry at me. I have tried more than once to stop being jealous, but can't seem to succeed. This makes me unhappy and causes many arguments. I know if I can't stop being jealous it will cause us many unhappy hours in our future life. RAYMOND."

You can overcome your jealousy, Raymond, if you will exert your will power and exercise a little common sense. If the young lady is of fine character, honorable and trustworthy, you have no grounds for jealousy and your suspicions are an insult to her. On the other hand, if she does not possess these qualities, she isn't worthy of love and you should not wish to hold her.

LOVE LETTERS

DAYS OF SEPARATION.

MY DARLING SWEETHEART: It's such a wonderful feeling to know that every night when I come from the laboratory tired and often discouraged because the tests haven't come out right there is a letter waiting for me. And every evening I sit here writing to you with your picture before me, but I find myself dreaming of you more than writing to you, so that often it takes me several hours to write only a few pages.

The Tribune will pay $1 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possession you would like to enter the contest, send it to Love Letter Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned send copies of the ones you wish to keep.

I'm glad you had a good time at the dance, dear. I'm always glad to have you go out and have a good time. I trust you, and I believe you when you tell me you're thinking of me while you're tripping the light fantastic with some other fellow. I haven't danced since I danced with you. I couldn't—I guess you spoiled me. Besides, it costs money for a man to dance, and I'm not spending money now, you know; I'm saving every penny for the sweetest little girl in the world. Only six months now—and then—wowee! when I think of it I could kick a house over!

I can't write anything sensible tonight. I'm just happy.

How was the last batch of muffins? I'm hungry for some of them, but I'm starving for a kiss. YOUR LOVER.

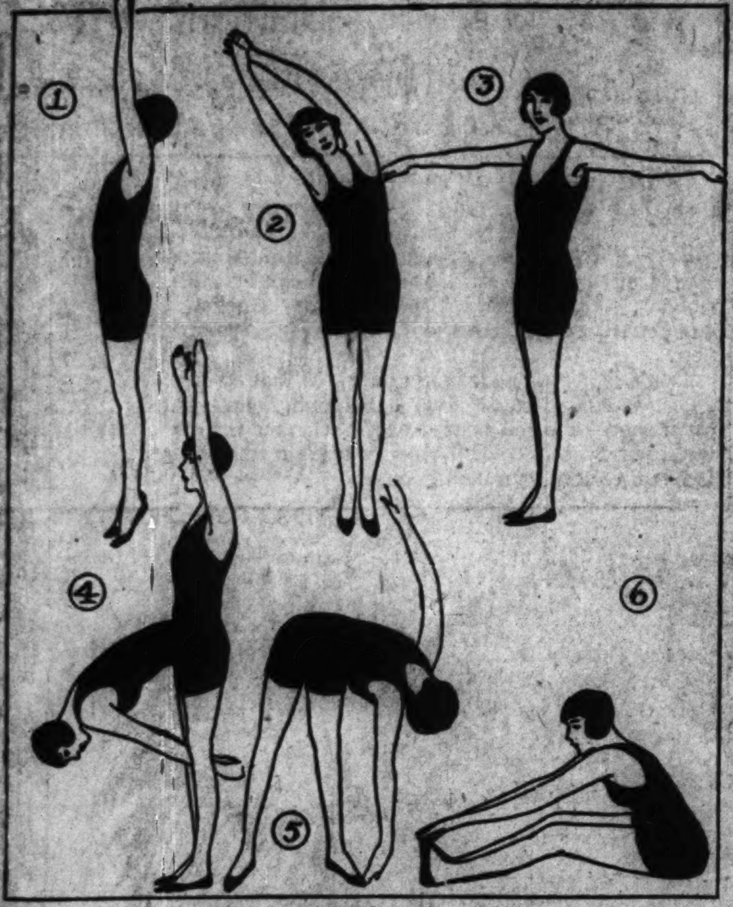
FOR THE TOO ADULT ABDOMINAL MUSCLES

Try These Exercises; They're for Those Who Wish to Retain a Girlish Figure and Those Who Wish to Recover It

by Antoinette Donnelly



NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—If you are a girl of a certain age, as the French so deftly put it, meaning a girl of an age when the current number of candles is not rigorously applied to the birthday cake, some sort of corset is recommended; that is, if you have not been smart enough to keep those abdominal muscles of yours pretty well trained down.

Otherwise, you might just as well put the whole forty blooming candles on the cake, for you'll be suspected, any way.

The part of your anatomy I refer to is the feminine gender of "paunch," that protuberance noted on certain males who thus advertise they are neither eating nor drinking according to tidy figure measurements, consequently "getting on."

The average woman, when she approaches this certain age, is inclined to round out, thicken, bulge. She is none too happy about it in any period frock. The frocks of this athletic period, A. D. 1925, are the inquisition of torture to a figure gone from the straight and narrow. It is suicidal, therefore, to abandon the corset entirely, under the circumstances. Some sort of wrap around is necessary.

Means Health as Well.

Too, physicians pretty generally agree that women who have worn corsets for a long time, and have learned to rely upon them to hold certain abdominal organs fast, make a mistake in suddenly taking this prop away. They report a number of troubles as the result.

However, whether one wears a corset or does not, the abdominal and waist muscles should be exercised, not only for the greater beauty of dress but for the greater health of "innards."

So, today, I offer you six exercises, and all I ask is one month's trial to show you how hard they are on that fat so objectionally placed upon your otherwise perfect 36. If you will do them morning and night for thirty days, I won't have to argue further about what it means to you and a youthful "get away" to keep your abdomen, your diaphragm, and your waist line fat free.

I have found that the most effective costume in which to do the exercises is a heavy woolen bathing suit and a heavy woolen sweater. Do the movements with sufficient vigor to work up a perspiration. When they are done, hop under the shower, starting with warm water and letting it gradually get cooler, then out, and end with a vigorous rub. Done in the a. m. before breakfast, you realize you have a full day ahead of you in which you are now going to be able to accomplish a full day's work.

For this reason, and for the general need of keeping all muscles in the locality referred to in good condition, the exercises are for those who wish to keep their girlish figures as well as for those wishing to recover them.

All Ready? Go!

1. Stand in the doorway, or under the center dome light, or, if you choose, up against the wall. On the command of one push the arms easily upward and rise on the toes as far as possible. Reach up the arms as far as you can, as if trying to get at an object from a high place. On two let the arms sink and the heels touch the floor, but retain as long as possible the sensation of extension. This is a natural movement to straighten the spine, lift the chest, and overcome that sagging of the abdominal muscles. Repeat ten times.

2. Stand with feet together, hands clasped over head. Bend from side to side as far as you can without moving the lower part of the body.

3. Keep knees straight, arms extended full length, feet firmly on ground; twist trunk to right five times, then to left five times.

4. Raise arms overhead; bend trunk forward and swing arms downward between legs; raise trunk and bend backward, swinging arms high up over head again. Do five times, moderately fast. Then turn at waist as in exercise 3 and swing arms down outside the right leg. Then turn to left and swing arms outside left leg five times.

6. Lie flat on your back. Without raising the knees any more than is possible, lift the upper body and, with arms high in the air, stretch arms toward your toes. Touch the toes if you can. Stretch anyway as far as you can. Keep at it until you can touch the toes. This is a wonderful exercise for reducing or strengthening the abdominal muscles. Better go easy at first. Not more than five times.

If you find at first you are stiff, take a hot bath and rest for a couple of minutes before dressing.

But don't get discouraged. The fact that your muscles are stiff and sore indicates they are in need of a treatment of the kind I offer you today.

PRACTICAL AND FANCY NEEDLEWORK

BY CLOTILDE

THE BRIDAL VEIL.

GETTING the bride ready for her wedding day is always a busy time, and any bride who is at all deft with a needle can easily make her own veil. The one shown is strictly debutante, made of flesh tinted tulle with drooping ear muffs of tinted orange buds and blossoms, and a single row of the same around head to form headband.

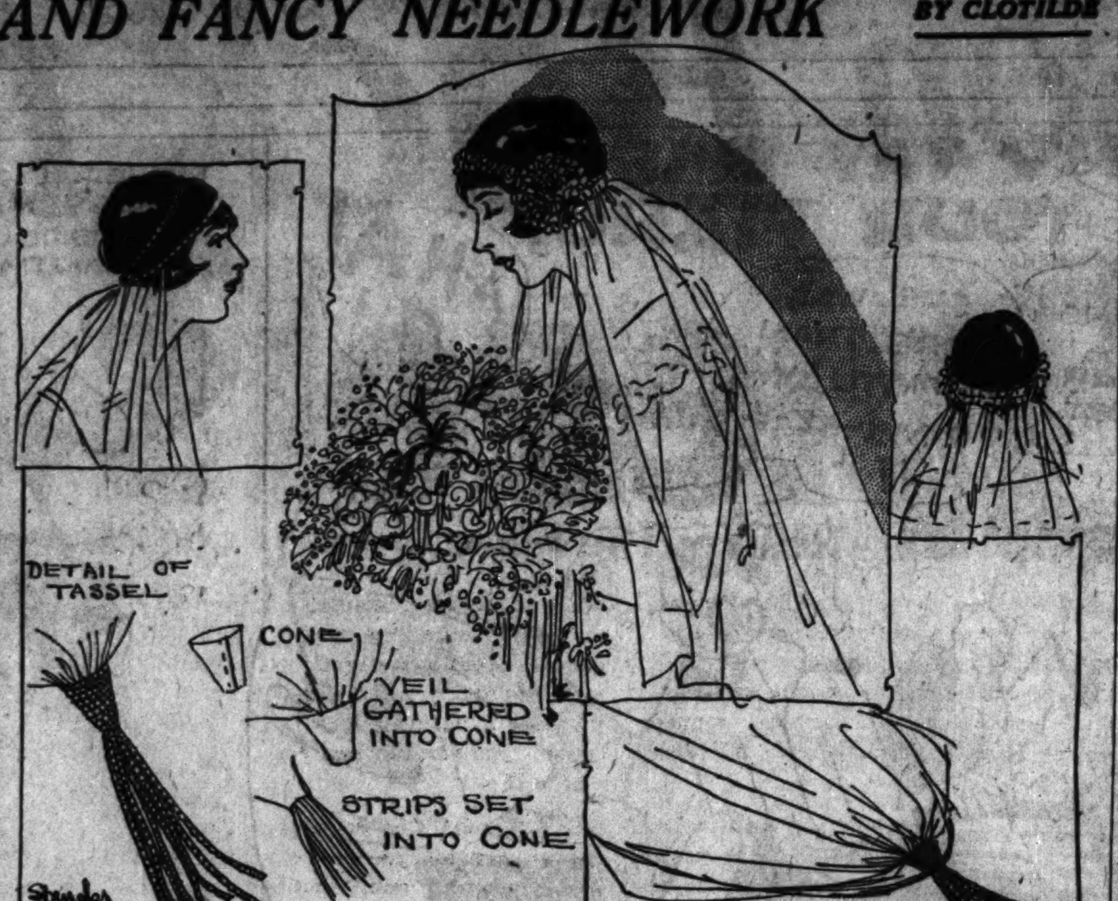
To make this cut a piece of white rice net one-half inch wide and as long as the head is inches around, allowing one inch for lapping in back. Sew this firmly where lapped. Wire both top and bottom of this band with lace wire, which is fine but firm. Cut a narrow piece off one end of tulle, and use it to wind this rice net band so all wires and threads are covered.

The length of veil depends upon the height of bride, two and one-half to three yards being the regulation length. The edges may be left raw, but some are seen with a fine lace sewed all the way around, six inches longer than the hem of dress if not formal. If formal, the veil is much longer than the court train on the dress.

Tulle comes in different widths, from two and one-half to four yards wide. The three and one-half width makes a full veil, is not so expensive, and can be bought at veil counters in any department store.

In making this veil mark it one yard from outer edge on both sides and begin to gather tulle in fine stitches between these marks. Make five rows of this hand shirring, put band on head, and pin the starting place of shirring, just in front of ears. Bring across to opposite side, and pin here also. Pull up the five shirring threads and distribute the fullness across the back between the two pins. The plain parts will fall down softly over the arms to the fingertips.

Make a single wreath of orange buds and blossoms to go all the way around and finish off at both sides with long stemmed buds and blossoms to form the earmuffs. Two and one-half yards of tulle, four bunches of busd and blossoms, and two bunches of long stemmed flowers are required to make this creation.



Another attractive veil shown is one shirred on the same style headband, and one inch width taped rhinestones are used instead of the orange blossoms. These rhinestones may be bought in the trimming section of any department store. One of these bands goes across the top of the head from front to back, one band from side to side, and one row all around head size band. The veil hanging below this band is caught at the end of the train with a rhinestone tassel ten inches in length. All the tulle is caught at the end and fastened in the tassel.

These tassels can be bought but they may be made easily. Cut ten strips of taped rhinestones ten inches long and put them together so that all the stones are on the outside. Wind one end of this bunch with a fine wire. Next take a piece of white buckram and shape it into a sort of cone two and one-half inches deep. Have the bottom part so that it just fits over the cluster of rhinestones and the upper end large enough to shir the veil into it. When the veil is all shirred into this cone, begin at the bottom and wind rhinestones all over it closely, taking an occasional stitch to keep them in place. Four and one-half to five yards of rhinestones are required for this veil.

You will notice that the hair is not covered by the tulle in any of the veils.

An article on the attendants at this wedding will appear next Sunday.

Completing the Sentence.

While a junior in high school, I had occasion to take a test given by an old teacher, a frank, gruff man, who hated interruptions. I finished first and took the paper to his desk, and interrupted him by asking if my paper would be marked by tomorrow. He glared, as usual, and curtly nodded.

The next day all the students receiving high marks and one paper being left, which I knew for mine, the prof started to say, "Donald, I find I have made a mistake. I did not credit you," when here I interrupted, thinking he meant to say "enough," and raise my mark. "O, that is all right. I surely have a perfect paper."

He frowned and finished snappily and slangily, "with being so dumb!"

I was as red as the proverbial beet.

A. O'B.

Why He Stayed in Bed.

Arriving in an eastern city one evening to attend a convention, I found that my luggage had not yet arrived and my suit was wrinkled and spotted by rain. Getting into bed, I called a bellboy and had him take the suit to a tailor to be pressed, with instructions to be sure to return it early in the morning.

Failing to receive it, I endeavored to get in touch with the bellboy, only to find he had gone off duty, and his successor knew nothing of the matter. Chagrined, I had to telephone the convention where I was scheduled to speak that I was unavoidably detained. After an hour's frantic telephoning the suit was finally located and donned.

But my most embarrassing moment came when entering the convention hall I was greeted with cheers and laughter. Somehow the story had got out of the man who had to go to bed while his suit was being pressed!

J. W. T.

Her Patience Rewarded.

My most embarrassing moment occurred recently while at church in the country. I was sitting in a folding chair and a huge wasp kept buzzing in my ear. I waited patiently for it to land so I could kill it. My patience was rewarded when it landed on the back of my chair. I gave one swing with my arm and the chair collapsed in the middle of a silent prayer. I don't know whether I got the wasp or not!

R. A. H.

Forgot Her Name.

We had just been married and were at a tourist hotel. Desiring to stay at an apartment hotel, I telephoned for reservations. The clerk asked for my name.

A little nervous, I became flustrated and confused over my newly acquired name and replied, "Wait a minute," not realizing what I had said until my husband, who was standing near me, burst forth into laughter and the hotel clerk, who was also laughing heartily at my expense, remarked, "O, newlyweds, eh?"

My reply was to hang up the receiver, and it is needless to say we did not go to that hotel.

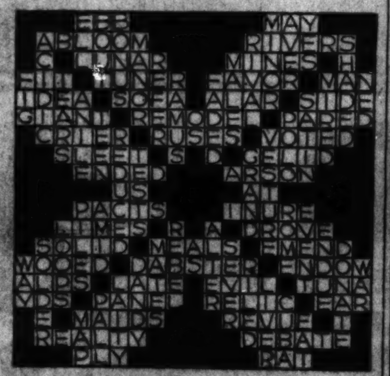
LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE.



You just KNOW she's well
You, too, can have this beautiful, joyous, healthful look
You just know she's NOT well
There is no reason for you to look or feel this way

CONSTIPATION means MISERY

Rouge and powder will not cover up the effects of constipation. The bowels are the worst abused and most variously damaged of any organ of the body. When they are clogged, they cause lusterless eyes, dingy complexions, pimples and blackheads, bad breath, headache, bilious attacks, heart burn, acid stomach, belching, depression, nervous exhaustion, chronic weakness and other more serious ills. The bowels should act at least twice daily.

Dr. Caldwell's SYRUP PEPSIN

The Family Laxative

—will produce proper bowel action and insure a healthy condition so Nature can exercise her proper function. A delightful liquid combination of Egyptian senna, pepsin and pleasing aromatics originally prescribed by Dr. Caldwell for ailing patients of his extensive practice and used nationally for the last 30 years by all members of the family.

WHEN CONSTIPATED TAKE

Acts As Nature Acts! No Inconveniences!

It does not act as a purge, forcing the bowels to artificial action, but gently and easily, without pain or discomfort. 10,000,000 bottles used annually prove its effectiveness. Old people, young people, children and babies can be kept in perfect health through its use.

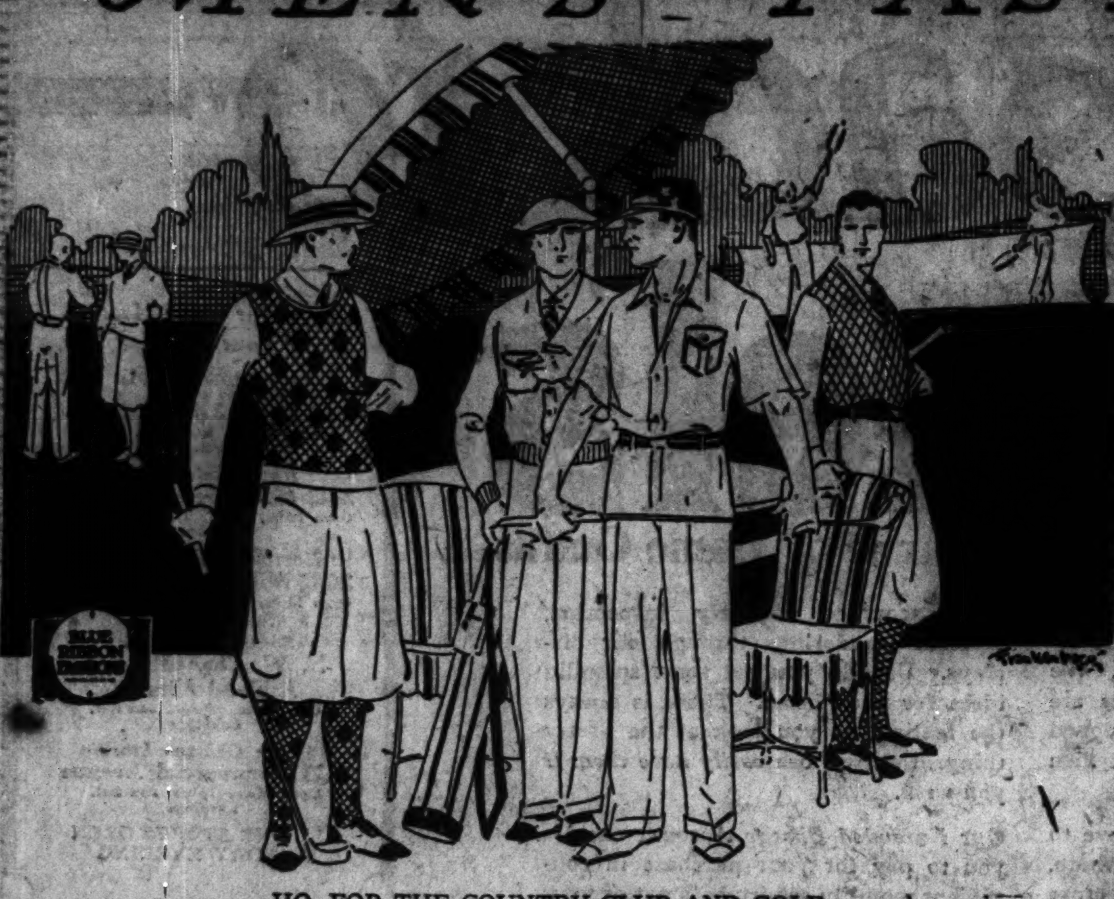
MEN'S FASHIONS



HO, FOR THE COUNTRY CLUB AND GOLF.

This department will be glad to answer any questions regarding men's fashions and the correct thing to wear on different occasions. Address communications to A. T. Gallico, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, address envelope for personal reply.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

BY A. T. GALLICO.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—"Well, it's ho for the country club today," sang out Mr. Smith to his young cousin, Jim Brown, as he performed his morning shave. "I'm looking forward to a good game of golf. This will be the first real day out at the club this spring. Climb right into your golf suit, we'll drive out, and no one will arrest you for appearing in knickers as long as you don't try to walk into a business office in them."

"What shall we wear after the golf?" questioned Jim.

"O, we'll take a change along with us, some flannels, which we can wear with the coats of the knicker suits. Then you'll be prepared for the worst, even a tea party with the ladies."

Mr. Smith and Jim went to the club, and had their round of golf. But we're not interested so much in the marvelously low scores they got or the drives that should go down in golf history. This department is more interested in the golf stockings worn by the foursome of Mr. Smith and Mr. Brown, and in the kind of sweaters or coats that seemed to be the most popular around one of the smart golf clubs in the vicinity of New York.

Jim, being an eager student of good dress, managed to take in pretty much what was going on in a sartorial way, as well as in the glorious game of golf. This is what he saw:

The men in actual conflict on the course wore light weight sweaters of all sorts and conditions of color. There were representatives of the pullover, plain and fancy, and the jacket model. There was a certain number of sleeveless sweaters, but Jim noted especially that this freedom was only on the links. Nowhere near the clubhouse were there any shirt sleeves to be seen. But during the game, it was not unusual to see players not only in shirt sleeves but in shirt fronts, no sweater or coat at all being worn.

The knickers worn were of all kinds. There were, even as early as it was, white linen knickers in large numbers. These were especially popular with the gayly colored slipover sweaters. There were plenty of tweed knickers, worn with the coats to match, as well as cheviot, and worsted and flannel knicker suits. The flannel knickers with sweaters of contrasting colors were among those present. There were some men who defied the more general custom and wore long trousers on the golf course, usually the gray flannel.

The white oxford shirt was over and above the favorite on the links, although blue, blue and white, yellow, and even some grays and lavenders had their innings. But off the course, the white shirt took a back seat. There was a little of everything else but white, depending upon the color scheme used. When the suit was a tan or medium brown, the shirt was as apt as not to be a brown and white striped one, or a yellow and white combination. With the white flannels it is proper to wear just about any color of shirt, provided the general scheme is good.

Jim noticed that the golf hose were not as flamboyant in general as they were the previous season. The well dressed men were taking more to plainer colors, except in the case of the golf hose and sweater sets, in which case the hose had to live up to the gay standard set by the sweater.

Hats, on the links were more often caps. It's hard to get the golfer to give up his cap. It goes along with the game like a caddy or a mashie. But still there are always plenty who will wear the white duck hat, and the leghorn, or a panama.

Colored belts, of course, were almost general. The crepe silk neckwear made popular at Palm Beach last winter—before the fire—was much in evidence at the club. The foulards and the regimental stripes were not suffering from neglect, however.

After their game, Mr. Smith and Jim got into their white flannel trousers, and their suit coats, which they had not worn on the links, having chosen light weight sweaters instead. Mr. Smith, always the acme of sartorial perfection, wore white flannels with blue stripe, the coat of his suit which was one of the soft shades of blue, a blue and white striped shirt, blue foulard tie with red figure, leghorn hat with brim turned down in front, and sport shoes of white buckskin trimmed with black calf.

Jim wore white flannel trousers with brown stripes, light tan coat, brown and white striped shirt, tan and black crêpe silk tie, white buckskin shoes trimmed with tan calf, and a light brown felt hat, with turned down brim.

Beauty Answers

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

MISS E. D.: INGROWING TOE nails are caused by improper shoes or cutting the toe nails in the wrong way. Wearing broad toed shoes will sometimes permit the nail to resume its old straight position on the toe and removes the pressure of the leather on the one corner of the nail which is responsible for driving the other corner into the flesh. Put absorbent cotton under that corner. Change it daily, increasing the amount used until the edge of the nail, having been lifted above the flesh on the side, no longer irritates it. When cutting your nails cut them straight across or slightly concave.

MRS. T. E. R.: WHITEHEADS are chalky deposits under the skin. They are an imprisoned blackhead. Apply hot towels to the face to soften the skin, then open each blemish with a sterilized needle, and press out contents with the needle. Wipe the spot with peroxide and following with a gentle patting of a good cold cream. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for booklet on care of the complexion.

CLARA: YOUR PALLOR IS UNdoubtedly due to lack of exercise, not sufficient fresh air and a too monotonous diet. See to it that you get sufficient air in your office, also that your bedroom is well ventilated, both day and night. Try to walk at least two miles a day, breathing deeply of the fresh air, and eat foods rich in minerals. All green vegetables are good, especially carrots. Also fruits.

SUZANNE: APPLY CAMPHOR ICE to the blisters to absorb them. They are usually caused by disorders of the digestive tract. It would be well for you to correct any such disorders.

EUNICE: NAILS THAT BREAK constantly should be soaked every night for at least ten minutes in sweet almond oil or olive oil which has been slightly warmed. Put the oil into a cup at a depth sufficient to cover the finger tips. You may use the same oil several times. In extreme cases, place a piece of absorbent cotton which has been dipped in the oil on the nail, and tie it up, allowing to remain on all night.

"C. J. S.: THE FOLLOWING LOtion is excellent for an oily skin: Orange flower water, 6 ounces; tincture of benzoin, ½ ounce; witch hazel, 2 ounces. Mix the witch hazel and the orange flower water, shake lightly, and add the tincture of benzoin. Apply this with a piece of absorbent cotton night and morning. If your face is extremely oily, wipe it off several times a day with diluted alcohol.

Take off that double Chin!

Big Hips, Large Busts, Ankles, Arms, Reduced in a Remarkably Short Time.

Why not bring out the beauty of your real features, hidden under those ugly rolls of fat? A double chin adds ten years to your face. Large busts and hips make you look matronly. Big ankles give you a clumsy appearance, yet, if you care to, you can have a perfect face and figure, molded just as you wish it, without trouble or inconvenience of any kind. Get some of Dr. Feltz' Soap from any drug or department store, make a good lather, and apply as per directions night and morning on special parts you want to reduce. You will be surprised at the quick and amazing results in taking off fat from parts where it shows. Men and women have lost as much as [illegible] inches from stomach and hips. Double chins and large ankles disappear quickly. [illegible] DR. FELTZ' SOAP IS GUARANTEED ABSOLUTELY HARMLESS, WILL NOT LEAVE THE SKIN FLABBY OR WRINKLED, DOES AWAY WITH PIMPLES, WILL TONIFY THE TISSUES AND GIVE THE SKIN A WONDERFUL GLOW OF HEALTH.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

I want to be the medium through which the friend in need and the friend in deed may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelop should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

BOYS IN CAMP KEARNEY.

THE war is over for most of us and we are happy to forget its trials and sorrows, but here is a letter from some for whom the war never will be over—a letter that is a challenge to all of us who can help:

"I am writing you in the hope that I may secure what we have been looking for for a long time. The object of this letter is to endeavor to secure musical instruments for an orchestra that the boys have organized here in Camp Kearney.

"The orchestra is an all patient one, and we have some wonderful talent, but we lack instruments. Most of us are disabled veterans who are not receiving any compensation from the government.

"We are situated sixteen miles out in the desert, and the orchestra that comes out from San Diego once a month finds it a long and tiresome journey, so we have wanted an orchestra of our own. All members are Chicagoans.

"We will certainly appreciate your efforts in helping us to secure these instruments. Those we need most are snare drum, saxophone, and banjo.

"Sincerely yours, J. G."

Think what this means! Here are boys of ours, sent thousands of miles from home for treatment, and miles from nowhere in the middle of a sandy waste. Can we forget them or neglect them—particularly when they want the means to help themselves, to do something which may prove a powerful aid toward health for many of them? And particularly can we neglect them when their appeal is one we can meet so easily?

Not all of us have musical instruments to spare, it is true—but surely there are enough of us in this great city, so that we need not fail these boys!

And this is only one of several cases that we can help in just the same way. We have institutions here at home where musical talent exists, and the patients are eager to go ahead, once they get the instruments.

Discarded radios, too, would help, and sheet music of all kinds.

All of us know cheerfulness is half the cure, and that efforts such as the boys in Camp Kearney and other hospitals want to make is one of the Let's do what we can, all of us, to help these sufferers help themselves! greatest aids there can be to health.

Without a Table.

"I wonder if some reader has a dining room table and a few extra chairs to give to us? We have no table now, and it is hard to get along without one. My husband will be glad to call for the things, if they should be offered, and we will sincerely appreciate your kindness. J. F."

Our correspondent does not tell you much about herself, but perhaps you have the table and chairs to give and will be glad to do so, when you learn that a series of hard luck happenings have been the lot of this family in the last few years.

Ill and a Widow.

"I am a widow, a convalescent patient, and am just starting out again to make my own way. I wonder if some one has a black coat, size 38, which is no longer needed? I am in need of a coat, and have no money with which to buy it, as my resources are gone. E. J. Mc."

Our correspondent is 58 years old, and has been ill for some time. The gift of a spring coat will mean a lot to her just now, if you can make it.

Child an Invalid.

"I have a little girl of 12 who has been an invalid all her life. She has few of the pleasures of other children. I wonder if some of your readers have games, toys, little things for her to sew on, or beads with which she could amuse herself? A. K."

This child has a right to all the happiness we can provide for her. We shall be more than glad to give her address to any one who has something to send.

BEDROOMS THAT ARE DIFFERENT.

FOUNDING the decorative scheme of the entire room are the graceful spreads of taffeta, poplin, moire, chintz, linen, net, and many other delightful fabrics in fascinating colors. These have come to supplant the plain white bedspreads of piqué or other heavy, stiff materials which were inevitably used in bygone days. Although the bed is not always given the prominence in modern chambers which it commanded formerly, its dressings are made to be equal to the rest of the furnishings in importance and beauty.

There is a small bedroom in a modern apartment which has been most attractively arranged. The bed is the three-quarter width, placed with its length against one wall, its headboard against another. This headboard is unusually interesting. It is made of a large circular piece, about forty inches wide, set between two slender, carved posts which reach a trifle higher than the horizontal diameter of the circle. It is decorated with a beautifully done floral motif, which fills the circle, except for a border of about six inches all around. Border and posts are painted a soft, leafy green, highlighted with antiqued gold.

Green taffeta makes the bedspread. It is piped around the edge of the mattress with old gold silk. As there is no footboard, a valance of the green, finished with a ruching of old gold, falls over the end as well as along both sides. Near the bed is a comfortable armchair, upholstered in old gold sateen. Completing the room's furnishings are a writing table and stool, placed near the window, and a glass topped dressing table.

Draperies at the windows are of old gold taffeta edged with mauve and green, over ecru glass curtains. The woodwork is old ivory, and the walls pale mauve. There is a large closet, with built-in drawers, adjoining.

A four-post, spool bed in a colonial bedroom is pleasingly treated. Bedspread, valance, pillow sham, side curtains, and tester are made of old fashioned chintz in a geometric pattern in violet and light blue, on a pale yellow ground. The hanging behind the headboard is of plain, light blue sateen. Pillow shams and side curtains are finished with blue ruffles and there are tie-backs of the same.

Colorful hooked rugs are used. The wall is rough plastered. A large wing chair is upholstered in chintz, matching the bed cover, and another chair is done in violet and green striped linen.

Quaintly designed candlewick work, on unbleached muslin, makes the bedspread in another colonial room. Here the bed is of the short-post variety, so tester and side curtains are eliminated. Designing on the spread is done in old blue. Two little armchairs are finished in a fascinating and novel way. Their upholstery is made of old, Normandy peasants' petticoats! The material is similar to calico, finely quilted by hand. Borders around the edges of the seat cushions are made of the hems, which consist of about four inches of fine cordings. The background of the petticoats used on these chairs is bright red, sprinkled with tiny, old blue flowers. In nearly all instances these quaint petticoats are brightly colored and flowered. Glazed chintz draperies at the windows are finished with narrow, double plaitings in red and old blue.

In the room illustrated today the furniture is French walnut. On the bed there is a silk poplin cover and pillow sham of jade green, trimmed with shirred bands of deep coral satin. The interesting chaise longue, composed of three separate pieces which may be placed about the room, makes a comfortable reading or daytime resting place when arranged as shown. It is upholstered in quilted coral satin. The coverlet is of softest lambs' wool, dyed turquoise blue and finished with champagne colored satin bindings. Jade green taffeta makes the cushion, which is trimmed with silk flowers.

Window draperies are of changeable jade green and gold taffeta. The walls are deep old ivory. Champagne colored silk, edged with green and trimmed with coral flowers, makes the lamp shades and shields. The rug is deep golden brown.

Dainty and Frenchy is a bedroom which is built around a Louis Quinze day bed of three-quarter width. It is of carved walnut, with head and foot boards padded and upholstered in soft blue moiré. The bed cover is made of moiré matching the upholstery, with a valance edged and trimmed with a criss-crossing of inch-wide, shaded pink, shirred ribbon. The walls are panelled and calcimined pale pink. Blue taffeta makes the window draperies, and light pink silk gauze the glass curtains. There is a little "slipper" chair covered with blue moiré, piped in pink. Blue satin upholsters a chaise longue on which several cushions are scattered—pink, mauve, green and ecru.

Toile de Jouy upholsters another walnut bed of French design. It is in shades of rust on an ecru ground. The bed cover is of jaspé silk, heavy, in deep rust color, finished with saffron pink. There is a moss rug on the floor and walls are pale green. Draperies at the windows are made of saffron pink sunfast edged with rust, and ecru gauze makes the glass curtains. There is an armchair upholstered in striped linen in ecru, rust, and green.

Striped taffeta makes an effective bed cover in the room furnished in dark walnut. There are wide stripes of sand color with narrower ones of rose and mauve and hairlines of black. Window draperies match the bed cover and glass curtains are of crisp, turquoise green organdie. The rug is taupe chenille. Lighting fixtures are shaded in mauve silk.

Multi-colored flowered linen is used for another combination of bed cover and draperies. Walls are raspberry pink. The linen bed cover is trimmed with shirred bands of raspberry pink poplin. Sill length ecru glass curtains are used beneath the flowered draperies. These draperies are hung by means of large, raspberry pink rings from a wooden pole painted ecru. They reach the floor, hanging straight, and are lined with ecru sateen. On a night stand beside the bed there is a mauve pottery lamp, with a four sided lampshade, smaller at the top than at the bottom. It is covered with tight stretched raspberry pink silk, lined with ivory, and finished with narrow black bindings.

For the little girl's room a washable bed cover is more suitable and serviceable than any other kind. Particularly pleasing is one of point d'esprit net, with a deep, full valance of the same, made over an underslip of colored sateen. Any color may be used under the net, to suit the scheme of the room or the choice of the child whose room it is. Children often have a real yearning for some particular color. Why not let them have it in this practical and effective way? The net could be used for glass curtains, too, with draperies and valances of sateen matching the bed cover's underslip.

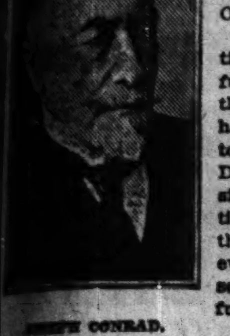
The Heirs of Conrad —By H. L. Mencken

WHY one salient novelist is imitated and another is not is a mystery I have often pondered with great earnestness and assiduity, but without getting light. Consider some of the living Americans. Dreiser is imitated constantly and often effectively: there is a whole school of Dreiserian fiction, with a dozen branches. So, also, there are many imitators of F. Scott Fitzgerald, particularly of the saucy, superficial Fitzgerald of yesteryear. But has any one ever heard of an imitator of Cabell? Or of Hergesheimer?



JOSEPH CONRAD, whose imitators are singularly few.

Both, I believe, should be relatively easy to imitate. They are full of conspicuous mannerisms; their points of view are surely not hard to catch. Yet neither seems to be imitated at all, whereas Dreiser's far more occult and elusive tricks are flung at us every time a new novelist emerges from the revival belt, and Fitzgerald's every time another Yale boy deserts the bond business for beautiful letters.

In England one observes the same curious phenomena. The day after Arnold Bennett's "Old Wives' Tale" was published, at least five hundred ambitious young English novelists spat on their hands and sat down to imitate it. The day after H. G. Wells' "New Machiavelli" came out the hum of imitative typewriters rose to a roar like the sempiternal bawling of the damned. In the same way George Meredith was imitated in his day, and the young and [illegible] George Moore in his, and even Henry James in his.

But what of Joseph Conrad? Certainly no man made a more profound impression upon his time. None brought a more brilliant originality to the English novel; none was an innovator in so many different ways. Yet Conrad, to date, has dragged but two disciples into his orbit.

Disciples Worthy to Carry the Torch.

Fortunately, both are men of great talent, with abundant originality of their own; if, as it appears, they imitate Conrad in this way or that, then surely they do not burlesque him. One of them is William McFee, author of "Casuals of the Sea," "Captain Macedoine's Daughter," "Command," and half a dozen other books; the other is Francis Brett Young, whose latest volume, "Sea Horses," has just been published. McFee is a Scotsman, long an engineer in the British merchant service, and now retired from the sea and naturalised as an American. Young is an Englishman, educated in medicine, but wholly devoted to writing since the war.

There is a wide spread between the best and the worst of McFee. His last novel, "Race," was dreadful stuff, indeed—the story of a shabby English suburb into which an incredible French youth brings a touch of scarlet romance. Apparently McFee forgot Conrad completely when he wrote the book, and tried to model himself upon Arnold Bennett—nay, upon the worst imitators of Arnold Bennett. Stewed realism at its feeblest! I denounced the story when it was published, and herewith denounce it again. It is a pity that such botches cannot be burned by the common hangman.

But in "Command" and "Captain Macedoine's Daugh-

GOOD MORNING!

We are gathered here this beautiful (is it?—I'm writing this on Wednesday) Sunday morning to discuss some things that happen in the lives of a Mr. and Mrs. King, because Mr. King had a theory that no woman should be trusted with much ready money.

ELAINE HAMMERSTEIN plays the leading role in "After Business Hours." [Diamond Photo.]

"Love your wife and give her everything she wants that money can buy," says Mr. King, the great dumbbell, "but DON'T trust her with money."

I read the story by Ethel Watts Mumford, entitled "Everything That Money Can Buy," and it seems to me I thought it was a pretty good story. The picture version isn't so clever.

It hinges on a few unspoken words between husband and wife. If they had come out as they probably would in life—there wouldn't have been any picture.

If Mrs. King had said to her adoring bridegroom: "Now look here, John, the women I run with play bridge and if I go along with them, I'll have to play, too. And if I play I'll have to pay my debts. Give me the money to pay them or agree to pay them cheerfully yourself or I'll crawl into my hole and stay there. FOR in Rome I'm going to be a Roman—and that's that, Light Of My Life!

If she'd just put it that way, her Mr. King would undoubtedly have answered, "Why of COURSE, Little Sunshine, you shall play and pay. What sort of a husband do you think you drew, anyway? Don't be too reckless but be a good sport ALL the time."

Where the Complications Begin.

It wasn't as if John were poor, you understand. No, John was fallow with money and a proud fellow—mighty jealous of his credit and good name.

But—Mrs. King plays her bridge surreptitiously, and worries over her debts, and with chattering teeth and sickly smile accepts the $10 or so doled out to her by her loving husband now and then for "tips and extras," and then runs bleating about to pawnshops with the family jewels.

How could one so sweet and timid know about pawnshops?

She has a girl friend, you see, to whom she confides her woes, and the g. f. shows her the way.

It isn't long, then, until the unhappy bride finds her-

Evanston Extends a Hand to Music

By Edward Moore.

EVANSTON extends the hand of welcome and with the other points to the gymnasium of Northwestern university. The annual music festival is at hand. The event of the season will begin tomorrow night and run without intermission until Saturday night.

Quite a list of attractions is being offered. The festival chorus will sing, the Chicago Symphony orchestra will play; Dean Peter Christian Lutkin will conduct the one, Frederick Stock the other. There will be brilliant guest soloists, at least one guest conductor, a large sized children's chorus, a small sized a cappella choir. New works and old, short compositions and long, are expected to fill the audiences with jubilation and the proponents with a sense of duty well performed.

Let us pause long enough this morning to consider the prospects a little in detail. Joseph Haydn's oratorio "The Creation" is up for the opening performance tomorrow night. Mr. Lutkin will conduct, the Chicago Symphony orchestra will have the instrumental score—it will play in all performances, by the way—there will be a chorus of 1,000 plus the a cappella choir. The soloists will be Florence Macbeth, soprano; Arthur Kraft, tenor, and Elliott Shaw, basso.

Tuesday's and Wednesday's concerts will be known as first and second artists' nights. There is, of course, an uncomfortable assumption in these titles: one might suppose that all concerts except those of Tuesday and Wednesday will be given by persons who have not yet acquired the right to be called artists. However, that is more the affair of those who construct the programs than those who listen to them.

Rosa Ponselle, soprano, and Lawrence Tibbett, baritone, will appear on Tuesday night. Both are from the Metropolitan Opera company. Mr. Tibbett will be remembered as the man who suddenly acquired fame in a performance of Verdi's "Falstaff" last winter; and he was not singing the principal part, at that. He will sing arias from "The Masked Ball" and "Otello"; Miss Ponselle will also oblige with numbers from "Ernani" and "La Gioconda"; the pair will blend their voices in the duet from the Nile scene of "Aida."

Grainger to Conduct His "English Dance."

As an added feature, Percy Grainger will conduct the first performance of his new "English Dance." Mr. Stock is announced for the Suite from Stravinsky's "L'Oiseau de Feu" and several briefer pieces.

Tamaki Miura, the Japanese soprano, and Mario Chamlee, tenor of the Metropolitan and Ravinia, will do the solos on Wednesday night. She, of course, will sing "One Fine Day," from "Madama Butterfly," and also Mimi's aria from "La Bohême." It will be Puccini night, as far as they are concerned, for Mr. Chamlee will sing the aria beginning with the remark about cold hands, from "La Bohême," likewise "Ch'ella Mi Creda," from "The Girl of the Golden West," and their duet will be from "Madama Butterfly."

Mr. Lutkin and the chorus will be prominent again on

LILA OF THE FILMS COMES TO BROADWAY

By Burns Mantle

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Among the amusing visitations of the spring is that of Lila Lee, recently of the cinema, in a farce called "The Bride Retires." Wherein Miss Lila, beloved, they tell me, of the picture crowds, turns off the lights in a Fragonard bedroom, makes her young husband of an hour turn his back, slips herself into a gorgeous pink nightie, turns up the lights, and jumps lightly into a pink bed.

LILA LEE, acting in a farce called "The Bride Retires."

There is a large boudoir adjoining the bedroom and no reason at all why Lila should not undress in there. There is no reason why she should ever turn up the lights after she has adjusted the nightie. There is not much reason, in fact, why she should be playing "The Bride Retires" at all.

But so the adventure is arranged. She is a pretty child, this plump Cuddles of vaudeville, grown into a slim young brunette. She has a pleasant speaking voice, too. And a spark of talent that may flare into a sort of flame some day, though I fear it will take a bit of fanning.

"The Bride Retires" is another of those things Henry Baron periodically digs out of France in the hope that he may hit upon a sensation that will excite the populace and defy the censors. Two hours of obvious double meanings and no entertainment.

A young man, quarreling with his mistress, agrees to marry a young girl who has been denied the privilege of marrying her cousin. They separately agree to remain faithful to their respective loves, and then find after they have dutifully been married that they really love each other.

The bedroom scene is pink as to setting, punk as to drama and piffle as to fun. It causes some sniggering and some wonder, but I doubt that it will attract much business, unless the buyers are won by the title.

The cast is capable. Stanley Ridges plays the bridegroom, and the others include Mrs. Jacques Martin, Grant Stewart, Alice Fischer, and Ethel Intropidi.

Two Reasons for the Party.

The Fiske O'Haras gave a party partly in celebration of their engagement on Broadway with "The Big Mogul," which is playing in 63d street, partly because they have been seventeen years married and never before admitted it. Not publicly, at least.

Mrs. Fiske O'Hara is Patricia Clary of the O'Hara company; Pat to her friends and the program. And the guests invited to that party included the Gish girls, Lillian and Dorothy, and Anne Nichols, the happy millionairess author and owner of "Abie's Irish Rose." Miss Nichols was once the O'Hara leading woman, and wrote most of the plays in which he appeared. Also the Gish sisters were actresses in his company.

The O'Haras are having a nice time in New York. They are not doing as much business as they would like to do, but that doesn't worry them. And there is just a chance they may yet tap the small town public that is to be found in every big town.

"The Big Mogul" is a pretty sad play about a lucky

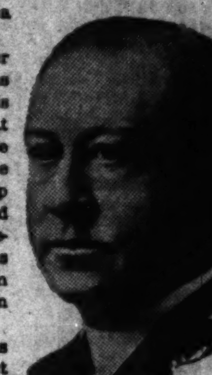
This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

WITH thin resources in the line of Autumn and Winter successes in New-York to draw upon, the managers are doing their best to make a go of the Summertime in the Chicago theaters, four of which are currently in use for pieces still alive down there—"Is Zat So?" "White Cargo," "The Student-Prince," and "Rose-Marie." "The Gorilla" tonight will make a fifth;—and it is not a month old in New-York.



JAMES MARLOWE
He's to be Mr. Garrity in "The Gorilla" tonight.

The indifference to the theater noted in March and April seems to have been dispersed: there is big attendance for the things that are liked. Three or four of the biggest nights in the run of "The Student-Prince" were counted up last week. "The Green Hat" held up to its high average for the preceding five weeks. Miss George is doing so well in her gay play from the French that she bulletins an added week to the original four.

"The Lady Next-Door" seems to be a genuine catch-on. I trust that it is; for it is a good play. And, if it go through a reasonable run (meaning ten or twelve profitable weeks), the venture may take classification among the phenomena of the season; for all the surface-markings were against the play when it was brought in a fortnight ago. It had been a failure in New-York under one title, in Boston under another, and came here with the handicap of a third title that meant nothing; and there was in the cast no player popularly recalled for anything special or distinctive. Then, the first-night audience was the wrong audience for this play or for any play of the sort: its sole merit as an audience was that it paid its way in, although its preference would have been for a raffish Sunday-night piece from the Winter Garden across the street in the Apollo. . . .

No end is in sight for "Rose-Marie," and none for "Is Zat So?" . . . Mr. Craven will be leaving at the end of the week with "New Brooms," which is liked by those who have seen it; and there will be new things with tunes next Sunday in the Garrick and the Apollo.

Letters as to Mrs. Insull.

SIR: Your references to Mrs. Samuel Insull when she was Miss Gladys Wallis were immensely enjoyable to an old playgoer like myself; but you erred in saying that you heard her sing in "The Little Tycoon." I had a complex on that piece, which was the "Abie's Irish Rose" of operetta,—although, unlike the latter, it was successful, in the larger terms of the box-office, only in Philadelphia, where the composer resided. He was Willard Spenser, and wrote three or four other pieces. He was sincere and well-meaning, but preposterously vain, and actually started litigation against Gilbert and Sullivan on the allegation that they stole "The Mikado" from "The Little Tycoon"!

However, this has nothing to do with your error as to Mrs. Insull (or Miss Gladys Wallis); and I am certain you have confused her with another player.

My quaint complex as to "The "Little Tycoon" led me to see every cast that ever gave it east of the Rockies, and to save the playbills. I have the collection on my desk as I write, and know that it contains no mention of Miss Wallis.

JAMES A. BARBERRIE.
Detroit: May 21, 1925.

SIR: As to Mrs. Insull and your paragraphs in THE TRIBUNE of the 21st, you will, perhaps, be interested to know that at the time she sang in "The Little Tycoon" she was under my management, and was "loaned" by me to Mr. George C. Tyler for his revival of that operetta in Philadelphia. When the engagement in that piece ended, she came to Chicago and was made by me the star of "The Cricket," in McVicker's. The play was a new version by Clay M. Greene of the old piece called "Fanchon the Cricket," in which some of the older Chicago theater-goers may recall Miss Maggie Mitchell.

JOHN W. DUNNE,
Manager of "The Lady Next-Door."

Two New Ones for Manhattan.

New plays of the week in New-York are:

"Odd Man Out," by George Tilton and Paul Fox, with Miss Alma Tell, A. E. Anson, James Crane, and Lee Baker. . . . The authors seem to be new-comers among the playwrights. Previous titles they gave to the piece were "The First Hundred Years" and "The Weather-Vane."

"Bachelors' Brides," by George Horace Malcolm, with Miss Lee Patrick, Miss Aline McDermott, and Charles Davis, an actor from England. . . . Mr. Malcolm, too, seems to be new one in the list of dramatists—a list greatly lengthened in recent seasons.

Miscellany.

"Abie's Irish Rose" with last night's performance in New-York passed the long-run record held since August of 1921 by "Lightin' ": the performance is numbered 1,292. Of course, the record made in New-York stands for the United States—and I should say, for any fifty in the world other than London, where the longest run so far made was of "Chu Chin Chow," acted 2,238 times consecutively. . . . That "Abie's Irish Rose is, in the sense of profits, the most successful play yet staged in the history of the theater does not admit of contention. When it is described as the worst play ever acted, successful contradition easily follows. It is a pretty-bad play, by any measure; but at least four worse plays have been shown in Chicago within a year. One of the four was carted last night from the La Salle—"Cheerio."

"The Five-o'Clock Man" is the title of a piece from the French wherein Arthur Byron and Miss Janet Beecher are expected to have the principal rôles.

"What Price Glory!" clicked its three-hundredth New-York performance last night. Plans are to have it acted by three or four casts in the Autumn; and it is understood that the New-York cast will be brought to the Studebaker. . . . The authors, Maxwell Anderson and Laurence Stallings, are preparing a piece about Andrew Jackson, and expect to have it ready for September, footlighting. John Farrar and Stephen Vincent Bénet, the editors of the Bookman, had a play about Jackson produced last year: 'twas called "The Awful Mrs. Eaton" by the authors, and an awful thing by the critics. . . . And the expectation is what William Farnum, now said to be recovered, will proceed in the Autumn with his plan to act the famed Morgan in another Anderson-Stallings piece, "The Buccaneer."

The Messrs. Shubert are said to be interested in obtaining control of at least three of London's best theaters. And London's best theaters are costly things to control, save for the basic landlord. Rents are high, "rates" and taxes are terrifying, restrictions many, and ticket-buyers few.

Miss Francine Larrimore was "made up" and ready to go on; the other night in New-York in "His Queen" when actors' union ordered that no performance be given and that the audience be dismissed because the players had not been paid for the first week of the engagement. The star is said to have offered to guarantee salaries if permitted to proceed. . . . One of the blessings the union is believed to confer on its members is that of exacting a bond from managers of dubious solvency to secure the actors against loss in case of disaster at the box-office. Miss Larrimore is said to have gone into the venture with the understanding that such a bond had been posted with the union. It had been; but the union didn't take the trouble to learn that the bond lacked the collateral to make it valid.

Mr. Belasco is explaining that he has long had his eye on Miss Vivienne Osbourne, who has succeeded Miss Lenore Ulric as the star of "The Harem," and that he was quick to put her into the play when the latter withdrew. . . . Which is nice of him, and all that; but he wasn't so quick that he didn't first try to get a well-known and clever star to take over Miss Ulric's rôle.

Joe Laurie is returning to the varieties for the Summer. . . . And Miss Alice Lloyd is coming back for another go in that form of diversion. She is the widow of Tom McNaughton, an amusing fellow in Cockney.

Samuel Hoffenstein, who writes brightly for the papers about his employer, A. H. Woods, tells in the New-York Times that the latter obtained "The Green Hat" through the gratitude of a young American composer to whom he once was kind. The composer was eager to go to London, and asked Mr. Woods to buy two suits of clothes for him, that he might be presentable. Mr. Woods, says Mr. Hoffenstein, did so. When in London last year, Mr. Woods was urged by the composer, now successful, to tie up the American rights in Michael Arlen's play, and helped to obtain it for him. . . . The composer in question, whether the tale be true or not, had a bit of a career in Chicago back in 1911, when he composed some of the music for one of Mort H. Singer's pieces in the Princess: he is Melville Gideon, and is just now rather the thing in London.

As to "The Green Hat," it is told that the managers of three good theaters in New-York have offered to Mr. Woods not only liberal-sharing terms if he booked the play in one of them, but also fifty percent of the theater's profits from the engagement of the play. . . . And, according to the current issue of Variety, an organization seeking to raise money by a theater-party has offered $5,000 for the right to sell all the seats for the New-York first-night. . . . The box-office takings for "The Green Hat" in the Selwyn seem to be the theme of envious and awed discussion wherever two or more persons of the theater fall to talking things over.

Although this was announced as the final season of stage-activity for McIntyre and Heath, who have been at it as "a team" for more than fifty years, they are bulletined to appear next season in a song-play named "Trumping the Ace."

Miss Mation Coakley, here last year in "The Werewolf," is to go into "Spring Fever," by Vincent Lawrence, author of "Two Fellows and a Girl." . . . Lowell Sherman, who is announced for many plays as the weeks roll by and appears in comparatively few, is mentioned now instead of Henry Hull for "The Passionate Prince," by Achmed Abdullah, the story-writer, and Robert H. Davis, editor of Munsey's Magazine. Mr. Davis once wrote and had staged a piece named "The Family," which I thought was pretty good.

Joe Cook is asking $2,500 a week if he returns to the two-a-day for the Summer. He is said to have been paid $800 a week before he forsook the variety-stage for the Earl Carroll Vanities.

Robert Ames, last here in "Kelly's Vacation," is to be in the movies for the next four or five years, if he stick to his contract with them. . . . He is one of the younger actors who have been spoiled by the critics' "discovering" them: the trouble with the average critic, in writing about actors, is that he doesn't know which is the actor and which the rôle. Many an actor has been ruined by getting a rôle so good that he believes the critics when they tell him he is great.

Miss Dagmar Godowsky, one of the pianist's daughters, is now in the principal woman's rôle in "The Rat" in New-York—the rôle played in the first weeks of the run by Miss Teddy Girard, who helped to finance the American production. . . . Ivor Novello, who wrote the piece in collaboration with Miss Constance Collier, is said to be coming to this country in the Autumn to act the title-rôle, starting in Chicago.

And Miss Collier is mentioned in connection with what is said to be a plan of John Barrymore's to return to London next season and stage "Peter Ibbetson" there. . . . It is remembered that she and he were vis-à-vis in that silly piece when it was acted in 1918 in the Princess.

Miss Hope Hampton, whose eminence has been in the films, explains to an uninterested world that she isn't going to sing the title-part in an operetta by Kalman named "Maritza." . . . This is one of fifty or more imported works announced last Summer for production in the season now ending that haven't yet been staged here.

"The Man Who Never Died" is the name of a piece by Charles Webster; and the title brings to memory a play acted in the Blackstone in 1914 called "The Man Who Would Live": William Hurlbut wrote it; and it had an interesting idea.

"Embers," in which Henry Miller has been acting in San-Francisco, is a play he tried out elsewhere some time ago under the title of "After Love?" A. E. Thomas made it from a French work. . . . This is understood to be the piece wherein Leo Ditrichstein planned to act before he decided to quit acting and to reside in Italy.

IN READINESS

MISS MYRA LEE

She's the understudy of Kathie, the beer-maid of "The Student-Prince." She had her chance week-before-last, when illness laid low Miss Olga Cook, diva of the cast, through three performances; and the report of those who heard her was that she made good. . . . Miss Lee had a principal rôle all to herself last season in Chicago—that of the girl with a voice in "The Climax," wherein she acted for some weeks with Guy Bates Post in the Cort.

As a result, many of the eighty-odd dramatic editors who submitted plays in the contest as members of the original committee are going to feel, after the awards have been made, that the plays they read and submitted were really much better than those given the prizes. And yet, as I say, I can think of no fairer way to judge so many scripts.

Reaching the Decision.

The eighty plays originally submitted in the contest have, I understand, been reduced to twenty, or will have been reduced to twenty by the first of the month. They are now in the hands of the third committee.

This committee of twenty is to vote on five of its members to serve as the committee of final award, and these five will organize and proceed to read the last twenty plays, eliminating seventeen of them and leaving three to be given the prizes and prepared for production in the fall.

The Golden offices are hopeful of having the winning plays back from the last committee by the middle of June. Their optimism is lovely, but their experience with play contests limited. If the three winning plays have been decided upon by Aug. 1, I will be at least mildly surprised.

Also I am disappointed in the quality of plays that have lived through to the third committee. I read one the other day that was not only a bad play but one that could have been played within a single hour with two intermissions. If such a script could pass two reading committees composed of dramatic editors with exact knowledge of a play's requirements it does not speak well for the rest of them, does it?

May Festival at Roseland Tuesday

The final May festival concert of the Treble Clef concert will be given at the First Reformed church of Roseland on Tuesday night. Celia Van der Meer is the director. The assisting artists will be Swantina De Young, organist, Mrs. H. Harmeling, pianist, and Helen Laurense Bannon, harpist. The organization consists of a women's chorus and children's chorus.

Adelaide Berkman, pianist, will give a recital at the Playhouse this afternoon.

IN HIGH-COMEDY AND GUESS-AGAIN STUFF

FREDERICK LEWIS — ELIZABETH CARMICHAEL

MR. LEWIS is known best for his acting in Shakspere with Miss Marlow and Mr. Sothern, although he has been concerned in other enterprises: thus, he was here as the actor of the title-part in "The Wanderer." He is to return to view a week from tomorrow night in Mrs. Insull's revival of "The School for Scandal," wherein he will be the Joseph Surface.

Miss Carmichael's sole distinction, so far as The Tribune at present knows, is that she is the only woman in the Chicago cast of "The Gorilla"; and, although information concerning that play is slyly withheld by its salaried chronicle and herald, it seems fair to guess that we shall find her sorely put upon and subjected to many and varied vicissitudes.

OVER THERE

MISS LOUISE PRUSSING

She is a former resident of Chicago, and is recalled by some for her dancing o' nights in the Blackstone Hotel. . . . Later, Miss Prussing acted here in "Six-Cylinder Love." She is now in London, playing with Gerald DuMaurier in a piece by Alfred Sutro named "A Man with a Heart"; and the newspapers there say much in praise of her.

New Playbills

OPENING TONIGHT:

"The Gorilla" in the Harris.—Something in the line of button-button plays by Ralph Spence that is said to be a riotous success in New-York. . . . The cast for Chicago consists of James Marlowe, Miss Elizabeth Carmichael, Lon Hascall, Curtis Cooksey, John Stokes, Ralph Theadore, Wilbur Cox, Carl Ross, Thomas Bell, Edgar Mason, and Frederick Wallace.

SUNDAY, MAY 31:

"Artists and Models" in the Apollo.—Second issue of the revue of like name shown in this theater last summer. It has been on view in New-York since early in the season.

"June Days," with Miss Elizabeth Hines, in the Garrick.—A version with songs and dances of Mrs. Alice Duer Miller's comedy named "The Charm-School."

MONDAY, JUNE 1:

Mrs. Samuel Insull in "The School for Scandal" in the Illinois.—Special revival through a fortnight of Sheridan's comedy for the benefit of St.-Luke's Hospital, marking Mrs. Insull's first appearance in the theater in many years. (She was a well-known actress as Miss Gladys Wallis.) . . . Mrs. Insull, who will be the Lady Teazle, will have the assistance of professional players, including Frederick Lewis, Arnold Lucy, Wilfred Seagram, Richie Ling, and Miss Florence Edney.

EN ROUTE

MISS GLAYDS WALTON

She is to be here next week in "June Days," which is a song-trimmed and dance-sprinkled rewrite of Mrs. Alice Duer Miller's comedy named "The Charm-School."

The Heirs of Conrad
—By H. L. Mencken

ter"—what a difference! Especially in "Command." Here, I believe, is one of the best novels done in English since the opening of the century—a work full of fresh and lively observation, informed throughout by a lush and captivating irony, and written in a capital style. There is never a hint of the usual rubber stamps in its pages. What McFee has to say is quite new, and he says it in a striking and highly picturesque way. Conrad himself would not have been ashamed of "Command." More, there are parts of "Command" that Conrad himself could not have written. For McFee's English is better than the great Pole's ever was, even at the last. It ripples beautifully. It is brilliant with arch and gaudy flashes.

Story of "Sea Horses."

It seems to me Young still has some distance to go before he catches up with "Command." Nevertheless he is plainly on his way. What he has to tell in "Sea Horses" is the typically Conradean story of a hard boiled sea captain who yields to a gross sentimentality. One can easily imagine what this tale would become in ordinary hands. The captain would be depicted as the noble victim of a great love—in brief, as a Broadway leading man transferred to the sea. Young makes no such mistake. He depicts the whole transactions ironically, as a comedy in the grand manner. The captain is fetched, not by nobility, but by weakness. The gal is no gorgeous tragedy queen, but a plain idiot.

The captain bears the name of Glanvil, and is in command of the British tramp steamer Vega. Coming into Naples from far eastern waters, he finds, to his dismay, that his ship has been chartered to a dubious firm of that place, and must proceed to Panda, a half forgotten port on the Portuguese coast of East Africa. At the last minute the agents confront him with a passenger, Mrs. Salvia—nay, with two passengers, Mrs. Salvia and her little daughter, Gina. It is a great nuisance to have women aboard a tramp steamer. It becomes a still greater nuisance when it appears that Mrs. Salvia is almost penniless—that she is bound for Panda to try to find and reclaim her recreant Italian husband. She herself is an Englishwoman, but Salvia is a dubious Neapolitan.

What follows is simply the story of Capt. Glanvil's gradual surrender to Mrs. Salvia's somewhat weather beaten charms. At first he keeps his distance manfully; he wants no canoodling on his ship, least of all in his own quarters. In the end he pours out money lavishly, and even risks his life to get her away from Salvia.

It is a beautifully sardonic picture of gradually augmenting sentimentality. All the heroic platitudes rise, one by one, to beset poor Glanvil. In the end he sinks slowly into a pool of chivalric mush—gurgle, gurgle, gurgle.

Where Young Falls.

Young has mastered many of the more superficial Conradean tricks—for example, the trick of working up to a dramatic situation by slow steps, and then exploding it with a few lines of astounding dialogue. He has learned, too, how to achieve irony by surrounding the banal with the bizarre. Against Glanvil's simple innocence there is projected the craft of the subterranean Marx at Naples, the occult power of the mysterious Almeida at Panda, and the exotic swinishness of Salvia. All of these figures might have come out of "Lord Jim" or "An Outcast of the Islands." Another of the gallery—Bomba, the Portuguese port captain—seems almost borrowed.

But there is yet something in the general management of the story that shows that it is the work, not of the master, but of a disciple. For some reason that is hard to fathom Young cannot make his melodrama seem quite real, as Conrad always could. When, at the very end, the Vega, aground at the mouth of Panda harbor, is lifted over the reef and to safety by a sudden typhoon, the thing somehow becomes theatrical and incredible. Here Young does not prepare his ground carefully enough. Conrad never fell into that error of omission. He always set his stage with meticulous care. When the volcano went off at last it was startling, but it seemed inevitable.

Young has been greatly praised by various English critics for his style. Even Hugh Walpole is responsible for "I am tempted to say that he writes better English prose than any living English novelist." This is itself bad English, and nonsense besides. Young has an excellent, straightforward style, but it lacks color and variety. His epithets are often obvious, and he has a way of repeating favorite words—for example, obscene—that is amateurish and damaging. The rich, tropical glow of Conrad is simply not in him. Nor has he the immense ingenuity of McFee.

McFee, in brief, is the better of these two carriers of the Conradean torch—at least so far. "Command" and "Captain Macedoine's Daughter" are almost beyond praise. The stately rhythm of genuinely first rate prose is in him, and they probe character to its inmost core. "Sea Horses" falls below them as plainly as it rises above the general level of contemporary fiction. But this Young, if he has not yet attained to perfection, at least shows extraordinary promise. He has essayed to follow Conrad—and has escaped being absurd. In itself that is a fine performance.

MISS SHIRLEY WARDE

The Voice of the Movie Fan

Friday Night for the Kids.

Dear Miss Tinée: I am the father of some children I think pretty well of, and I have a suggestion to make. Why not dedicate Friday nights to the kids and on one night a week show pictures guaranteed to be suitable for them?

There being no school next day this is the evening when we mere parents like to jaunt out with our young.

Saturday nights we're apt to have something of our own on, though I'm not saying that a nice, clean, young folks' picture on Saturday nights would come amiss. But, anyway, why not make Friday evening theirs—cut out the sex stuff and put on something with a clean bill of health for the adolescent.

Just a suggestion, Miss Tinée, but I wish you'd root for it. I'm not the only fond parent by a long shot who will rise up and call you and the managers blessed if you put it across.

L. McF.

(Editor's note: I'm printing the suggestion, anyway. Let's see what happens.)

self in the clutches of an unscrupulous pawnbroker.

Now, the pawnbroker is a bounder with social aspirations he has never been able to fulfill. One of these is the desire to belong to an exclusive club of which Mrs. King's John is, I believe, president. Some kind of a high muckymuck, anyhow. John won't hear of Downing's being accepted as a member.

"He is not our kind of man," says John, drawing his coat tails aside.

Now wait—wait——!

It isn't long before Mrs. King is down to her last gewgaw. She shines those days in imitations, thoughtfully provided by the crafty Mr. Downing, who is complacently playing a waiting game.

He knows that DECEPTION LEADS TO CRIME!

Her last pearl is pawned! What to do! What to do!

A bridge playing acquaintance drops a diamond pin——!

Mrs. King blindly raises a thousand on it—and the fat's in the fire.

Follow wailing, gnashing of teeth, discovery by husband, fight between husband and pawnbroker at which even the babies in the optience laughed heartily, a showdown between husband and wife.

"It's your fault," she wails. "If you'd only trusted me with money, I could have been trusted with anybody's diamonds—well, John, we've made a fizzle of our marriage—this is good-by?—it is all over?"

But NO! John, with working throat, says like mischief it's all over.

"You have taught me a lesson," he moans into her neck. "Hereafter, my treasure, all I have is yours—join a gym, learn to swim—do anything you want."

Curtain.

Isn't it foolish? The original story, though, wasn't so foolish—why, I forget.

Miss Hammerstein is vurr' vurr' charming as the wife. Mr. Tellegen is a deep and dramatic John. You just know he rumbles in his throat and rolls his r's. Phyllis Haver is convincing as the sophisticated friend and John Patrick equally so as the pawnbroker. As a pugilist he's not so much so.

Pretty well staged, "After Business Hours," and I do guess the director did the best he could with the scenario delivered into his hands.

Some time there's going to be a one act drama shown on the screen. It'll be about a husband and wife who spit right out what they're thinking in the first reel, and after that there won't be any more.

Mack Sennett will probably make the novelty.

See you tomorrow!

Give the Public What It Expects, Is Elinor Glyn's Aim

By Rosalind Shaffer

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—[Special Correspondence.]—Mme. Elinor Glyn, her auburn tresses curling forth from under an electric blue chiffon headscarf, was lunching frugally on warm milk and crackers, and watching out for drafts, in her office at Metro-Goldwyn's this week. A severe cold from which she is convalescing had not deprived this most interesting woman of her proverbial sparkle and interest.

"The public always has associated my work with flame and passion," she said, "and in this new picture, I assure you they are going to get what they expect."

Her last one, "Man and Maid," she describes as an epic of gentle love; but this new one, red hot mama!

Madam Glyn has, as is well known in Hollywood, a passion for selecting her actors and actresses, and then redoing them to her own ideas. This art of re-doing is due to a fatal gift, according to Madam Glyn. When she was a young girl she developed a passion for caricatures, and devoted her teens into studying people's faces in London streets, shops, and homes. She developed this observation and caricaturing to such a point that her mother advised her, when she made her debut in English society, never to make another caricature, for it would ruin her socially.

Elinor took her mother's advice, but says her early study has given her the ability to see what lines are best and most flattering to each face. No actor, not even an extra girl, goes into her pictures who is not passed on by her personally. She even reviews each headdress and costume, a detail at a time.

"America? I adore it," says Madam Glyn. "I never would live anywhere else permanently. Europe is of the past. America is the future, the place where one can do things. It is youth."

Watching Constance Work.

Constance Talmadge's set, where they are making her new comedy, "Her Sister from Paris," held several notables on Friday. Constance herself was doing the part of a stage dancer. A gorgeous fluffy puff Dresden china shepherdess, in white and silver, with an enormous hoop skirt made of ruffles of white tarletan edge with silver, a tiny poke bonnet filled around the face with white daisies, and a ridiculous little white parasol with a huge silver bow—that was Constance.

She was doing an old-fashioned waltz number to the strains of the well known "Blue Danube," while Sister Norma watched her from the side lines. Norma had got off from her "Graustark" set to watch Constance dance, and complained that the life of a movie actress was as bad as a teamster's, with night work and early rising and no days off.

Last week Norma received a wonderful present from her sister for her birthday. Constance, while traveling in Spain, bought an old and valuable Spanish shawl. Accompanying the shawl was its 300 year old pedigree on yellowed parchment. Each succeeding owner was entered on the list, and the sheet shows that the shawl has been owned by natives of nearly every European country. Norma has had it made into an evening gown.

Ronald Colman, Hollywood's handsomest heartbreaker, is playing the leading man with Constance, and strolled over, striking in a vivid yellow dress shirt. Yellow, for camera purposes, is whiter than white, but Ronald says it is done out of deference to the moody cameramen, who love nothing better than yellow, pink, and bright blue shirts, and refuse to work if not surrounded by their favorite colors.

Handsome with Sideburns.

Edmund Lowe, over at Fox's on the "East Lynn" set, is prefectly sure there is going to be a famine on hair mattresses before he is done making this picture, for he says he already has used up several hanks of hair making himself handsome with the sideburns necessary for the nineteenth century beau.

Three weeks have seen the handsome Edmund arise and, instead of chasing his trusty blade all over moles and dimples, apply glue, and then the hair, to his classic features. Chewing with dried glue spread over the cheeks is not so snappy, when lunch time comes.

Hero of the Lot.

Warner Baxter is the hero of the Lasky lot these days, for during the filming of storm and shipwreck scenes for "Rugged Water" he and Wallace Beery were in a dory, just past the surf, when the boom whipped about and knocked Beery, dazed, right into the water. Baxter hopped into the briny without further ado, and supported Wallace until help from the camera boat got them to safety.

Last Saturday at the Biltmore was a gala night for film folk. The electricians' ball, a yearly event, was well patronized by the studio folk, who turned out to see the crowning of Madeline Hurlock as queen of the ball.

Madeline wore a close fitting gown of white satin, with a flaring skirt, the bodice sewn with crystals and pearls. A gorgeous golden crown was used, but Madeline says it was most unbecoming, and Eddie Cline gladly assumed the responsibility by wearing it himself all evening.

A huge flower horseshoe, inscribed, "Good Luck to Mabel," was the tribute offered to Mabel Normand, who was introduced and warmly applauded both by stars and the boys behind hte scenes who had worked with her for years in the humble capacity of light throwers.

The adjoining supper room was the scene of several parties, notably: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Urson, who entertained Gloria Swanson and Marquis Hank at supper. A flame colored wrap of heavy silk, trimmed with large silver cloth rolls, wrapped Gloria closely as she walked through the room. Bob Leonard was host at another table. Laura La Plante, Earle Anthony, Avery McCarthy, Patsy Ruth Miller, Carmel Myers in an off-the-shoulder black velvet dress; Jacqueline Logan in pale blue satin, with Jerry Miley; Gertrude Olmsted, Pauline Starke, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Borzage, Ann Pennington, Lillian Rich, and Count James Minotto, were present. Carmelita Geraghty, in white satin with orchids at the shoulder, wore a silver bandeau in her hair.

Comment and Gossip.

Theda Bara, former favorite vampire of early screen days, has finally made good on all the rumors about her return to the screen, and is shortly to begin work at the F. B. O. studio on "The Unchastened Woman." Much curiosity is expressed here as to how the old methods of eye rolling and skirt twitching will compare with the vigorous modern methods of Pola Negri and Nita Naldi.

Just to balance all these brunette vamps, Peggy Joyce is to make a picture, "Skyrocket," at the old Garson studio, where Clara Kimball Young used to do her screen vamping. The Garson studio has been bought by interests backing the independent productions of Marshall Neilan.

Ben Lyon appeared in town for a short time, looking pretty shaggy as to hair; no, Ben, is not in love; he's supposed to look hairy and wild for his scenes in "Winds of Chance," which he has been making on location.

Beauty hints for every home

Stop mistakes in painting

What is Correct for Porch Ceilings?

If it's natural wood, varnish with Rexpar; because Rexpar is expressly made for all outside work and is not affected by moisture, heat or cold. This is the same varnish which Sherwin-Williams recommend for outside doors, yachts, canoes, etc., where exposure to weather and moisture is great.

For painting, use SWP, the extra durable house paint, known the world over for its long life when exposed to the elements.

For very high grade, weather-resisting enamel work no enamel in the world equals Old Dutch—white, ivory or French gray. Old Dutch is specified by America's leading architects on many of the most notable buildings in the country.

For rich stained effects (new wood only) S-W Oil Stain is exactly suited to the work. It can safely be depended upon for outside service.

Making Interior Doors Look Like New

Read the variety of treatments given under "Window Sills." All these beautiful effects in paint (flat or glossy), in varnish ("rubbed" or glossy), in stains and varnish-stains and in enamel, give the householder unlimited opportunity for choice. Each finishing material is made expressly for perfect results on woodwork. Each is the result of years of study by scientific men who lead their professions.

YOU can beautifully refinish dozens of things about the house, the main thing being to get the correct material.

Sherwin-Williams devised the Household Painting Guide to make selections of the right paint, varnish, stain and enamel for each job simplicity itself. Then they arranged with one store near you to give you the Guide materials and Guide service—it is known as Paint Headquarters.

Read the examples on this page. What do they suggest for your home? Look, now, for the one store nearest you in the list below and follow the Guide.

Old Chairs Made Young Again

You can safely apply about everything said under "window sills" to chairs. Old chairs get shouldered out of the way into the attic or other store room because they seem out of keeping with the rest of the house. To bring them into harmony is easy, is fun and costs so little! Old chairs usually are the most comfortable—that is why they are used so much. Save them.

Beautiful Window Sills

Rain leaks in. Dirt blows in. Wear and tear take their toll. Many treatments are possible. To paint with a glossy effect, use SWP. To enamel with either a gloss or a flat non-glossy effect, use Enameloid or Old Dutch Enamel. Both are washable.

In Enameloid you have an excellent moderate-priced enamel and the choice of all the popular colors; and Old Dutch Enamel provides you with the highest quality in white, ivory and French gray.

For varnish with a full gloss, use Scar-Not Varnish—very durable and resistant to wear. For a soft-rubbed effect in Varnish use Velvet Finish No. 1044.

For staining (new wood only) use S-W Oil Stain. Use S-W Handcraft Stains for art finishes of exceptionally high decorative value. Floorlac, in a variety of colors, varnishes and stains in one quick and easy operation.

What Does "Paint Headquarters" Mean?

It means a paint store where you feel like saying to yourself at once: "This is a paint store. This is the kind of store I have always hoped to find. I believe what they are telling me. I believe that they know their business. There is something more behind this store's service than a wish to make this one sale—they appreciate my business and want me to come again. A store that will feature such a helpful idea as the Household Painting Guide is the kind of store that I'm glad to patronize."

STATE VAN BUREN to CONGRESS STS.
WE GIVE & REDEEM S. & H. GREEN STAMPS

Evanston Extends a Hand to Music

By Edward Moore.

Thursday night. The work to be given is Horatio Parker's "The Legend of St. Christopher." The soloists will be Marie Sundelius, soprano, another Metropolitan and Ravinia singer; Theo Karle, tenor; Loyal Phillips, baritone, and William Gustafson, basso. There is another whom R. H. L. could probably identify, but he is not in the office at the time this is being written. At any rate, in the page proof of the programs the name of the boy soprano soloist is announced as Etaoin Shrdlu.

Friday's concert will settle the orchestral composition contest. Mr. Stock will conduct five works selected by the judges from the eighty-four which were submitted by unnamed composers. Charles Martin Loeffler, Percy Grainger, and Richard Hageman will listen to the performance, and then decide which of the five is to have the $1,000 prize. The winning piece will be played on Saturday night, and again some time next season at Orchestra hall.

For the young people's matinée on Saturday afternoon "Martha" will be given, supposedly, like "Hansel and Gretel" last year, partly sung and partly acted. Miss Macbeth, who will open the festival, will be within a few hours of closing it, since she will sing the part of Martha. The others will be Gladys Swarthout, contralto; Ernest Davis, tenor; Herbert Gould, baritone, and Vittorio Trevisan, basso. The children's chorus of 1,500 voices will sing, and Osbourne McConathy will conduct. This, by the way, is the last time he will appear in such a capacity, as he plans to leave Evanston next season.

Florence Austral, soprano, and apparently one of the sensations of the season, will appear on the final program, as will Mr. Grainger—he, however, in the capacity of pianist. Miss Austral is down for "Ocean, Thou Mighty Monster," from Weber's "Oberon," and a pair of Wagnerian numbers. Mr. Grainger will play Liszt's Hungarian Fantasia. The chorus will sing the "Tannhäuser" March and Georg Schumann's "Wake, Awake, for Night Is Flying."

This Is How It Was.

The last would seem to have been an afterthought. "Have you heard," writes a none too reverent correspondent who lives there, "how Evanston, the chaste, the classic, narrowly escaped base degradation at the hands of its own favorite son and in connection with its crowning glory, the festival? This is the distasteful story:

"Dean P. C. Lutkin, known as a defender of Evanston's good name, suddenly turned traitor. In view of the fact that Percy Grainger is going to honor us by conducting a first performance of one of his works and acting as judge in our prize competition and appearing as soloist with the orchestra, the dean conceived the scheme of using the pure, the innocent, the undefiled chorus to perpetrate Mr. Grainger's contemptible ballad, 'I'm Seventeen Come Sunday.' Alas for Evanston!

"Happily, however, for the town, a minority group, flaming with righteous indignation, drew up a petition denouncing the ballad and demanding its withdrawal from the program; and, as a result, we will sing George Schumann's 'Wake, Awake.'"

The correspondent incloses a copy of "the vile, delightful text," but unfortunately space limitations forbid its reproduction here.

Ravinia Begins to Throb.

If you happen to be motoring past Ravinia these days you may not see the operatic wheels turning nor hear the hum of preparatory activity, but they are turning and it is humming just the same. For the fourteenth season of that favored spot of music will begin on Saturday night, June 27, and many armfuls of preliminary details must be gone through before the curtain rises.

Armand Agnini, the stage director for many years there, has already taken up his duties. He has charge of such things as building new scenery, refurbishing old, and assembling properties, and there is a lot of it to be done. The artists have not begun to arrive yet. They are still spread pretty much over two continents, but the Ravinia season is much in their minds.

Lucrezia Bori went to Paris two weeks ago, not for rest or recreation but to spend her time with designers and modistes providing herself with new costumes. She is a stickler for correctness of detail as well as general effect, and she sends word that in restoring the Giulietta and Antonia of "The Tales of Hoffman" to her répertoire, parts she has not sung for a long time, she is going to have a Giulietta costume that will make her feminine admirers sit up and gasp.

Rosa Raisa is at Milan's La Scala, making another stormy hit in "Nero," and preparing to sing some of the rôles in which she will appear at Ravinia. She will take a short vacation at her home near Milan and then return to this country.

A TRIO OF FESTIVAL SINGERS

Here are three of the melody makers for whom Evanston desires your kind attention at its music festival this week. Mr. Tibbett, who suddenly became famous in the baritone section of the Metropolitan last winter, will join with Miss Ponselle, a soprano of the same opera company, in some arias and duets in the first artists' program on Tuesday night. Mr. Kraft will sing the tenor part in Haydn's "The Creation" tomorrow night. He was once a Chicagoan, is now a New Yorker and, it is said, is about to resume dating his mail from Chicago.

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

What is the best joke you ever heard? If you'll write it out and it is published, $1 will be paid. No manuscripts returned. Address Best Joke Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

No Pampering.

"Now that your boy is big enough to go to school," said the proprietor of the village book store to Farmer Brown, "don't you think you ought to get him an encyclopedia?"

"I should say not," replied Farmer Brown. "He will have to walk to school just the same as I did."

E. O. H.

Think of That!

Two men, renowned for their laziness were shuffling along in a timber yard. The foreman asked them where they were going.

"Just takin' this plank up to the mill," answered one of them.

"Plank!" said the foreman. "I don't see any plank."

Whereat both men glanced down at their hands, then over their shoulders, and finally at each other's faces.

"Blowed if we ain't gone and forgotten the plank!" said the spokesman.

L. F.

Quite All Right.

Mistress (severely)—If this occurs again, Jane, I shall be compelled to get another maid.

Jane—I wish you would, mum; there's quite enough work for two of us.

I. L.

Why, Of Course.

Joe—What nationality are most telephone operators?

Fran—Central Americans!

Put your buildings and equipment under du Pont protection!

ELMER TELLS US ALL ABOUT THE IDEAL ANNOUNCER

And He Ought to Know—He's Heard 'Em All.

Numerous letters to the radio department praising this announcer or censuring that one have made us wonder just what the "perfect announcer" should do and say. Seeking an answer to the question, we have turned to Mr. Douglass, who, as radio critic of The Tribune, has listened to a score or more of announcers every night for the last two years.—Editor's Note.

BY ELMER DOUGLASS.

The ideal announcer, in my opinion, is one, preferably a man, who, unseen, can be placed alongside the receiving set in our home and from that vantage point introduce his station in the gentlemanly manner that would befit the average home; by voice and manner harmoniously introduce the speaker, entertainers, or special broadcast, as the case may be, and through his knowledge of what is to come keep us informed and so deeply interested that we will forget everything until the close of the program.

Apparently from this, the announcer and the program are considered together—they are. The announcer is something more than the mere frame for the picture. His voice at best is of a different tonal color than the presentation. It cannot be emphasized too strongly that our minds unconsciously retain something of this color, and making it run into the presentation, similarly to a differently tinted moving picture film.

Should Not Draw Attention.

If the announcer lacks the requisites of a normal voice, if he has mannerisms, or if his conversational style is not in harmony with the program, he attracts attention to himself.

If he wastes our time, we are prone to turn the dials and replace both the announcer and the station; or, as not infrequently happens, the station is tuned out for the duration of the announcement and tuned in again at its conclusion.

The ideal announcer in tone and manner should reflect refinement; he should not use harsh tones or uncouth language; he should not use unnecessary words; he should not use a singsong style; he should assume that we know nothing of Latin, Spanish, German, French, Greek, Hawaiian, or Fiji languages, and should whenever possible, give us an English translation of non-Anglicized foreign titles; he should be mindful of the possible presence of children; he should not use careless expressions like "You've just heard," "The next one [or selection, etc.] will be," etc.; he should be concise, yet he will judiciously supply us with interesting, informative, or human interest data.

Avoid Personal Equation.

The prolongation of the vowel sounds is peculiarly objectionable. Personal equation words like "folks," "friends," or even to be advised that an artist will sing "for you," or even "for your approval," are, in effect, forms of solicitation of patronage, and, therefore, objectionable—"you" is being worked to death in Chicago at present. The sensitive listener does not wish to feel that he is being singled out for attention; for, if he has given this any thought at all, he is aware that it is possible that at that particular moment he is the only listener hearing that particular broadcast.

Strangely it has been observed that the announcer who is thoroughly at home in a popular program is not at home in a classical program. The gulf between the two has been too great for any one announcer to span, so far. If he is good in the one he is not good in the other.

For some unaccountable reason, the strictly comic announcer has not yet appeared. It doesn't seem hopelessly impossible that he may yet appear, and, if so, he is awaited with peculiar interest.

Should Be Leader.

The announcer should consider that his station is a beacon from which there radiates the station's call letters, and that the light that emanates therefrom is just colorful and pleasing and worth while as he himself makes it.

In vocal characteristics he should measure up to the full stature of a man. His voice should have a healthy, wholesome tone, and with it carry the impression of abundant vitality. He should be sufficiently versatile to meet emergencies adroitly and appropriately.

And, finally, he should give the impression of possessing reserve power physically, and further, that however perfect he may be today he will be better and farther advanced tomorrow, and take us along with him as he leads the way.

W-G-N TO BRING SPEEDWAY RACES TO YOUR HOMES

All Features Will Be Put on Ether.

The Indianapolis 500 mile international speedway auto races next Saturday will be broadcast by W-G-N under the auspices of the Prest-O-Lite company. Basing the prediction on the experience in broadcasting the Kentucky Derby, which proved a decided hit among listeners, it is anticipated that many thousands of set owners will listen in to the auto races at Indianapolis.

Right At Your Home.

So next Saturday—Decoration day—from 10:15 in the forenoon until after 4 in the afternoon, W-G-N will be bringing all of the thrills and colors of the sweepstakes race into your home. The race starts at 11 o'clock—Chicago daylight saving time—but Announcer Ryan will be on the air at 10:15, describing the pageant and the throngs and giving the late information on the contestants.

Arrangements for Event.

There will be two announcers' booths, glass inclosed, one in front of the judges' stand and another near the pits. More microphones are to be suspended in the grandstands and about the track, through which you will hear the mighty roar of the cars and the speedway band, composed of several Indiana organizations and totaling 1,075 pieces.

A corps of track reporters and messengers will aid the W-G-N staff. Complete data on the positions of the cars, the number of laps covered, the time and speed of each, will be announced every 25 miles. Last year's attendance of over 100,000 is expected to be increased next Saturday.

NEW BRANCH OF RADIO INSTITUTE IS ORGANIZED

The Chicago section of the Institute of Radio Engineers held its first public meeting yesterday in the rooms of the Western Society of Engineers in the Monadnock building.

Edward Bennett, professor of electrical engineering at the University of Wisconsin, spoke on the subject "An Analysis of Short versus Long Wave Radio Systems."

L. J. Peters, his assistant, presented the subject "Behavior of Radio Receiving Systems to Signals and to Interference."

The formation of the Chicago section is the outcome of several years of earnest effort by local members of the institute. Last winter, when the now well known Chicago Radio Technical society was formed, consisting of a small closed body of local engineers, the need for an open body of more public interest was at once seen. After much negotiation with the eastern offices of the I. R. E. this permission was obtained, with the above results.

RADIO SIGNALS TO WARN SHIPS OF FOG AREAS

First to Be Placed in St. Clair River.

Washington, D. C., May 23.—[Special.]—"Fog, the greatest menace of the sea, may be overcome by radio," J. Walter Drake, assistant secretary of commerce, declared today in announcing that he was sending two of his best radio engineers to Detroit to equip the Huron lightship, at the entrance to the St. Clair river, with the necessary apparatus to "defeat the white death of the lakes." This will be the first station on the great lakes, to be followed by six more installations this season.

Estimating that over 95 per cent of the $20,000,000 loss in property and about the same percentage of the hundreds of lives lost, just on the Pacific, from 1918 to 1923, were due to accidents resulting from fog, Mr. Drake said the lighthouse service system of fog signals "for the first time in marine history affords a practicable means by which a navigator may obtain accurate bearings or invisible objects."

The lighthouse service of the department of commerce, Mr. Drake pointed out, has been studying the possibility of utilizing the directive element of radio signals for locating vessels in fog, and this country was the first to establish successful radio fog signals, those at the entrnace to New York haveing been in operation since 1921

RADIO TEACHING MADE PART OF OAKLAND SYSTEM

Experiments Are Found Amazingly Successful.

San Francisco, Cal., May 23.—Classroom instruction by radio will become at once an integral part of the Oakland public schools system, it was announced today. Experiments just concluded, which were commenced a year ago, have convinced school officials that broadcasting lessons into classrooms of several schools at one time is a valuable educational medium, worth continuing as a regular thing, under careful supervision.

During the last year experiments were carried out with the coöperation of KGO, the Pacific coast General Electric station, located here, covering the general subjects of "Science," "Arithmetic," "Drawing," "Penmanship," "Creative Composition," "Thrift," "Vocational Counseling," "How to Read a Book," and "Manuel Activities." Results attained are said to be astonishing, drawing and penmanship proving most easily adaptable to radio. Each of the general subjects given were worked out for the fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, and tenth grades, with good success, according to Dr. Virgin Dickson, head of the research department of the Oakland schools.

Also Instruct Others.

It was found that lessons broadcast into schools for pupils listening before loud speakers also proved instructive to others. Teachers, principals, supervisors, the public at large, and particularly mothers and fathers in homes and workshops, received benefits from the radio lessons. Several letters were received after the first few broadcasts from men who said they were glad that at last some way had been found for fathers to keep up in the mad race with their sons. One or two mothers sent in papers to be graded.

Each lesson broadcast was carefully prepared by an expert, a supervisor particularly skilled in his or her subject. Days were spent on a single lesson which required sometimes not more than fifteen minutes to give over radio.

Tries Out on Assistants.

One supervisor, whose assignment was to teach the invisible class how to draw Christmas trees, tried out her material on her assistants. She stood out in the hallway leading to her office and read her lesson papers. Her assistants followed instructions, and in this manner she slowly built up her technique of "talking the lesson."

She confessed, however, that after the lessons were broadcast at KGO, she was surprised when five hundred pictures of Christmas trees, showing greater originality than she had ever seen as a result of any other kind of teaching, poured in upon her from all parts of the city.

Several schools made their own receivers. It is believed, however, that a master receiver in each school building, with wires leading to loud speakers in every classroom will eventually solve the problem of equipment. Better control, it was pointed out, can in this manner be attained. The principal then can be held personally responsible for radio reception in his school.

KANSAS AMATEUR GETS MESSAGE TO THE PHILIPPINES

Ottawa, Kas., May 23.—[Special.]—Amateur radio achieved new laurels recently when Vertice Wilson, 21 year old licensed amateur operator of this town, successfully tarnsmitted a message to Chief Radioman Harry Kidder, U. S. N., who is stationed in the U. S. naval radio station at Los Banos, Laguna, Philippine islands.

Inside the—Loud Speaker

with Quin A. Ryan, the Voice of W-G-N

JUST peeking out of the loud speaker this morning to see if you're here.

From the bags and bags of mail we are receiving, and from the comments of all the folks we meet, it seems that everybody in the middle west laid off work last Saturday to hear us broadcast the Kentucky Derby.

And, while the preparations were tough and laborious, still, it was great fun to sit in our little cupola on top of the grand stand and bid you to come up and perch there while we chatted of the multicolored spectacle and the swarming thousands and the races. I'm glad you could hear the bugle and the shouts so well—and the Pullman Porters' octet, who were sitting up there with us, and the Oriole orchestra, and the stories of the experts in the press box.

Some of our microphones were whole city blocks apart, and all of our switching from mike to mike had to be done by field glasses. Hundreds of the letters from old racing fans said it was as good as being at the track—and such nice comments from you listeners are all that matter.

Two nights before the Derby a few of us were lazing about a room in the Brown hotel and one of the reporters called in Earl Sande for us to meet him. It was 10 o'clock, and Earl was preparing for his regular early curfew on the same floor. But in he came, in dressing gown and slippers, as gracious and as bashful as a Lincoln penny, escorted by his brother-in-law, Mr. Casey. Just a boy, an alert and diffident boy, the kind of boy you'd expect to hang pennants in his bedroom.

Immediately after the final race on Derby day the whole radio party skipped out for Nashville and up into the Tennessee hills to the country place of Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Lindsey—and what a delightful rest!

And next Saturday—Memorial day—we broadcast the big Indianapolis speedway races from the track at Indianapolis.

So many people ask, "Is it possible to hear yourself on the radio?" And the answer is, of course, "Yes." But after you've heard yourself you won't want to again for a decade or two. It sounds just like those curved amusement park mirrors look. One evening we put a radio set beside the announcer's desk in the studio, and I kept the head phones on while I announced dance selections—and Oooo! it seemed like the concerted voices of Dante, Davy Jones, The Bogey Man, and the Sandy Hook Lighthouse!

RADIO GOLF.

Let's have a round of radio golf. What? Well, no better time to learn than now!

Now you and I sit right down here in front of your radio set. We drive and shoot and putt by turning the dials, one man at a time. Whatever we get is counted as our strokes. That's all except you'd better jot down these ground rules:

You're clean down the fairway or making a sweet putt if you get—

A male singer.
A dance orchestra.
A classic orchestra.
Or a quartet.

You're in the rough, or your putt is amiss, if you get—

A female singer.
A glee club.
A lecture.
A sermon.
Or a bedtime story.

You're in the sand pit, or your ball is in the water pond, if you get—

An Hawaiian guitar.
A piano solo.
A reading or a bit of elocution.
A weather bulletin.
Or an accordion.

And you've whiffed and missed the ball completely if you get—

Interference.
Whistles.
Code messages.
Cat-calls.
Steam riveters.
Or announcers.

So now everything's set. It's your set; so you allow me to drive off first. I drive blindly into the ether. I get cat-calls; didn't even hit it. I swing the dials again. Now I get a tenor singing "Roses of Picardy." That's a darb shot on the fairway. Two strokes for me.

You tee up to the dials now and twirl 'em. Wham!—a dental school quartet doing "It Ain't Goin' to Pain No More." Good drive—right down the lane!

Now I grab the midiron! 'Round go the dials, and—plunk!—a gal is reciting "Paul Revere's Ride." That ducks me square in the pond! Another ball, and we're off again. A fine swing, and lo! a lecture on "The Art of Spinning Tops, and, if So." Not so good—I sliced into the rough. That gives me four strokes to your one.

Your turn again. You'll try a brassie shot now. Twist the saucers, and—wow!—what whistling! Eight people must be calling their dogs in! Well, you just dug up the turf on that one.

You try again. Ah, a peachy, right on the green! You got a symphony orchestra.

Let's see, I was in the tall grass, wasn't I? Twirl the apples again, and—gee, a good tenor and baritone duet! Now we're both on the green, you in three and I in five. I'm off my game today. It must be a bum set.

Your putt. You get a basso. Good. Holed out in four. That's par on this hole on a five tube course.

I putt. Doggone! A soprano! Missed the cup. I move the eggs again, and I hit some amateur code interference—didn't even touch the ball. Again—oh, a string quintet!—and I hole out in seven. It must be the weather.

That's the first hole.

And maybe that's enough.

Cheerio! See you tonight in your radio set!

CANONIZATION HEARD BY HOSTS THROUGH RADIO

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ROME, May 23.—Will Pope Pius ever deliver a message to the world over the radio? Many persons are asking this question today following the surprising announcement of how the pope cosented to the radio installations in St. Peter's for the canonization of St. Therese, "The Little Flower," last Sunday, and how the difficulties were overcome by those members of the papal entourage who had charge of the innovation.

According to one newspaper, the radio installation will remain at the Vatcian, so that whenever St. Peter's is crowded by 10,000 to 15,000 persons in the future all will be able to hear the church's supreme pontiff. The installation consists of two microphones; one at the great altar where the pope celebrates mass and another at the papal throne from which the pope delivers the benediction.

The installation of the radio was kept secret and not even the press was informed. It was a weird surprise to many thousands in St. Peter's who did not know of the radio or who did not notice the numerous loud speakers which permitted the pope's voice to be heard as clearly as if it were nearby. Thousands were so far back that they beheld the pope as a tiny figure on the stage. Yet his voice sounded so clear that it filled thousands with the greatest wonder.

According to one newspaper, untold difficulties were surmounted before the installation was made. The secret was kept from the newspapers because it was feared they would cry out it was a scandal and profanation.

It is said that the pope consented to the proposal readily. The effect during the benediction was startling, and an effective part of the ceremony was the fact that many of the people could not see the man from whom the words issued. The pope already has a radio set to hear world events and many believe that his great iterest in radio, as shown in this instance, may lead to his using this as a mean to reach parishioners far removed.

Complete details of the celebration plans will be announced from WEBH by Director Robert D. Boniel. The plan already has been told to radio fans from the station and further announcements are to be made.

To Run All Night.

The entertainment program on this birthday celebration will run until daylight. These extra hours are added for this occasion to give listeners on the Pacific coast a chance to get in on the prizes, as the Pacific coast is three hours earlier in time since Chicago has been on daylight saving time.

SEEK TO LEARN IF ADVERTISING BY RADIO PAYS

The American Association of Advertising Agents, through Thomas F. Logan, of New York, chairman of the National Radio committee, is now engaged upon a careful and impartial study of the results of advertising from radio broadcasting stations.

TO TEST FLOATING STATION.

An experiment is to be made on Lake Michigan with a floating broadcasting station.

STANDARDIZING OF RADIO PARTS GETS UNDER WAY

The machinery of actually producing a practical method of standardization of radio parts is in motion, with the prospect that before long there will be a plan and agreement among manufacturers under which all will share the benefits of standard sizes, etc., in the materials that form the essential parts of all sets.

The American Society of Mechanical Engineers, at its annual meeting in Milwaukee the last week, discussed this subject among the many other technical matters that came up. Prof. Collins P. Bliss, head of the New York university testing laboratories and chairman of the association's standardization committee, reported progress. It appears manufacturers are practically unanimous in their support of the standardization plan. They are even now far ahead of the automobile trade in this respect, which passed through many troublesome years before reaching the standardization plan.

GYP RETAILER DRAWS FINE FOR FOOLING PUBLIC

A Providence radio dealer was recently fined $100 and costs on two counts. The first was for violation of the state advertising law, and the second for not complying with a city ordinance which requires that trade names of stores be registered.

The dealer advertised "real cut prices" on a certain standard set. He set forth that he had just made a large purchase of these sets, but an investigation showed that the sets offered were not of the make represented.

OREGON-has hit its stride

OVER 800,000 people spent their vacations in Oregon last year. We expect more this year. They came to play along our fishing streams, on our seashore, in our forests, on our snow-capped glacier-clad mountains, on our evergreen golf links and to motor on our incomparable paved highways.

Oregon appealed to them probably more than any other state, not only as a vacation land but as a place in which to live and do business. Our superb natural scenery, ideal temperate summer climate, our luxuriant foliage and evergreen meadows, picturesque country homes, the cleanliness and healthiness of our cities and the marks of progress that were everywhere apparent, created a profound and lasting impression upon our visitors of the advantages and attractions of Oregon.

The removal of the state income tax, the tendency on the part of the legislature to reduce our real estate and other direct taxes, is indicative of the fact that Oregon is opening wide its doors to new industries and to new capital.

The quality of Oregon products of the farm, orchard and factory, is winning for them wider markets, at increased and satisfactory prices, through which established industries—agricultural, horticultural and manufacturing—are becoming more prosperous every day. Oregon quality is becoming a household word in local and eastern markets.

Hydro-electric power, efficient labor, low taxation compared with many other states, and the excellent conditions under which people live, are important factors in the development of Oregon.

Portland's Rose Festival will be held from June 15th to 20th on a more elaborate scale than ever before produced. Gorgeous street parades, the coronation of Queen Rosaria, a brilliant and imposing historic pageant with a cast of five thousand people, massed choirs of two thousand voices, and an orchestra of one hundred and fifty pieces, will be part of this year's celebration. Let this event be part of your vacation and spend the rest of it in the big outodors of Oregon. Take advantage of special excursion rates.

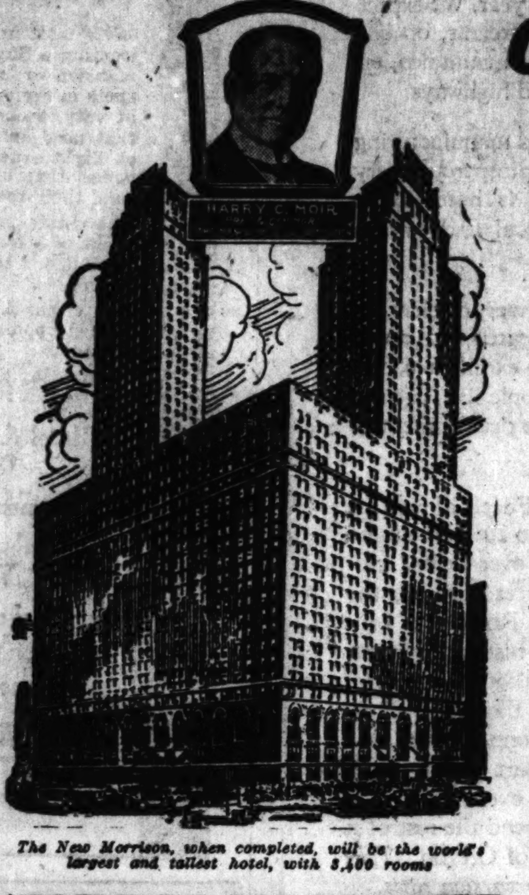
"Keeping Pace with the Growth of Chicago"



The New Morrison, when completed, will be the world's largest and tallest hotel, with 3,400 rooms

THE NEW MORRISON HOTEL

Largest—and Most Economical—in the World

THE singularly reasonable rates for which the Morrison Hotel is celebrated are largely due to valuable store subleases, which enable the hotel to charge $3 to $5 for rooms that would rent for $5 to $8 in any other front-rank hostelry. But now a "sky-lease" has given this policy a far wider application; the new Clark St. section will contain 850 rooms—400 in the tower—practically without ground rent. On the upper floors guests will enjoy the delightfully clear atmosphere of a suburban hotel—with only a short elevator ride to reach it.

The Morrison's present capacity (1,054 outside rooms, each with bath) will eventually be 3,400 rooms—the largest hotel in the world.

The Morrison is the home of the Terrace Garden, "Chicago's Wonder Restaurant," internationally famous for brilliant entertainments, tastefully served meals and perfect dance music. The artists engaged for the week beginning Monday, May 25, will be:

FRANK LIBUSE

Mrs. Volney Foster and her lively youngsters, the twins and a younger son, all under 10 years of age, sailed yesterday on the Homeric with the study of the French language as their main object.

Charles Edward Brown and Volney Foster both expect to join their respective families in midsummer. Meanwhile the two temporarily deserted husbands will make the best of life in comfortable quarters at the Onwentsia club. The lot of a temporarily wifeless husband is by no means unendurable in a gay community like Lake Forest, where social entertaining is unending and unattached men not so easy to find to fill the rôles of dinner and bridge partners.

Perplexities of Hostesses.

Each year the plea rises from hospitable hostesses, "O, do find me some available single man! I don't know more than two or three, not enough to go round."

The truth is that Chicago is first and foremost a community devoted to business, which means that men of brains are apt to be unwilling to undermine their vital forces by the strain that social intercourse and late hours inevitably entail on those who have to start their days early. So the ambitious hostess finds it hard to provide enough clever, agreeable, worth while men to match her clever, agreeable worth while women guests. The desirable men are there, hiding in the bushes, but won't come out except now and then and at only a few calls.

Some say bridge has destroyed the fine art of conversation. I don't think so; it may have driven it out of that section of society which is commonly known as fashionable, but there are several houses in Chicago where it is still to be found, houses where talk is more or less general; where light and witty repartee can still furnish forth the feast; where stimulating discussions are not utterly unknown.

What is doing more to drive intelligent conversation and pleasant companionship out of our social life is not bridge, not oncoming dullness, not a thickening of the brain tissues; it is prohibition, just that and nothing else. As that wise prophet and elder of this age, Elihu Root, said lately: It has destroyed the earlier national trend toward temperance and even total abstinence, which was a growing fact in our family and social life. Nice, self-respecting men and women, who in other times never used to do so, now take cocktails, while a sizeable element who were wont to drink when the chance came, but did not especially seek it, now drink to excess, so that it is one of the commonest experiences of the youth of the day to see their intimate friends, their pals and cronies, utterly, disgustingly, and helplessly drunk. It is a sorry state of things and one not to be matched in any other civilized society. It is the talk and scandal of older, more self-respecting nations.

Law and Resentment.

Perhaps the day laborer, the wage earner, drinks less; perhaps we have almost eliminated what the wife of a bibulous man used to call "the sotter's Saturday night"; perhaps Monday mornings find our industries working as never before; but the golden youth of the country are certainly manifesting their disapproval of the famous amendment which was passed while the best of this g. y. was on the other side of the Atlantic with no chance to vote for or against it. They flout and disregard it as if the word law meant nothing to them.

It is a sorry spectacle, the whole business, take it from any side or point of view. The onlooker sees one element in the country trying, by force of arms if necessary, to impose on the whole of the nation restrictions on what seem to another element inalienable rights. To manifest their not unnatural resentment against what seems to them intolerable coercion, some of those belonging to this second element undertake—and most successfully, it must be admitted—to make themselves distressingly and beastly intoxicated, to the utter ruin of their physical and spiritual health. What good does this do either the individual or the cause of personal freedom? It is all preposterously absurd, and those who come after us will look back on this epoch with incredulous bewilderment and lack of understanding.

Changing the Subject.

But this is gloomy meditation. I did not mean to take this turn of the road this nice, May, Sunday morning.

What's going on now, socially speaking, do you ask? Well, there's another ball afoot. This time it's for the Russian students, exiles who are trying to get an education in the U. S. A. in order either to become permanent citizens of this country or to be equipped to return to their unfortunate land if ever the opportunity be given them. It is a most worthy cause, and I hope it will meet with genuine and enthusiastic response. The only ones who can by any possibility save Russia from its present predicament are Russians. Even for them it is going to be a gigantic task, no matter how well equipped they are.

Mrs. John A. Carpenter, the parent of so many of our memorable public balls and entertainments, is the originator of this affair. Her name heads the list of patronesses, a list not yet complete, but including besides Mrs. Carpenter, Mrs. Benjamin Baker, Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, Mrs. B. W. Dickson, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mrs. H. P. Judson, Mrs. Howard Linn, Mrs. Gordon J. Laing, Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, Mrs. George H. Meade, Mrs. William A. Nitze, Mrs. Potter Palmer, Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson, and Mrs. John H. Winterbotham.

Serge Borowski, the well known Russian singer, is chairman of the committee organizing the ball, while Philip Bellows is executive secretary. The latter is an Englishman who, as he says, got into this Russian business because his father, John Bellows, author of the well known French dictionary that bears his name, was a great friend of the famous Count Tolstoi. He is in it, however, heart and soul as is Michael Laseref, the Russian colonel who has been a Chicagoite for three years or so.

Aiding Russian Students.

The ball is going to be held on June 8, at the Trianon, the setting for the brilliant ball which was organized three years or so ago for the benefit of the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society. It is an excellent place for a dance. It has an ample and well kept dancing floor surrounded by a raised dais where boxes can easily be installed. Outside of this a circular promenade affords a place for dancers or other peripatetically inclined mortals to roam in rose colored twilight. The tickets for the ball will cost a dollar apiece. The boxes, each seating ten persons, are priced at $35. Not expensive either seats or boxes and of a price which should enable many a lad to take his lass for a whirl to fine music and in good company.

In the intermissions between the dancing, the Russian choir will sing under Colonel Shumkoff's direction. Among other selections Borowski will sing, "Sinkarazin," a well beloved national song, relating the adventures of the Russian Robin Hood, and in the chorus of which it is hoped that the entire company gathered at the Trianon will join. Also there will be numbers from the Balalika band, a group of young Russians who play on their national lute, a sweet, plaintive stringed instrument that looks like a direct descendant of the old Greek lute—such as Apollo is depicted holding in ancient, dim frescoes on recently excavated houses in Crete and around Mount Vesuvius.

It is sure to be a good ball and one with more romance in its general air than most of our semi-public balls.

There is that about the Russians and their present plight that fires the imagination and enlists the sympathies as few other international problems and questions do. That huge, almost undeveloped country; those three hundred million people, half occidental, half oriental, who are seeking dawn through the flames of hell; their somber past and bloody present, combine to make a fantastic and lurid background to the life of this twentieth century civilization which wakes even us Americans from our smug security and makes us for a moment forget our porcelain bath tubs, our golf clubs and our furtive cocktails. So let us all unite to help the Russian students in this country to get that education they so ardently desire.

High Light of the Week.

I don't know how many boxes the Illinois theater has, but if you want

MRS. SAMUEL INSULL will step back into the rôle of actress, which she abandoned when she married, for a two weeks' run of a revival of Sheridan's comedy, "The School for Scandal," beginning on Monday evening, June 1. As Gladys Wallis Mrs. Insull was one of the most popular of the young actresses in the country, and she was at the height of her stage career when she retired from the footlights to assume the position in Chicago's social life which she has held since that time.

Mrs. Insull is to play the rôle of Lady Teazle in the play which has been subscribed for by a group of prominent citizens in order that the entire proceeds may go to the building fund for St. Luke's hospital. Boxes and seats for the opening night are being disposed of at large prices by a private subscription sale being managed by members of the St. Luke's women's board, of which Mrs. Wilhelm L. Baum is president.

Mr. Insull and his son, Samuel Insull Jr., have each a box for the opening performance, which will undoubtedly be one of the most important of the summer's social occasions.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

one it looks to me as if you'd have to waylay some other luckier mortal in order to get it for the opening night of Mrs. Samuel Insull's presentation of "The School for Scandal." This is the list of boxholders at the Illinois theater up to date for June 1: Walter S. Brewster, Gilbert E Porter, Stanley Field, Edward J. Blair, Mrs. Roger Sullivan, Samuel Insull, Samuel Insull, Jr., Barron Collier, John J. O'Brien, and Stuyvesant Peabody. Arthur G. Cable and Chauncey McCormick are organizing a committee to manage the sale of tickets for the fortnight's engagement of this unique company which will give the people of the middle west an opportunity to see a great play presented by a remarkable cast. Others on this ticket committee are Chauncey B. Borland, Walter S. Brewster, Frank Hibbard, J. L. Martin, Shreve C. Badger, Joseph T. Ryerson, and John R. Winterbotham.

One night of the engagement will be given over to the bankers, who will take the entire main floor. Another night will be devoted to the board of trade. Still other organizations have asked to have special evenings reserved for them. Two-thirds of the sum necessary for the building of the new wing at St. Luke's has already been raised, and a substantial part of the remainder ought to be forthcoming as the result of this fortnight's engagement.

Inside information reveals the fact that Mrs. Insull, thorough artist that she is, is going to add to the general effect of the play by wearing costumes of a chic which will allure and enchant the most ascetic onlooker. In the first act she will wear tulle, trimmed with pearls, and aquamarine jewels. Doesn't that sound delicious? In the second act her costume will be shrimp pink taffeta with coral trimming. The third act will see her clad in pistachio green and violet, while in the last act she will wear chartreuse brocade with petunia trimming. Did any other Lady Teazle ever have such an exquisite wardrobe?

Persian Art on Exhibit.

There is the most attractive exhibit now going on at the Arts club that I've seen in many a day. Dr. Ali Kuli Khan, N. D. (whatever those mystic letters may mean), has swathed the columns in the long galleries with soft Persian draperies, and all about those pleasant rooms he has placed a collection of Persian fine arts, which includes illuminated manuscripts of famous masters of the fourteenth to seventeenth centuries; miniatures of the Persian and Indo-Persian schools; pen cases and mirror cases in lacquer; early book bindings in leather, wrought in gold and color and in exquisite lacquer; potteries, textiles, brocades, cloth of gold, velvets, and needlework; antique vases and rugs and objects in mosaic, ivory and metal.

A passing glance gives one the impression of having suddenly landed in the bazaars of Ispahan. One expects to see turbaned and shrouded figures passing by; to sniff the strong perfumes and still stronger—well, what is the opposite of perfume?—that haunt oriental highways and byways.

It is an intriguing art, that of the Persians, and one that suggests an ancient and strange civilization, one more subtle and sophisticated than ours, but not nearly so comfortable to the mortal of simple mind and tastes as our Anglo-Saxon one. So it was without regret that I found myself in the midst of this, our civilization, and standing again on the pavement of Michigan avenue in front of the Wrigley building with the late afternoon's fierce traffic whizzing by and the setting sun shining on The Tribune tower. My, but that's a good looking addition to Chicago's skyline!

Palmer House Canvases.

Speaking of our civic profile, William Welch, the artist who has a studio in the building devoted to artists at 11 East Pearson street, has there some most effective canvases which are to adorn the restaurant in the new Palmer house. The room is to be in the basement, but the diner there, if he or she have a little imagination, can easily fancy him or herself on the top of the building, looking forth over Chicago. The four walls of the restaurant are to be covered with a continuous mural decoration representing the landscape of the city as it would look from the roof of the Palmer house.

MRS. DAVID DANGLER.
[Koehne Photo.]

The wedding of Miss Margaret Frost, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Frost of Lake Forest, to David Dangler, also of Lake Forest, was an event of social importance on May 16. The service was read at Eastover, the Frost residence, before relatives and a few intimate friends of Miss Frost and Mr. Dangler. After Sept. 1 they are to reside at Airdrie house, now under construction.

The perspective which such a site would entail has been carefully preserved by Mr. Welch. One looks down into the canyons of Michigan avenue, State street, and other thoroughfares. To the east one sees the Art institute, and the other structures on that part of Michigan avenue, bathed in the warm glow of the setting sun. Down below motor busses and automobiles are hurrying along. The wide expanse of trackage to the east merges into the lake's pale blue. On another panel The Tribune tower, the Wrigley tower, the London Insurance, and other buildings loom up like soaring ramparts. On still another wall the city's western outlines are silhouetted against the flaming sunset, while to the south, State street and the adjacent highways radiate like so many filaments in a spider's web. Mottled black and shining fluted columns at every fifteen feet will separate these various aspects of the city's panorama, and the whole effect promises to be one of the most interesting in interior decoration yet tried out here.

Mr. Welch first attracted attention in this region by some excellent portrait work. A spirited likeness of Alfred Granger and one equally vivid of Jesse Moss, curator of the Newberry library, are the two examples of his talent which come to mind at the moment. He is, it is safe to say, one of the coming personalities among the younger artists.

It is to be hoped our blossoming geniuses do not continue to take themselves off to New York or other more sympathetic surroundings. Until Chicago can hold the talent that springs from her rich loam, she is like a hen whose eggs are always taken from her and put under other brooders. And such a hen is never a serene and happy bird. She is always working, with no results perceptible to her yearning senses.

Preparing for Ravinia.

On Thursday Mrs. Ralph Poole of Lake Forest entertained the officers and chairmen of the Ravinia club at luncheon, whereat were discussed the various lines of work which are in the scope of this enterprising organization. It helps to sell the books of tickets which are now on the market; it works hard to secure guarantors to help Louis Eckstein carry the heavy financial burden which is his in his remarkable musical achievements at Ravinia; it manages and makes possible the delightful and instructive children's Thursday afternoon concerts; in short, it steps in here, there, and everywhere to serve what is generally conceded to be one of the country's most extraordinary artistic enterprises. In fact, many authorities consider that Ravinia open air opera has no peer anywhere in the world of music today. Look at that splendid troupe which is planning to gather here in a few weeks. Even the New York Metropolitan does not provide better for its extremely sophisticated audiences.

By the way, did I, or did I not, tell you a few Sundays ago that Martinelli, the famous Metropolitan tenor, who is to be at Ravinia all summer, has taken the Victor Elting house in Winnetka? It appears he is married to an extremely beautiful woman and that they have children. The Martinellis will have a charming summer home on the edge of the Skokie; a large house set in a lovely garden. The Eltings usually go up to Wisconsin for their summers at a comfortable and commodious camp.

WEDDINGS

No wedding or engagement announcement will be published in The Tribune unless it bears the signature, address, and telephone number of a parent, either of the bride or the bridegroom. Announcements should reach the society editor not later than the Wednesday morning preceding the Sunday they are to be published.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Minerva Barbara Chmelik, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Chmelik of 4146 West Harrison street, to William M. Lanzer on May 16 at the Holy Ghost rectory. Mr. and Mrs. Lanzer are visiting in New York.

RIGHT AND WRONG OF MAKE-UP

Every actress knows the secret of coloring cheeks and lips so they keep a perfectly natural look. It makes the difference you'll see by covering half the picture above—then the other half.

Use a moist rouge. It has brilliance and "spread" impossible to dry color. Use the French formula Jarnac, and the shade is exactly right—for you—for anybody—and for both cheeks and lips. For Jarnac is true blood-red.

Jarnac is made of solidified oils—so it's really waterproof; and the pure oils are good for the skin. And how it lasts! Your druggist has it by this time! Only 50c in dainty, but generous box—on red counter card—look for—

Eleven Settlements to Be Represented in Spring Festival

By Kate Webber.

PLANS are being completed for the presentation at the Eighth Street theater on Saturday afternoon, June 6, of the cantata, "In a Flower Garden," by W. Rhys Herbert. Three hundred and fifty children, representing eleven settlements in Chicago, will take part in the affair, which is the first intersettlement spring festival to be staged in the city.

Any aid success of the entertainment may bring to the settlements participating will be due largely to the efforts of Mrs. Charles M. McKenna, who for several years has organized and brought forward an intersettlement music committee which promotes activities in the Chicago Federation of Settlements.

Plans for the festival have been perfected at recent meetings held at the residence of Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson Jr., and at the Arts club. Assisting Mrs. McKenna is a large committee, with Mrs. Norman J. Westerhold in charge of box sales and Mrs. Cyrus [illegible] directing ticket sales.

Jacques Gordon, first concert master of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, is directing the music, and the Junior intersettlement orchestra will play. Choruses from Association house, Henry Booth house, Chicago Commons, Eleanor Social center, Emerson settlement, Eli Bates settlement, Gads Hill center, Garibaldi institute, Howell Neighborhood house, Northwestern University settlement, and the Paulist settlement will participate.

Democratic Women to Give Card Party

ANNOUNCEMENT of a reception and card party to be given at the Hotel Sherman on Saturday afternoon, June 6, by the Illinois Woman's Democratic club calls attention to that organization, which is the official club, having the recognition of the Democratic party organization, for Democratic women of the state.

It is one of a series of state clubs organized throughout the country in accordance with the club plan of Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, vice chairman of the Democratic national committee and national committeewoman of the state of Missouri.

The original Illinois group—what is now known as the Cook county branch—was organized nearly three years ago in Chicago. Its first meeting was a luncheon held in August of 1922, at which Mrs. Blair was the guest of honor.

Among those active in its formation were Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCulloch, who was its first president; Mrs. Theodosia E. Bagshawe, Mrs. Anna L. Smith, Dr. Rowena Morse Mann, Dr. Margaret Schaffner, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Miss Kathryn O'Loughlin, Mrs. E. J. Fleming, Miss Delia Birmingham, Mrs. E. W. Bemis, Mrs. A. S. Chamberlin, Mrs. Frank Fuller, and Mrs. Jean P. Washburn.

There are now branches of the club in several counties of the state. These branches from time to time entertain distinguished members of the party visiting in the state.

Officers of the Cook county branch are as follows: Mrs. Anna L. Smith, president; Mrs. Daniel V. Gallery, vice president; Mrs. Jean P. Washburn, second vice president; Mrs. C. H. White, recording secretary; Mrs. Julia V. Johnson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Charles M. Conkey, treasurer.

Mrs. Frank L. Dean is general chairman of the committee in charge of the card party. Distribution of tickets is in the hands of three chairmen, representing the three sides of the city. Mrs. John J. Rooney is south side chairman; Mrs. James T. Igoe, west side chairman, and Mrs. John O'Neill is north side chairman.

Mrs. J. C. Williams has concluded two terms as president of the Austin North End Woman's club, having been succeeded by Mrs. E. E. Kretschmer. Other new officers of the club are Mrs. J. C. Slack and Mrs. F. A. Forrey, vice presidents; recording secretary, Mrs. J. B. Jordan; corresponding secretary, Mrs. T. F. Locke; treasurer, Mrs. C. A. Scranton.

Mrs. Frank L. Dean is chairman of the committee on arrangements for a card party to be given on Saturday afternoon, June 6, at the Hotel Sherman by the Illinois Woman's Democratic club.

The Woman's Advertising club, composed of 140 women holding executive positions in advertising, has elected Mrs. Anita Simpson president for the ensuing year. Mrs. Simpson was one of two women speakers at the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, held this month at Houston, Tex.

The first intersettlement spring festival, to be participated in by children from eleven settlement houses in the city, will be given on the afternoon of June 6 at the Eighth Street theater. Mrs. Charles M. McKenna is general chairman of arrangements.

CLUB ETHICS

By Maude Swalm Evans.

"WHAT did you do at the board meeting yesterday?" the member who had been absent asked of the secretary.

"We elected Mrs. Fraser to fill the vacancy on the board, for one thing."

"I was hoping Mrs. Cransby would get that place."

"So was I, but Mrs. Stivers fought her election tooth and nail. She had her followers all lined up, and the other board members thought it would be precipitating trouble to elect Mrs. Cransby, so they compromised on Mrs. Fraser."

"What in the world has Mrs. Stivers against Mrs. Cransby, anyway? They're both fine, capable women, apparently, except for this feud, which seems to be mostly on Mrs. Stivers' side. Why, I've heard her declare she wouldn't sit on a committee or board of which Mrs. Cransby was a member, and she's always trying to influence her friends. Recently she told one she'd have to choose between them—that a friend of Mrs. Cransby's couldn't be a friend of hers."

"I'm afraid she's allowed her dislike to become an obsession," replied the secretary. "I've been told that the whole trouble started over some trifling thing that happened in the club several years ago. Mrs. Stivers wouldn't listen to an explanation of the affair, and she's been questioning everything that Mrs. Cransby has said or done every since. You know how easy it is to imagine an underhanded motive in the acts and words of any one you don't like."

"It all sounds foolish to me. Is there anything that can be done about it?"

"Not a thing, as far as I can see. We can just hope that one or the other of the women will inherit an estate in England or Brazil or Australia, and go there to live."

From THE OUTLINE OF SCIENCE

EDITED BY Professor J. ARTHUR THOMSON

THE ROMANCE OF CHEMISTRY.

When we first visit a great museum we are impressed by the multitude of different kinds of things; these thousands of startlingly different species of animals—each itself and no other—these hundreds of different kinds of wood, shelf after shelf of minerals, an Aladdin's cave of precious stones, besides all manner of things artificially made, such as alloys and fabrics, drugs and preserved foods. Some of the objects we see may fade into one another, but what almost embarrasses us is the number of things that are quite distinctive. We get the same impression of diversity when we take a walk in the country or when we see a dredge or a trawl brought up on deck.

Now a kindly curator in the museum might take us to the bird cases, for instance, and show that, after all, the diversity was in great part due to different shufflings of a not very large pack of cards. There are thousands of tunes, but there are not many notes. He might take us to the case of minerals, where, by ourselves, we got the impression of overwhelming and baffling variety, and show us that a comparatively small number of really different things may be shuffled into a multitude of diversities. A small cast of players may form a great variety of different tableaux.

There might be in the museum a case showing a sheet of parchment paper, a slab cut out of a tree, a wooden pot full of glue, a cork for the same, a piece of India rubber for erasures, a celluloid beaker full of water, a "lead" pencil, a vulcanite penholder, a pad of blotting paper, a lump of sugar, a little starch, and a hundred other things—"as different as different could be"—including even a diamond; and yet the label of the case might correctly state that all this variety included only three elements—carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen.

Perhaps this is one of the big revelations of chemistry for ordinary people, that in spite of the immense variety of things in the world there is only a relatively small number of things that are really different—namely: the eighty or so chemical elements. We do not know how many words there are in the English language, but there are only about twenty-six generally recognized letters. It is the same in chemistry. Many different hands, but not such a large number of cards!

Furthermore, just as there are some letters, like q and z, which are not in frequent use, in the same way it must be noted that many of the fourscore or so chemical elements are rare, and do not occur in more than a small percentage of the specimens in the museum. Many of the "rare earths," though important for man's purposes, do not play a large part either in the architecture or in the bustle of the world. They lurk quietly in the remote corners—take tantalum, for instance. It has been calculated that there are, on a moderate estimate, a quarter of a million of different kinds of things in this world of ours. But scientific chemistry has shown that this multitude is due to varied groupings of about eighty "really different kinds of stuff"—namely: the chemical elements.

It is not easy to put the case rightly, for each fresh pattern may be something very definitely new and individual, just as a painter makes many pictures of the same few colors. Every one knows the variety of patterns that result when the pieces of colored glass in a kaleidoscope are shaken into new combinations, but this is a static diversity. It suggests, however, what may result from the shuffling of a few elements, especially when some of these are what is sometimes called "attractive." In general terms, the conclusion to which common experience and exact science lead us is this: that, given a small number of sociable elements there may be many a ménage. From a few elements, even from fewer than we can count on the fingers of our two hands, there may be a new world. And the view is widely held among chemists that there has arisen from one elemental stuff the whole array of known elements.

MME. SKODOWSKI CURIE.—Along with her husband, M. Pierre Curie, professor in Paris, Mme. Curie discovered radium. From pitchblende they extracted radium chloride. Radium is present in pitchblende in minute quantity, not more than one part in five or ten million of the mineral. Mme. Curie went on to establish the atomic weight of radium (226) and to make further discoveries of lasting importance.

Mechanism of the Atom.

In a previous chapter the problems which the physicist and the chemist of today are so eagerly investigating were fully discussed. We saw there how it has come about that all the observed phenomena of chemistry and physics are regarded as indications of the fundamental unity of matter. All matter, in short, is supposed to be, in its final analysis, essentially the same in constitution. The atoms of all matter consist of particles of positive and negative electricity; the simplest atom, that of hydrogen, is a unit of negative electricity, called an electron, revolving round a nucleus of positive electricity, called a proton. Electrons obtained from different atoms are found to be the same; in an atom of hydrogen there is one electron, in an atom of helium two, in an atom of lithium three. The addition of further electrons to the system gives rise to the atoms of all other elements.

All matter is thus supposed to be electrical in its nature. The atom, since its disintegration is seen to take place, is no longer the atom indivisible or incapable of being broken up into something simpler. It is not now believed that each of the eighty or so elements known to us has its own kind of atom, each stamped with its own properties. The properties and qualities of the different elements, it is believed, depend on the number and arrangement of the particles of negative electricity (electrons) and of positive particles (protons) contained in the atoms of the various elements. The view is that all the elements, though they have different chemical qualities, are built up out of the same material; thus our ideas regarding the constitution of matter and the framework of the universe have been completely changed. "The superlatively grand question" is, what is the inner mechanism of the atom?

It is the business of the chemist to attempt to fathom the mysteries of the properties of the various chemical elements, to evolve order and system out of them. It is to the chemist that we owe our knowledge that the atoms of different substances can be arranged in a definite order, and also that they show an increasing complexity of structure. Heavier atoms appear to behave as though they were evolved from the lighter.

Forms of Matter.

"It is well known," writes Sir Ernest Rutherford, "that under suitable conditions the same type of matter can exist in three distinct forms—solid, liquid, and gas. In passing from one state to another, it is a matter of common knowledge that there are remarkable changes in appearance and physical qualities of an element. These changes are believed to be connected with the average distance which separates one atom or molecule from the other, and in the rapidity of motion. In the gas or vapor form, the molecules are on an average so far apart that their mutual attractions are relatively unimportant. The lowering of the temperature, the distance and rapidity of motion of the molecules, diminish, until under certain conditions the attraction of the molecules for one another predominates, resulting in a much closer packing and the appearance of the liquid form.

"The molecules, however, still retain a certain freedom of motion, but this is diminished with lowering of the temperature, until at a certain stage the molecules form a tighter grouping, corresponding to the solid state, where the freedom of motion of the individual molecules is much restricted. In order to account for the resistance of solids to compression or extension, it has been supposed that the force between molecules is attractive at large distances, but repulsive at small distances. While we are able to offer a general explanation of the passage of an element from one state to another, a complete explanation of such phenomena will only be possible when we know the detailed structure of the atoms and the nature and magnitude of the forces between them."

It is well known to everybody that the atom of one chemical element may combine with one or more atoms of another element. When the chemist speaks of the valency of an element, he means the number of other atoms with which one atom of this element can directly combine. For example, one atom of hydrogen combines with one atom of chlorine, and the result is hydrochloric acid; or one atom of oxygen will combine with two atoms of hydrogen and the result is water; one atom of nitrogen combines with three of hydrogen and we get ammonia.

Each of these combinations represents a chemical process, that is to say, a chemical change which produces a substance which is totally distinct, not a substance which merely partakes of the characters of the two component elements.

Thus are the various substances built up; the elements are mostly found in mutual combinations, and the combinations are sometimes, of course, very complex. While a particle, or molecule, of water consists of two atoms of hydrogen and one of oxygen the molecule of the proteid called "albumen" is built up by 72 atoms of carbon, 112 atoms of hydrogen, 18 atoms of nitrogen, all brought into association with one atom of sulphur. In all protoplasm of living matter there is a mixture of proteins, carbohydrates, and fats, with intricate chemical and physical inter-relations. It is highly improbable that there is any one substance which deserves to be called the living matter or protoplasm. What we actually know is a complex and heterogeneous system in which various chemical reactions take place simultaneously. There is always involved, as life goes on, a breaking down and a building up of proteins. But the riddle is still unread.

Some biologists hold the view that there is an "ultimate molecule of life," hidden in the protoplasm, which holds the secret of the endless building up and breaking down. Sir Ray Lankester gives this "supreme life stuff" the name "plastogen," and he says in regard to its workings that "whilst they can be grouped with the chemical and physical qualities of other bodies, they so far transcend them in complexity and in immensity of result—the whole creation of plant and animal life—that their appearance constitutes, in effect, a new departure, a sudden, and to us, unaccountable acquirement. But then we must remember that it is also an unaccountable thing to us that water suddenly becomes ice at a low temperature and suddenly becomes vapor at a high temperature, even if we are able to imagine the mechanism which necessitates these changes. We cannot 'explain' the nature of things. Even though we can classify them and arrange them in order, and more or less satisfactorily guess what their inner mechanism is, we cannot, in our present state of knowledge, trace them in detail to a first beginning."

Distribution of Elements.

Some of the elements in their natural conditions are gaseous, like oxygen, hydrogen, nitrogen, chlorine, etc.; mercury and bromine are liquids; while a great number, chiefly metals, are solids, like gold, iron, zinc, etc.

Prof. Meldola says with respect to the distribution of the elements: "It is of interest to note that more than three-fourths of the accessible crust of this globe upon which we live is made up of two nonmetals, oxygen and silicon, about one-half being oxygen. Nothing affords more striking evidence of the marvel of chemical change than the contemplation of this geo-chemical fact, that the superficial 'solidity' of the earth is due to the predominance of those mineral constituents into the composition of which gaseous oxygen and the nonmetal silicon enter to a

Teachers Begin Intensive Training for Bible Schools

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

INTENSIVE training in preparation for the Chicago daily vacation Bible schools will begin tomorrow evening at the headquarters of the Religious Education association, 308 North Michigan avenue. The schools themselves will begin on June 29 and will continue to July 31. The first training courses will be given evenings from tomorrow evening to and including Friday evening.

Leaders of the classes which are intended for teachers will be the Rev. W. R. Jewell, Miss Bertha C. Wheelock, Mrs. H. Louis Auten, and Prof. Norman E. Richardson. The daily vacation Bible schools are a recognized department of the Chicago Church federation. They are held in all varieties of neighborhoods and suburbs, among foreign speaking populations, in slum districts and in the large family churches in residential districts. Last year 216 schools were held in Chicago. The movement is nationwide. Since 1907 the Chicago enrollment has been 219,842.

The summer school solves the problem of caring for the children who have no definite occupation. They are regarded by the police as aids to order and discipline, and are favored by the patriotic organizations, because in all of them honor to the flag is taught. Manual work, music, pageantry, outings in the parks, as well as periods of study constitute the program. The vacation schools are a part of the council of religious education. The Rev. Perry J. Rice is chairman and Emerson O. Bradshaw is secretary. Offices are in the Chicago temple.

Your boy can be a leader!

Sure-footedness will give him speed and confidence—the qualities that help him to win

IN GAMES, in camp, on hikes—everywhere he goes this summer, your boy is only "as good as his feet." Think carefully before buying his shoes. They will have a lot to do with the comfort, the enjoyment, the success of his whole vacation.

Get him the most popular, most serviceable, most comfortable shoe for boys—Grip Sures with the famous suction cup soles.

There's a springiness and liveliness in these soles that will help to make your boy as quick and agile as a cat. The suction cup soles take a sure hold the instant his feet touch the ground. He can forget the danger of slips or skids. On hikes or fishing trips he can clamber over slippery rocks without a fear.

Grip Sures support the feet as Nature intended them to be supported. They let the feet breathe better than stiff leather shoes. Pliable—they give the foot muscles perfect freedom. Sturdy and long-wearing, Grip Sures are quality shoes which deliver more than your money's worth.

Free with every pair—Boys' Library of Sports

AS A special vacation service to boys, we have issued a knapsack or pocket size edition of the Library of Sports. Four books—The Strategy of Baseball, Training That Wins, The Manual of Camping, Ten Tricks in Basket Ball. What to do and what to take on camping trips; trick plays and inside secrets of winning ball players; how to become a winner in running, jumping, pole vaulting, hurdling, etc. All these things, and many more, are told interestingly and completely by experts.

Thousands of boys have read the Library of Sports and said it's great! Here is your chance to get a set free with the purchase of a pair of Grip Sures.

Go to the shoe store or sporting goods store where you see the Grip Sure window display. Buy a pair of Grip Sures and tell the dealer you want the Library of Sports that is being offered free.

Your boy will like Grip Sures better than any shoes he ever wore. He will enjoy and appreciate the Library of Sports. And you will be more than satisfied with the long wear and service your money buys.

Make sure you get genuine Grip Sures by looking for the Grip Sure name on the soles and the Top Notch Cross on the soles and ankle patches. Beacon Falls Rubber Shoe Co., Beacon Falls, Conn.

ART AND ARTISTS

What Price Genius in the Guise That Is Mestrovic's?

By Eleanor Jewett.

ANOTHER two weeks will see the close of the most brilliant and the most revolting exhibitions that the Art institute galleries have held this year. It is impossible to become enthused over the Mestrovic sculpture. Familiarity with it breeds disgust. Contempt cannot be felt for a genius as masterful and vigorous as this, but disgust—that is different. The most magnificent seas, stormy, foam crested, green shot with purple in the valleys between the vast billows, such seas, gigantic as they are in their wild beauty and marvelous ferocity, can bear nausea, puny bond slave, in their train.

Just so can the sculpture by Mestrovic, magnificent in its revolt and rebellion, bear in the minds of laymen a mental distress. It sickens you—those long, rasping, crooked hands of the crucified Savior. It sickens you—those feeble, imbecile, drawn faces of the angels. It sickens you—the wasted, attenuated, Egyptian heads of Virgin and Child.

Before all others, however, it is the worn, gaunt, hollow frame of Jesus Christ upon the cross that becomes under repeated seeing a sacrilege. Why such sculpture should be permitted to be exhibited in a public gallery to which ignorant and cultured, children and adults alike, flock, passes the understanding. It is a vicious influence. The mastery of technique and independence of thought, the qualities that make it great enough to command an almost universal chant of praise, those should not be enough to blind one to its malignity.

The number of portraits of persons are different. The majority of them are fine work. Mestrovic is a master, and that is good. He is a master for good and evil, however, and that is bad. What effect do you think the sight of his "Crucifixion" has on a child mind? And what good does the sight of that same piece of sculpture do the adult mind?

Not long ago a bitter controversy was stirred up between the Art institute and the municipal authorities over the display of a practically nude figure of a man, "The Sower," by Albin Polasek, in front of the museum. The municipal authorities won and the statue was removed. There are so much more pernicious elements exhibited in the Mestrovic sculpture that it is almost to be wondered at that it has not been ordered closed. Fumes from a sewer are unpleasant smelling. Sculptured indignities are no better seeing!

As far as color is concerned, the water color exhibit at the Art institute is the most brilliant show of this year. It is always difficult when such a number of paintings are hung together to realize them to their fullest individual value. The wise course is to accept them all and then gradually winnow from the general field the dozen or two dozen or more or less that make the strongest personal appeal.

A number of visits are necessary for this. And even then, you find on a successive trip that you had missed the choicest gem in your previous visits. A water color exhibit is full of pleasant surprises. A different hour of the day with its consequent different light, a thickening or lessening of the crowd with whom you are enjoying the pictures, any one of a score of incidents that may vary, means just that much more to be discovered to give you pleasure.

"Pewter Pitcher," by Frank W. Benson, still remains one of the most beautiful still life combinations in the galleries. It grows on one. Study enhances its charm.

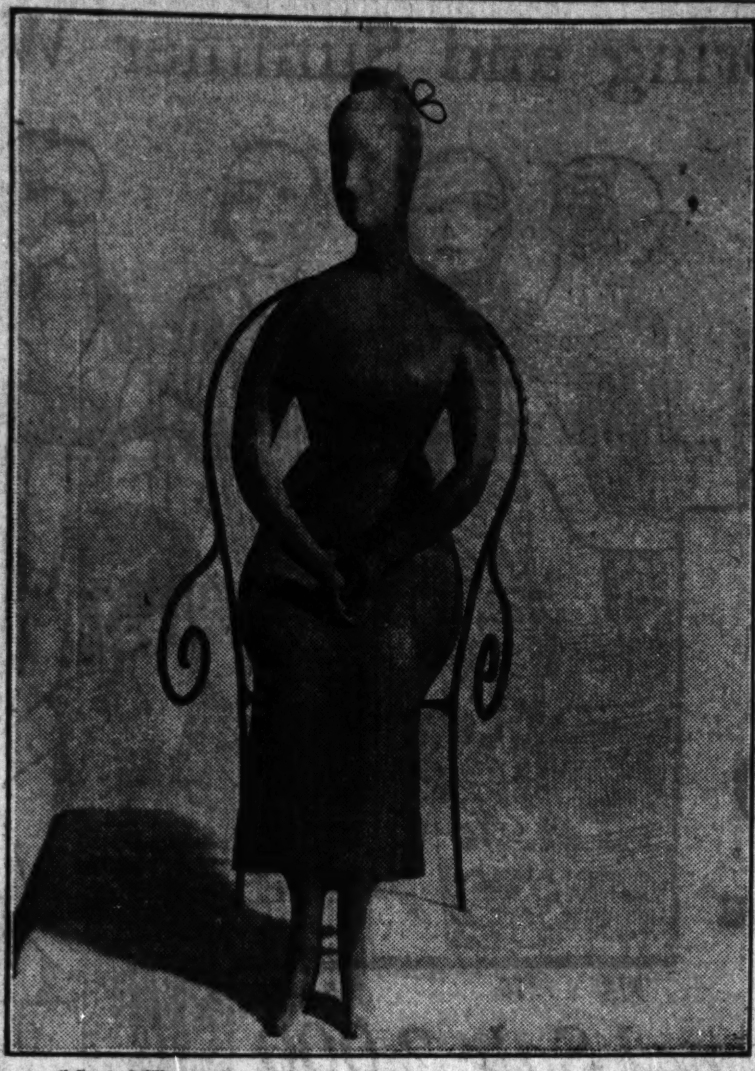
The pictures by George Elmer Browne grow upon one, too, in repeated visits. Possibly the loveliest of his group of eight paintings is "Corner of Old Le Puy," the most delightful, intimate, serene little glimpse of a faded French village we have seen in a long time.

An amusing character sketch is seen in "Chamber Music," by James Chapin. It is a whimsical and attractive absurdity with for its chief characters the earnest members of a little orchestra.

Sigurd Skou has much improved his talent. His painting is more personal, more sincere, more thoughtful, and more mature. His color is, as always, delightful. One of the several charming efforts by him is a picturesque still life with a commonplace name—"The Red Cabbage."

Restful, tranquil, beautiful is the "Church Interior," by Egron Lundgren, an artist now deceased.

"Torre San Jeimo," by Henry S. Kelley, and "First Cool Evening," by Ray Kinsman-Waters, are two delightful canvases.



"Seated Woman," by Elie Nadelman, carved in wood, is in his exhibit of sculpture current in the Arts club gallery at the Art institute. Such work makes one smile. The smile is not far from a sigh, however, at the thought of such travesties of sculpture being termed sculpture and their author recognized as a member of the group that holds Rodin, Michael Angelo, or with us today, Lorado Taft and Paul Manship within its fraternal bonds. The exhibit closes on June 4.

There are more, many more. Among them are "Chrysanthemum," by Mabel Key; "On the Lake," by Ruston Vicaji; "The Landing," by Roy Brown; "The Hawk," by John Young-Hunter; "In the Big Chair," by Elsa Backlund-Galsing; "Gateway, Soissons," by George Harding; "Gray Iris," by C. R. Mackintosh, and "Pearl Andelsen," by Helen West Heller.

This mention of Helen West Heller reminds me that she had a stirring effect of running horses, called "Hooves," in the recent Arts club show. Mrs. Heller has an abrupt, dramatic way of presenting her conceptions which is good theater and extremely effective.

A divison of an exhibit which is often neglected because each detail of it is so small, is the divison devoted to miniatures. In the Water Color exhibition there are several fascinating miniatures. Among these are "The Black Hat," by Laura Coombs Hills; "Two Little Bears," by Rosa Hooper; "A Family Party," by Elizabeth A. McGillivray Knowles; "Little Richard," by Helen Winslow Durkee, and "My Little Girl," by Carrie Samuel Jones.

Among the artists of note, Chicago artists, who have been connected with the Layton school since its inception in 1920, are Gerrit Sinclair, Anthony Angarola, John David Brein, and Irving Manoir. The school is directed by Miss Charlotte Partridge, who will teach painting in the summer session.

The Chicago Academy of Fine Arts announces its Twenty-second Annual Students' exhibition of art for four days, the last two days of May and the first two of June.

There opened last Monday at the Arts club an exhibition of a collection of Persian fine arts belonging to Dr. Ali Kuli Khan, N. D. It will continue until June 15. There are magnificent rugs to be found in the exhibit, and beautiful tapestries. Among the delightful miniatures is a charming panel of little birds. The exhibit is well worth a visit, if only to afford one material with which to compare the recurring less extensive exhibits of Persian treasures at the Art institute.

John David Brein, the Chicago sculptor, has recently completed a portrait bust of Mary Landon Baker. It is rumored that Mestrovic has been engaged on a bust of Miss Baker during his stay here. He left early last week for Washington.

Anna Lynch, a Chicago artist who has long been famous for her exquisite miniatures, shows in this exhibition a beautiful and spiritual cathedral interior in her painting, "Saint Etienne Du Mont, Paris."

The Layton School of Art of Milwaukee is announcing its regular summer session from June 29 to Aug. 7. It will have classes in outdoor painting, teacher training, composition, figure study, still life, design, lettering and posters. The teacher training class will have Miss Marie Claussenius for instructor. She has been for a number of years art director of the Francis W. Parker school in Chicago. William B. Owen Jr., will instruct in outdoor painting, composition, and poster.

An exhibition of work done in the studio of the Palette and Chisel club is planned for the last half of May. The opening day is set for May 25.

"The Hidden Village" and "The Way to Millbrook," by Harry L. Engle, both pictures that were painted by this Chicago artist on the Fox river near Yorkville, have been purchased by A. K. Findley of Shreveport, La.

The first outing for the members of the Palette and Chisel club to their summer stamping grounds at Fox lake is scheduled for Memorial day.

preponderating extent. The whole crust of the earth with which geology deals is composed to the extent of more than 99 per cent of only about twenty out of the eighty-two elements. This will give an idea of the rarity of some of the materials which the chemist has had to deal with."

There is an obvious but important difference between a mixture like sand plus sugar, like iron dust plus chalk, and a compound like sugar or like chalk. A mixture is never homogeneous; it can be divided into different ingredients. A compound is always homogeneous; its particles, however fine, are all the same—all the same until we begin to break up the compound into its components. With water we can dissolve away the sugar from the sand; with a magnet we can pick away the iron particles from the chalk; but it is usually necessary to take more thoroughgoing measures to split up a compound.

It must not be supposed, however, that the distinction between a mixture and a compound is always easy. Air looks homogeneous, but it is a mixture of a great crowd of oxygen particles, a still greater crowd of nitrogen particles, and a small crowd of carbon dioxide and water vapor particles. Nothing seems more homogeneous than water, but pure water is never found in nature. There are always impurities in it, and one needs only to bring a glass of cold water into a warmish room to see how multitudinous bubbles of gas form on the inner walls of the vessel. These suggest, at any rate, that there is a good deal of gas mixed up with the water. If this were not the case, no animals could breathe under water, for while water is a compound (H_2O) of hydrogen and oxygen, it is not possible for animals to separate the two components in the way plants are able to do with the carbon dioxide (CO_2) mixed in the air or the water. Perfectly pure substances, though often advertised, are very difficult to obtain; they are indeed almost ideal, which led a great investigator to say that "chemistry is the science of substances which do not exist." Traces of impurity in a substance are often of great practical importance; they sometimes influence the properties of the substance in a remarkable way. We quote a sentence from Dr. Mellor's admirable text book, "Modern Inorganic Chemistry" (1920):

"H. Vivian says that one one-thousandth part of antimony will convert the best selected copper into the worst conceivable; Lord Kelvin says that the presence of one one-thousandth part of bismuth in copper would reduce its electrical conductivity so as to be fatal to the success of the submarine cable; and W. R. Roberts Austin says that one five-hundredth part of bismuth in gold would render gold useless, from the point of view of coinage, because the metal would crumble under pressure in the die."

EXECUTIVES

Now earning $10,000 a year or more.

The area lying immediately north of Niles Center, west of the world famous North Shore towns, Ev- anston, Wilmette, Winnetka, Glen- coe and Highland Park, will, with- in the very near future be served by the high speed electric line of the North Shore and Milwaukee Railroad, the construction of which is now under way.

It will require a period of years to fully develop and market stra- tegically located property close and adjacent to this high speed line and for that purpose we require the assistance of two or three ex- ecutives capable of organizing and managing sales departments for which we will furnish the nucleus.

This is an unusual opportunity to make a profitable and perma- nent connection with a company marketing none but that class of property which is, or is to be, so served by high speed transporta- tion and so fairly priced as to appeal to the most discriminating investor.

Address David B. Thomas, General Manager, George F. Nixon & Company, 4554 Broadway. Com- munications confidential.

MAN.

We have an opening for a man who knows how to handle male and female help; one who has had experience in cost and efficiency work and has been successful as superintendent and manager over a large number of employes. The position now open requires that a man must be night superintendent about 4 months of the year. This is a candy factory, but experience in the business is not abso- lutely essential. We are a live, growing con- cern, showing 25% increase yearly, and want a man who is a fast thinker and willing worker. To such a man we can offer a permanent position at a very good salary and give the training necessary to make him val- uable to us and himself. We want a man with a clean record. ROBERT VOLK OFFERS AT $6,950

22 NEW 5 ROOM BRICK BUNGALOWS.

All on paved street, with all street improvements in. These buildings are perfect in construction, some with large brick porches across the entire front and others with smaller porches and large sun parlors. All basements are double in construction, with one section partitioned off for vegetables or preserves. No better houses than these can be built. They are now ready for inspection. Take Grand-av. car to Harlem-av. and see these buildings at cor. Neva-av. and Diversey-av. or cor. Montclare-av. and Wrightwood-av.

All are 2 or 3 blocks north of the Grand-av. car line and one and two blocks east of Harlem-av.

I have never before been able to offer such perfect 5 room brick bungalows at the low price of $6,950. Any one can be bought on a small cash payment and balance monthly less than rent.

If you wish, you may call at my office at corner of Neva-av. and Medill-av., which is one block east and one block south of the end of the Grand-av. car line, where an automobile will show you 150 buildings which I have lately built and sold in this locality.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

I HAVE MADE A FORTUNE. NOW READY TO TURN THE OPPORTUNITY OVER TO YOU. POSSIBILITIES GREATER THAN EVER.

Here is a business opportunity of which such is rarely ever offered for sale, and one which will return a fortune in few short years. It is one of the best established businesses in the State of Florida, with a wonderful organization, having been very prosperous for many years.

A very neat fortune has already been made out of this business, therefore owner wishes to retire. Being a large business, it will require a large cash outlay; however, results will be immediate, as it is a going, money making business, with little competition.

This should appeal to some man or woman of means, who has son or relative they would like to give a chance to amass a fortune in a few years. Seldom is the opportunity ever offered whereby a going, money making, sound, substantial, legitimate, necessary business of any magnitude can be purchased.

The eyes of the whole United States are upon Florida, and there never has been such an era of prosperity covering an entire State, and we haven't scratched the surface of the state. Florida being one of the newer and last to be developed, means that unlimited opportunities are to be found here that do not exist anywhere else in the entire country.

Information will be furnished parties who will give satisfactory evidence that they have necessary financial backing to purchase.

Owing to the great interest in the real estate courses offered by the Chicago Real Estate board in connection with the Y. M. C. A. School of Commerce, three summer courses have been arranged by the board to cover a period of eight weeks, with classes on Tuesday and Thursday evenings.

The courses will be as follows: Real estate selling, instructor, John A. Kappelman; real estate law, instructor, Harold L. Reeve; real estate conveyancing, instructor, Clarence Bassler.

The directors of the Chicago Real Estate board, who recently changed the hour of the monthly board meeting from evening to afternoon so it wouldn't conflict with mid-week churchgoing of realtors, have gone back to an evening schedule. It was found that the members who objected had not availed themselves of the opportunity of going to church on the nights the realty meetings were changed. On June 3 the regular monthly meeting will be held at the board rooms at 5 p. m. A free buffet supper will precede the business session.

KEWANEE
The Boiler that never smokes

Some business men are careful of their overhead, and they watch their other expenses like hawks. But they still continue to use boilers that smoke, and thereby waste 25 per cent of the fuel they buy. How come?

If they can't realize that smoke is nothing but unconsumed fuel, then they had better let us tell them about it in the interests of good business management. The Kewanee All-Steel Smokeless Firebox Boiler doesn't smoke at all. It saves you the 25 per cent you're wasting now.

If your fuel costs you $5,000 a year, and you are using one of the inefficient boilers, just deduct one-quarter of the cost for waste, for that's exactly what it amounts to. You get only $3,750.00 worth of work out of $5,000 worth of coal.

The Kewanee Smokeless Boiler will burn any kind or grade of fuel without smoke. It consumes every particle of the fuel—every bit of the gases. The down-draught device which is responsible for the saving is part of the boiler. It is built in at the factory. There is no extra charge for it. And it turns loss into profit.

In your city, there are many buildings which use the Kewanee Smokeless Boiler. Why don't you business men go and look at them, and see what you can do for yourselves in your own buildings? Our representatives will take you. It will prove to be an educational visit.

Or write to The Old Man Behind the Boiler and ask him questions from 1 to 10 inclusive

REAL ESTATE NEWS

MRS. McCORMICK STARTS HER PET SHORE SUBURB

De Luxe Community to Be World's Finest.

BY AL CHASE.

At last work has started on Chicago's de luxe suburb—the 1,550 acres on the lake shore just over the Wisconsin line—the pet project of Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick which she is personally supervising as it is being developed by Krenn & Dato for the Rockefeller McCormick trust. If present plans are carried out, the as yet unnamed suburb will be one of the finest communities of its kind in the world.

The site was purchased on May 1, 1924, for $1,500,000. It was recently appraised at $2,750,000. Several millions more are to be expended to make it in many ways Chicago's most attractive suburb.

Plan Lake Shore Park.

For instance, it will be the only north shore town with every foot of its lake shore dedicated to the perpetual use of the inhabitants. Mrs. McCormick insisted that no riparian rights be sold with lots near the lake. Instead, a park of approximately 150 acres will extend along the three and a half miles of lake front. This means the town eventually will have several municipal bathing beaches. Several sites for prospective hotels have been set aside. Krenn & Dato expect to do considerable residential building, but no hotel construction.

Additional recreational space will be supplied residents in the shape of an eighteen hole golf course in the western part of town. There'll also be a twenty-five acre school tract with much of the space devoted to sports.

Will Supervise Architecture.

Edwin Krenn of Krenn & Dato, an architect as well as real estate dealer, will probably design the group of business buildings to occupy part of the forty acres zoned for commercial purposes. These, it is understood, will rival the Lake Forest business center in attractiveness. They'll probably be of half timbered old English style of architecture.

The Glencoe method of municipal supervision of both business and residential architecture will be in effect in the new McCormick suburb. This means that if a man with more millions than good taste decides to erect a $500,000 house with a flat roof and front elevation of tapestry brick and the side walls of Milwaukee brick, he'll be told gently but firmly that while it might make a big hit in the Wilson avenue district, it won't do at all in the new town. If he'll agree to build a house harmonizing architecturally with suburban standards, he'll get his building permit.

Rush Work on Improvements.

Work is being rushed on the installation of water mains, sewers, gas, paving, etc. Trees and shrubbery are being placed along all the winding roads. According to Edward Dato, Krenn & Dato will start selling lots in the new town the early part of July.

The Chicago & Northwestern R. R. runs through the 1,550 acre tract and the west boundary of the golf course touches the main line of the North Shore interurban. A right of way owned by the Kenosha and Milwaukee railroad also extends through the town.

Just North of "Chiwaukee."

Just south of and adjacent to Mrs. McCormick's new town lies Chiwaukee, also on the lake shore, put on the market some time ago by J. H. Penny & Son of Chicago, and said to be entirely sold out.

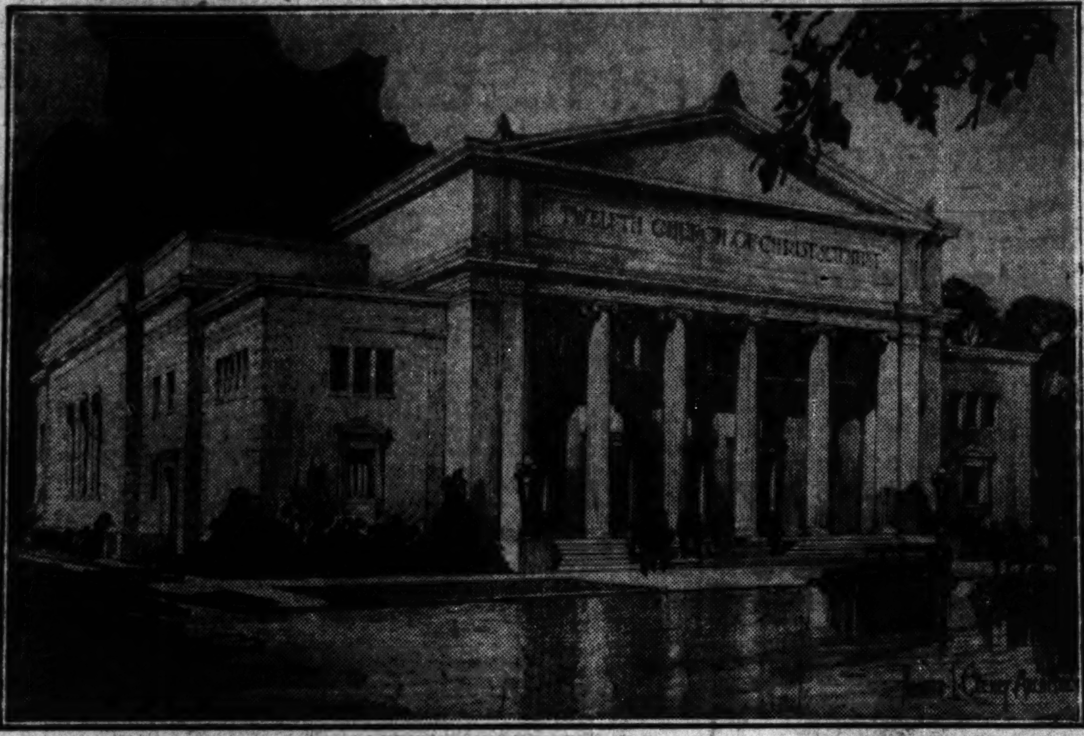
Although in Wisconsin and only a short distance south of Kenosha, the new Rockefeller McCormick town is expected to be as much of a Chicago suburb as it will be of the Wisconsin cities of Kenosha and Milwaukee.

TO BUILD GLENCOE RESIDENCE.

Joel Spitz[of Chicago, has bought from Wilbur Hattery Jr., the residence at 500 Longwood avenue, Glencoe, lot 324 by 303, for a reported $45,000 and will wreck the house and erect a much larger residence. Gilbert D. Johnson & Brother and McGuire & Orr were brokers.

[For other real estate news see preceding page.]

Twelfth Church of Christ, Scientist

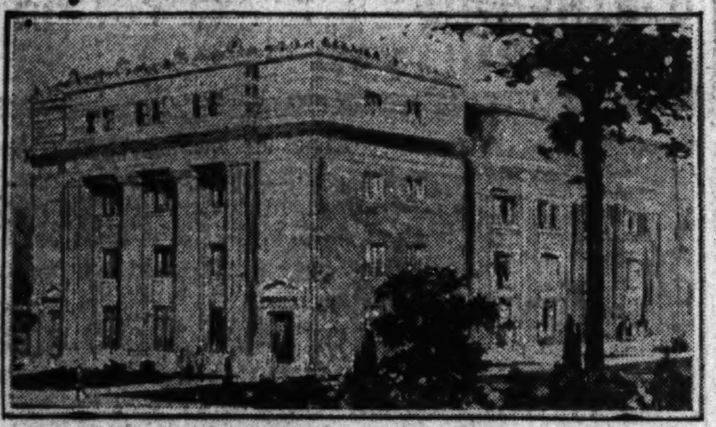


Architect Howard L. Cheney designed the above edifice for Twelfth Church of Christ, Scientist, to be erected at 623-35 Grace street, just west of Sheridan road, on the south side of the street. Work is now under way and completion date is set for May, 1926. The building will cost $332,000, including seating, organ, and furnishings, and $8,000 will be expended to finish off the basement portion for Sunday school and other purposes.

Mr. Cheney's design is classic, with the Greek Ionic order used for the monumental front loggia, which forms the principal feature of the Grace street façade. It will be of Bedford stone and fireproof. The main auditorium will have 1,300 seats. Provision has been made for directors' room, readers' room, treasurer's office, committee and ushers' rooms, parents' and children's waiting rooms. The interior will be American walnut, with ivory trim.

Twelfth church was organized Aug. 10, 1913, and the building site, with 137 feet frontage, was purchased in March, 1916. An architectural feature of the interior will be the domed ceiling. The above rendering of Mr. Cheney's design was by Charles Morgan.

Wilmette Masonic Temple Prize Winner



Arthur Howell Knox is announced as the winner in the architectural competition for a new Masonic temple for Wilmette, in which four Chicago firms entered. Above is Mr. Knox's winning design for a temple to be erected at 1010 Central avenue in the north shore suburb at a cost of $150,000. All the necessary funds are now in hand. Work will start July 1 and it'll be ready for Wilmette Masons some time during the Christmas holidays, it is hoped. The building will house Wilmette lodge No. 931, A. F. & A. M.; Wilmette chapter No. 253, and the Eastern Star. A commandery is to be organized.

The first floor will have an 800 seat public auditorium, drillroom, and banquet room, with a balcony and kitchens. There'll be a separate entrance from the lodge halls. The floor above the auditorium will contain the main lodge hall, 42x72, two stories in height, with a small lodge hall on what would be the fourth floor. The Masons will have several club features, such as a billiard room, cardrooms, a library and reading room, etc.

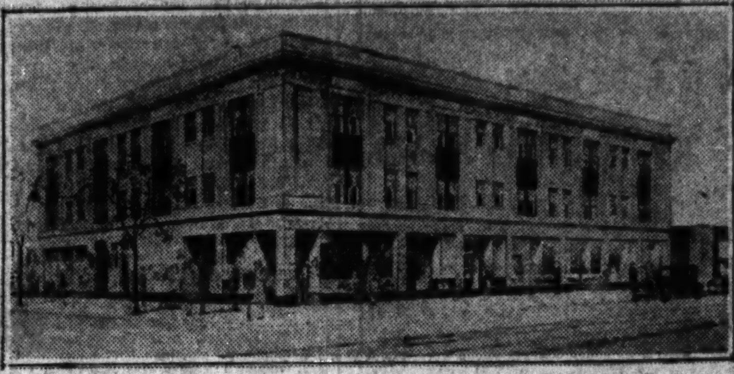
Subdivision News

One price for every lot, corner or inside, will be the plan of selling used by Frank DeLugach in his new 17½ acre subdivision bounded by 101st, 103rd, Princeton and the Western Indiana right of way, which he brought from Frederick W. Jansen for an indicated $38,000.

In telling about Arthur McIntosh & Company's new Glen Ellyn subdivision recently Park avenue was mentioned. This should have read Hill avenue.

The Continental Development company has bought forty acres at the northeast corner of Roosevelt road and President street, just outside the Wheaton limits and west of the Arthur McIntosh & Co. subdivision mentioned in the foregoing paragraph. Harrell & Allmart were brokers.

Telly Building, Broadway-Granville



Work has just started on a three story fireproof building at the northwest corner of Broadway and Granville, to contain nine stores and thirty-two kitchenette two room apartments. Mrs. W. Giertsen is the owner. Dyer & Nadherny are architects.

The Telly building, as it'll be called, will have a terra cotta exterior, with bronze colored terra cotta panels. According to W. H. Giertsen & Co., who will represent the owner in the renting, management, etc., of the property, completion date has been set for Oct. 1. They say the total cost of land and building will be approximately $350,000. The State Bank of Chicago has made a $180,000 loan on the project. The site has a frontage of 122 feet on Broadway and 93 feet on Granville.

Brokers' Notes

T. D. O'Hern has opened a new real estate office at 1614 East 53d, just east of the I. C. station, under the firm name of T. D. O'Hern & Co. Joseph Honan and James L. Igoe are associated with him.

L. W. Skome & Son, real estate investments, have moved from 79 West Monroe to suite 1004 in the Hartford building. Same telephone.

Nyden & Tupes have moved from 2234 to 1813 East 71st street, where they will have the management of the building.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

May 24, 1925

A FEW OF THE 80,000 SPECTATORS AT THE GREAT KENTUCKY DERBY. Soft southern skies smiled down on this picture, taken during the running of the third race. But before the bugle call for the Derby sounded a sudden terrific rainstorm changed the picturesque scene as if by magic. The thousands in the open scurried madly for some sort of shelter; darkness shrouded most of the track; and the thoroughbreds in America's greatest race came out to test their speed and stamina over a slippery, sloppy course. Probably 20,000 Chicagoans were among the great throng at the Derby.

(Tribune photograph.)

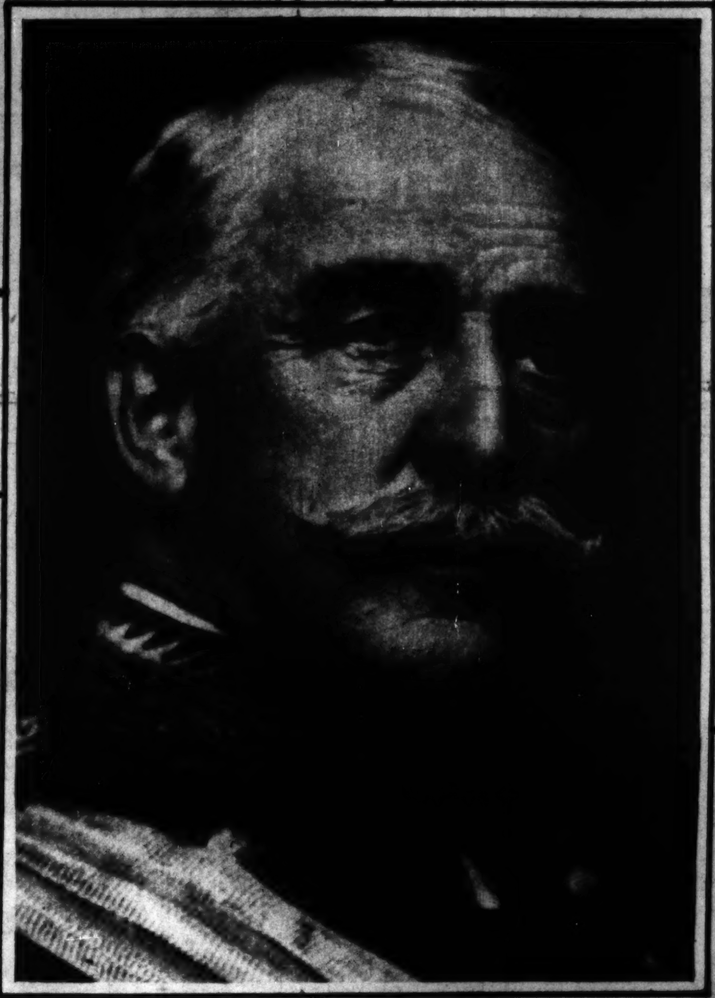
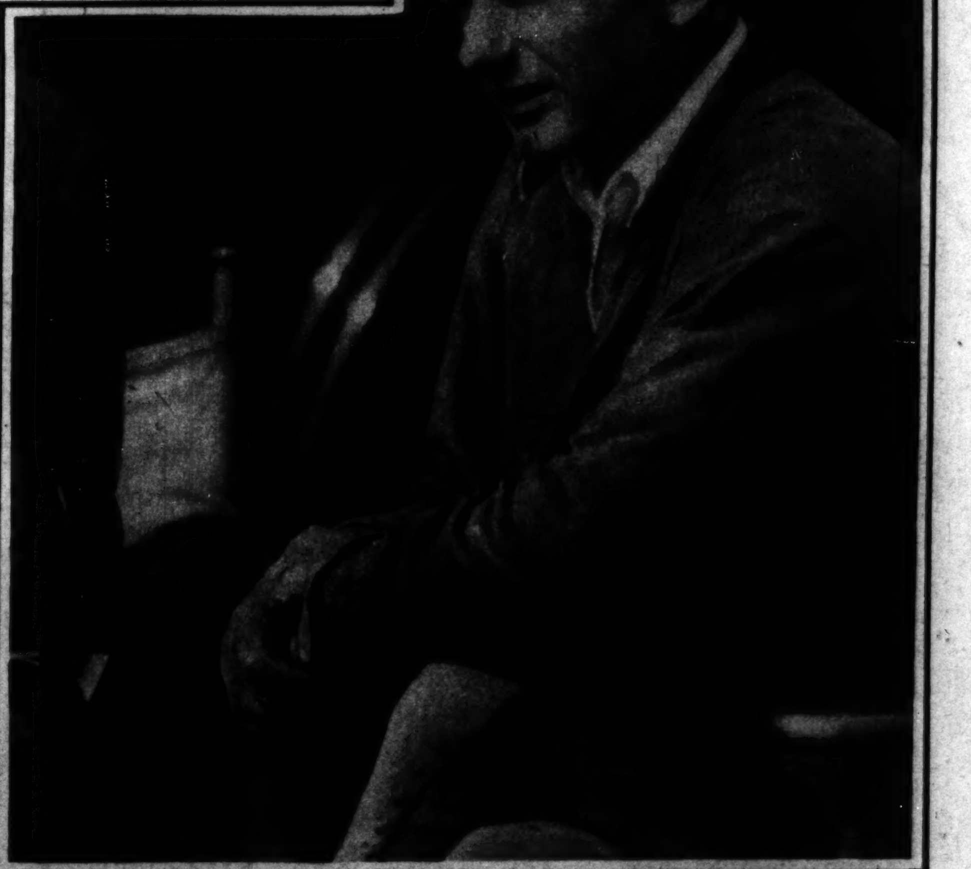
(Photograph from Kadel & Herbert.)



TAPS IS SOUNDED FOR GEN. NELSON A. MILES. Heart disease killed the famous Indian fighter while he was attending a circus in Washington with his grandchildren. The end came so quietly that Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, who was seated nearby, did not realize a national hero had passed away. At the age of 25 Gen. Miles was a major-general in the Civil war, commanding 25,000 men. He was the small boys' greatest hero of the Indian wars.

FLYING EBONY WINS THE DERBY! Here's the coal-black son of The Finn and Princess Mary, snapped during his last workout before the Kentucky classic. His triumph netted a purse of $52,950 for his owner, Gifford A. Cochran of New York. Flying Ebony is the second son of The Finn to win the famous race. His half brother, Zev, won the 1923 Derby.

(Tribune photograph.)



THE WINNING JOCKEY, EARL SANDE—Turf experts tell us it was Sande as much as Flying Ebony that won the Derby. His superb horsemanship decided the race, they claim, and they tell us he probably would have won with either of the horses that finished second and third—Captain Hal and Son of John. It was a lucky break for Sande. He wanted to ride the favorite, Quatrain, offering the latter's jockey $2,000 for the mount, and another $5,000 if Quatrain should win. It was Sande's second Derby victory, too, for he also rode Zev when that other son of The Finn captured the 1923 classic.

Houbigant Face Powder in Quelques Fleurs, Le Parfum Ideal, Mon Boudoir, Le Temps des Lilas, Subtilité and other Houbigant odors—$1.50. Subtilité, in the Buddha bottle—$12.50. Le Parfum Ideal—$6.75. Then Quelques Fleurs, a nosegay of dreams—$7.50.

What do you know about Perfume?

YOU use perfume—all clever women do. But what do you know about it? How much have you thought about it? Why do you choose one perfume rather than another?

Perfume Means Something. Perfume in general. Each odor in particular. Perfume whispers what you are—what you think. Not only perfume in a bottle, but perfume in a powder box . . .

Houbigant, who has created the subtlest, the most delicately seductive perfumes in the world, has put them into face powder, too--powder impalpably fine, marvelously toned to match the skin. Two shades for blondes—naturelle and ocre rosée. Two for brunettes—rachel and ocre. And, of course, white. These powders are infused with perfume till they seem almost like clouds of sachet . . .

Subtilité—a new perfume, very Frenchy, very sophisticated, known as yet to the few only. Light, delicate, intricately blended.

Mon Boudoir—for the woman who adores luxury, color, soft music—an arrogantly lovely odor . . .

Le Temps des Lilas—The very breath of lilacs drenched in morning dew.

Quelques Fleurs—Fragrant as a whole bouquet—a dancing sprite of a perfume . . .

Le Parfum Ideal—What is it? A breath of rose, warm in a still afternoon? The soul of a great white flower that shakes out its fragrance under the fingers of the night wind?

Le Parfum Ideal has the spell of moonlight in it, and a whisper of song in the dark. Magic!

At the left, Le Temps des Lilas, green and limpid, pure as a garden—$5.00. Next to it, Mon Boudoir, brown as amber in its lovely crystal bottle, beloved of the true coquette—$8.00.

But don't choose on paper. Go to your favorite perfume counter today and try them all. Or write to Houbigant. The little booklet, "Things Perfumes Whisper," will tell you a great deal. And, if you say which one of these perfumes you think you'd like best, Houbigant will send you a tiny sachet, with the book.

The daily way to Check Decay – kill the germs that cause it

Will you reach old age with all your teeth?

YOU BRUSH YOUR TEETH FAITHFULLY. You brush them carefully. Yet when you visit your dentist you are often surprised at the number of cavities his instruments reveal.

You feel baffled. Others seemingly no more careful than yourself enjoy the blessing of sound teeth. What is the trouble?

The trouble is that your teeth require a certain kind of protection which you are failing to give them--the protection they need is adequate dental care and the daily use of a germ-killing dentifrice.

The protection they need is the germicidal protection of Kolynos Dental Cream. Kolynos not only keeps your teeth white and glistening, but its main properties are highly antiseptic—extremely important properties if you are to have sound teeth, teeth free from dangerous, offensive, and painful cavities.

{FREE—Enough Kolynos to brush your teeth 22 times, ½ inch to the brushing.}

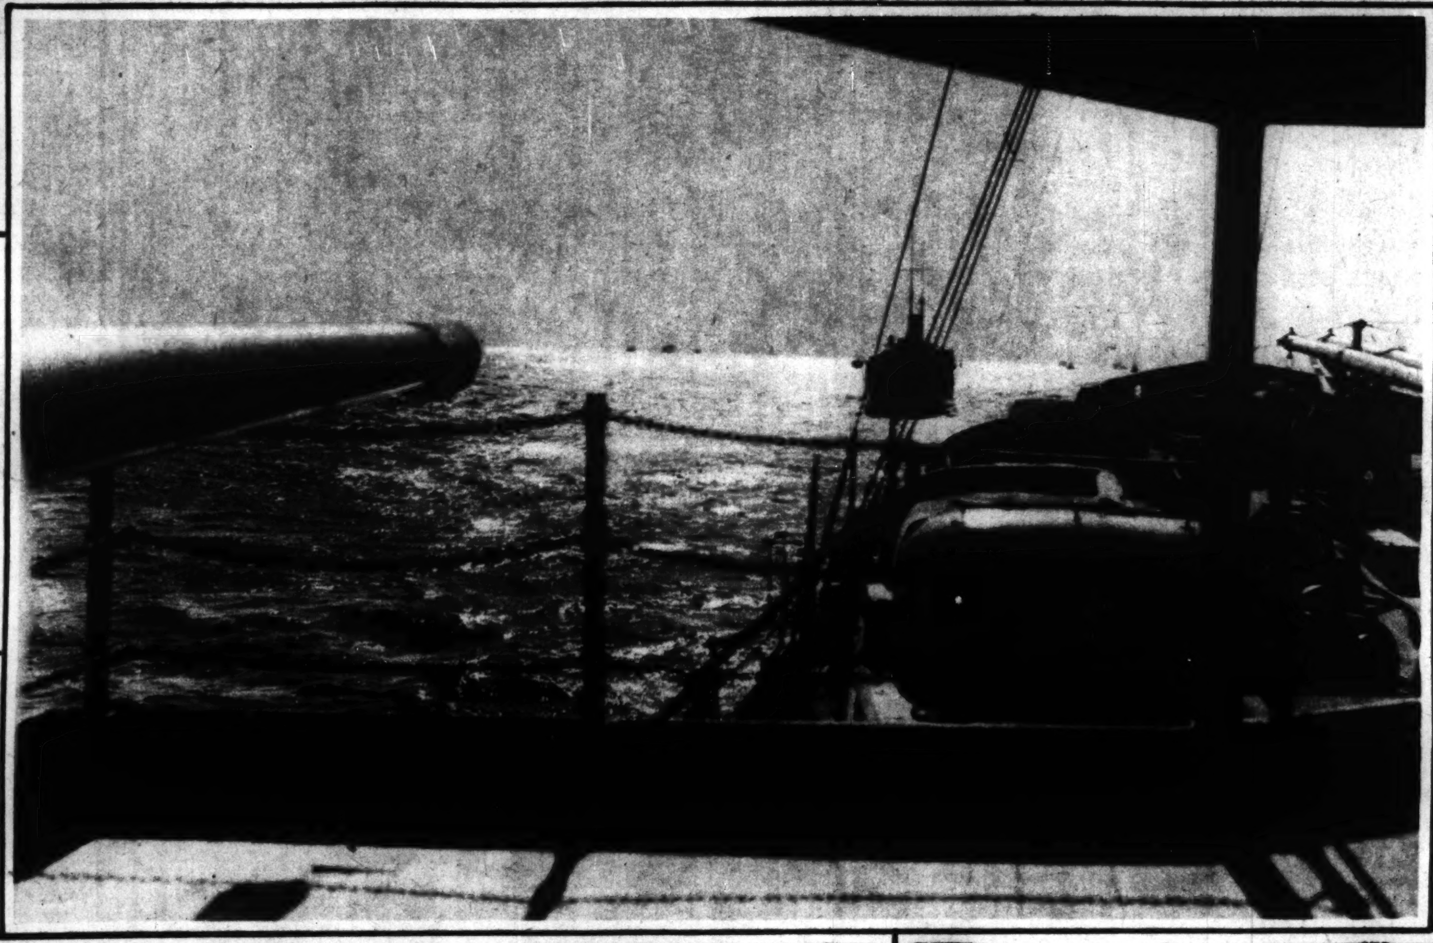
WITH THE GRAND FLEET ON THE HAWAIIAN "BATTLE LINE"

THE WASP FLOTILLA GOES INTO ACTION—Destroyers of the "invading" armada speeding to give battle to the theoretical enemy in America's test of Hawaiian defenses. Though the defenders hotly deny it, the destroyers seem to have been on the side of victory. At least the majority of critics contend that the war game resulted in the capture of the islands, the nation's first line of Pacific defense.

(Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic)

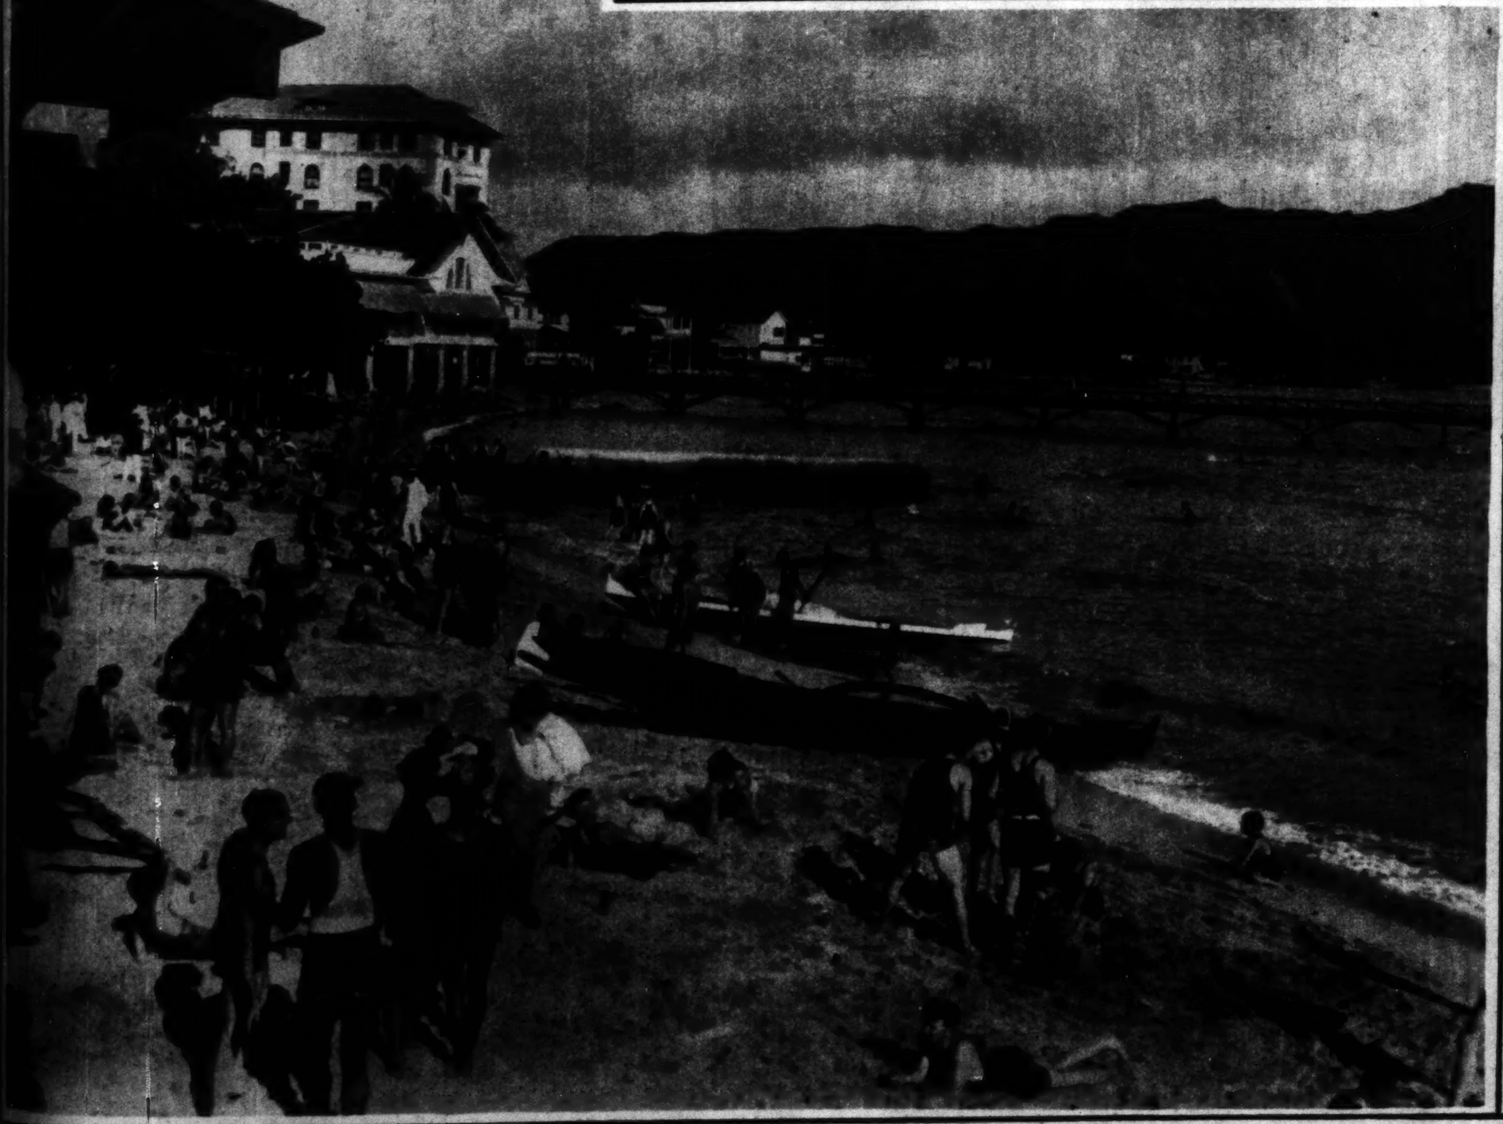
'T WASN'T A BOUQUET, but a vegetable, that the Waikiki hula girl handed the friendly gob; though we mustn't suppose she meant to discourage his smiles altogether. No, no, it's perfectly well chaperoned and all right. The M. P.'s are in the background, and they haven't even unholstered their clubs.

(Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic)

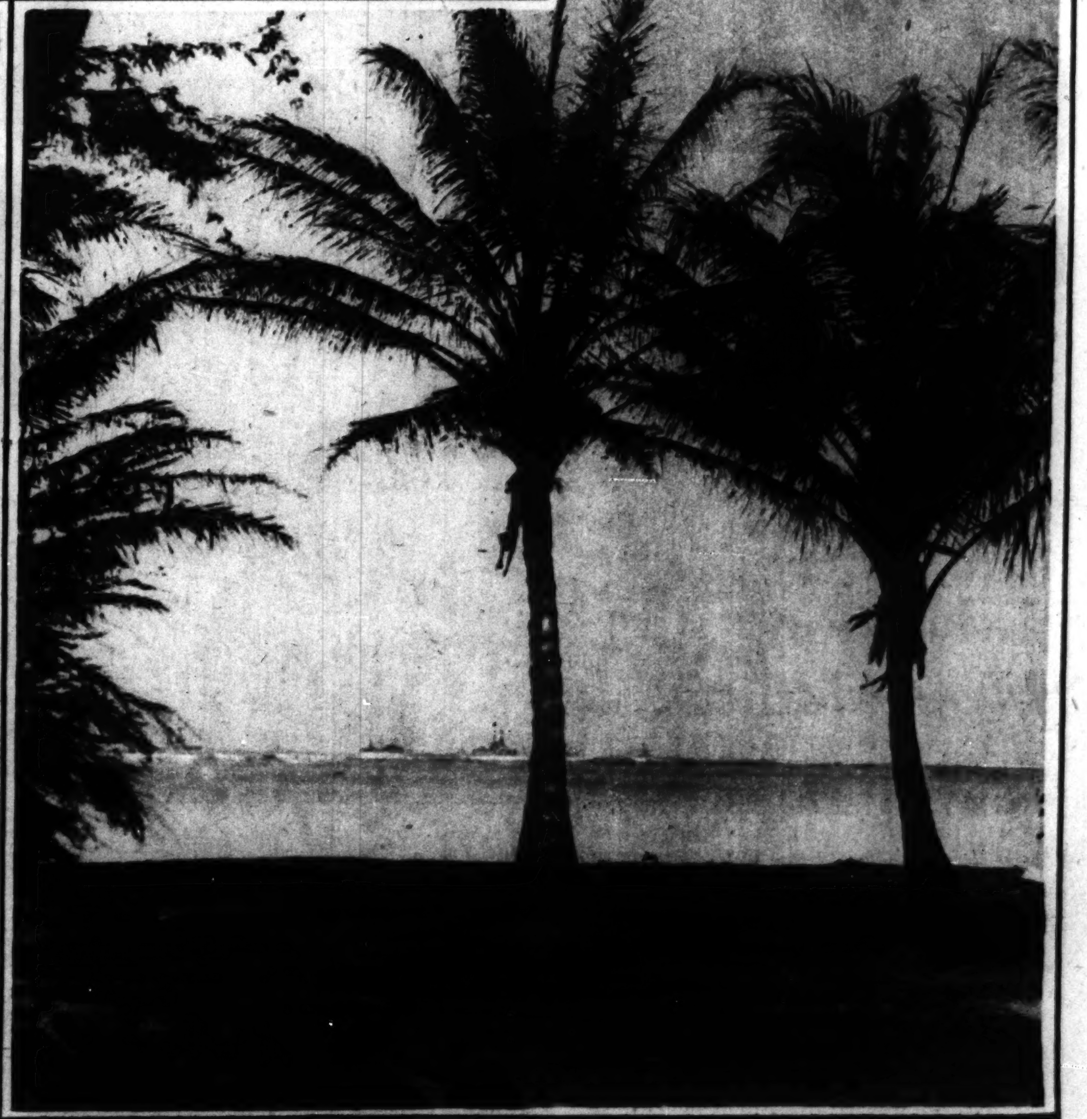


INTO THE SETTING SUN—A shining panorama photographed from the deck of the U. S. S. Dobbin during the voyage from the Pacific coast to Hawaii. From the stern gun in the foreground the perspective narrows sharply to mighty ships that appear like dots on the horizon. So farflung was the cruising order, indeed, that the van of the battleships already had passed from sight.

(Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic)



ALL WORK AND NO PLAY MAKES JACKIE A DULL BOY, so when the War of Hawaii had ended and the experts started fighting it all over again, there was shore leave for everybody that could be spared from the ships. And did the gobs turn down this chance to tread dry land? They did not. But, like the postman who took a walk on his hour off, most of 'em spent their leisure by the sea at Waikiki. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic)



FROM THE BEACH AT WAIKIKI swaying palms looked out at the battleships swinging at anchor in the harbor after "war" had given place to "peace." This scene of tropical magnificence was varied on one occasion by a wild and sudden storm, during which the Maryland is reported to have escaped capsizing only by lifting anchor and leading her sister ships to quieter waters outside the port.

A dentist would have told him
She neglected her gums
Vain regrets won't restore lost beauty
He found out—too late

Prevent tooth decay below the gum-line

As the soil nourishes the tree roots, the gums nourish the teeth. And as the tree decays if you bare the roots, so do the teeth decay when gum shrinkage starts in.

This condition—one of the first stages of Pyorrhea—is very common and something that ordinary tooth pastes are powerless to prevent. If not checked promptly, it will lead to loss of teeth and serious organic diseases.

Forhan's Checkmates Pyorrhea

If used in time and used consistently twice daily, Forhan's will prevent Pyorrhea or check its progress. It will preserve the gums in their pink, normal, healthy condition, safeguard your health and keep your mouth clean, fresh and wholesome.

Forhan's is more than a tooth paste; it checks Pyorrhea. Thousands have found it beneficial for years. For your own sake ask for Forhan's For the Gums. All druggists, 35c and 60c in tubes.

600,000 Women Have Stopped Falling Hair This New Way!

800,000 men and 600,000 women have tried Van Ess Scalp Massage. These users say: YES!

Here's what one enthusiast writes:

Baltimore, Md., December 2, 1924

After using three bottles of Van Ess Scalp treatment, I have found its results marvelous. I am 75 years old and after forty years, my head is free of dandruff. My hair has ceased to fall out and is soft, glossy and full of life and bald spots of many years are covered with a growth of fine, new hair.

I consider Van Ess Scalp treatment just as essential in keeping the hair clean and healthy as a tooth brush is essential in keeping the teeth clean and healthy, therefore, it should accompany regularly the tooth-brush in its daily use.

Yours truly,
(MRS.) ADDIE SULLIVAN

MRS. BRADLEY'S PERFECT DAY in the latest Chicago expedition through "back of beyond" in Africa came when she bagged this jungle giant at seventy-five feet in the tall grass of the Congo. The picture of the party, due to return in June, shows H. A. Bigelow and A. P. Scott standing; Herbert E. Bradley and Mary Hastings Bradley, seated on Jumbo's knee next to Mrs. Bradley's gun boy, Riano Omari.

SPINNER OF WEIRD TALES IS DEAD—Sir Henry Rider Haggard, one of the generation's most popular and successful writers of romantic fiction, who passed away at his home in London on May 14 in his sixty-ninth year. "ROCK-A-BYE, BABY, UP IN THE TREETOP" is something Norma Cleo Dunton takes quite literally at the age of seventeen months. Her height of bliss is to be thrown across the yard to an uncle by her father, Clarence Dunton of Los Angeles. She's famous out there as a flying baby wonder, with dizzy somersaults and flips in her repertoire. She stands on her head, too, when coaxed; but that's so simple that it's pure condescension for Norma.

IT is a fact which usually surprises a woman that a fabric so like silk in its feel, so like flower petals in its tints, can have woven into it such resistance to hard wear and frequent tubbings.

It is this remarkable combination of beauty with long service which explains the tremendous favor and ever-growing demand for Lingette—for every kind of lingerie, for Princess slips, nightdresses, and for men's pajamas and athletic underwear.

Squibb Educational Contest

EACH advertisement of E. R. Squibb & Sons has an educational purpose. It gives information which, if followed, will lead to better health. To help accomplish this purpose, we will distribute $25,000.00 in cash awards among 508 contestants who give the best answers to eleven questions.

Ten of these eleven questions appear in this column. The eleventh and last question will be announced on Saturday, October 24, 1925.

Squibb advertisements relating to this contest will appear in the Saturday Evening Post, American Magazine, Literary Digest, The Ladies' Home Journal, Woman's Home Companion, Good Housekeeping, and Hygeia Magazine. They also will appear in the New York Times, the Chicago Tribune, and other newspapers in leading cities throughout the United States.

CONDITIONS

This contest is open to every one except those connected directly or indirectly with E. R. Squibb & Sons.

Your answers to the questions may be long or short. They may be typewritten or written with pen and ink. Literary ability will not influence the selection of the winners. Write freely in your own way.

Your name and address must be plainly written at the top of the first page of your answers.

Answers must be written in the English language, and on only one side of the paper. The number of the question you are answering must be given.

Each contestant may send throughout the contest any number of answers to any or all of the questions as soon as ready. All answers will be considered, but only one award will be made to a contestant.

All answers must be mailed in a sealed envelope. Post cards will not be considered.

Each letter received will be individually acknowledged, but E. R. Squibb & Sons will not undertake the return of any of the material submitted.

The names of the winners will not be published because we believe there are many people who would like to enter this contest, but who would not care to have their names appear in the public press. The names of the winners will be mailed on request.

The contest opens officially May 24, 1925, and closes November 30, 1925. No answers will be considered that bear a postmark later than midnight, November 30, 1925. The awards will be made as soon after the close of the contest as it is possible for the judges to fairly consider each answer.

The names of the judges will be announced later in this publication. Their decision will be final.

In case of a tie, both or all tying contestants will receive the full amount of the award tied for.

The awards will be made to those whose answers, in the opinion of the judges, indicate that they have given most thought to the subjects covered by the questions, and have learned the most from the facts set forth in Squibb advertising.

All answers should be addressed to the Contest Editor, E. R. Squibb & Sons, P. O. Box 1132, City Hall Station, New York City.

The QUESTIONS

Notice that none of the contest questions is difficult to answer, nor does the answering of them require professional or technical knowledge. You can get from the Squibb advertisements the information you need to answer these questions.

1. What is the "Danger Line" in the mouth? Why is it so called?
2. How can you best guard your teeth against acid decay and your gums against pyorrhea and thus maintain your general health?
3. What is the important constituent of Squibb's Dental Cream? Why is it so important?
4. Why should a dental cream be free from grit or similar abrasives?
5. Why do antiseptics or germ destroying chemicals in a dental cream give a false sense of security?
6. Why should a dental cream be free from astringents and other substances harmful when continually used in the mouth?
7. Why is a correct dentifrice of the utmost importance in the care of children's mouths?
8. Why should you have in the family medicine cabinet only such products as are approved by your physician?
9. State one or more points of superiority in each of the following products: Squibb's Milk of Magnesia, Squibb's Castor Oil, Squibb's Cod-Liver Oil, Squibb's Epsom Salt, Squibb's Bicarbonate of Soda.
10. Why is it important to consider "The Priceless Ingredient" before you buy?

The truth about Pyorrhea

and what you can do to protect yourself against it

SOME people live constantly within the shadow of fear. Beautiful women fear the loss of their beauty. Healthy men fear loss of strength. Parents fear for the welfare of their children and loved ones.

But fear may be unfounded or greatly exaggerated. Take for example the many stories spread today regarding Pyorrhea. You read that the majority of people have Pyorrhea; that Pyorrhea is inevitable with old age. Is it, therefore, any wonder that people are afraid of Pyorrhea? What is the truth about it?

Where trouble begins

Your gums, where they join the teeth, thin out to a delicate edge. If you look closely, you can see tiny V-shaped crevices formed by this joining of your teeth and gums. You will find these crevices on the outside of your teeth, in between your teeth and in back of your teeth. They form what is known as The Danger Line.

Great care is necessary to keep this thin, delicate edge of your gums safe from injury. A tooth-brush that is too stiff, a dentifrice containing gritty abrasives, powerful astringents or strong antiseptics will irritate this delicate edge of your gums. Then the gums recede from your teeth; the V-shaped crevices widen and collect food and germs.

The food and germs which so easily collect in these crevices along The Danger Line form acids which cause Acid Decay, gum irritation and often Pyorrhea. These acids must be neutralized—safely, effectively.

Remember this—that Pyorrhea cannot occur so long as the fine, thin edge of gum tissue at The Danger Line remains intact, clean and free from infection.

Safe protection for the teeth and gums

Squibb's Dental Cream, made with Squibb's Milk of Magnesia, provides a sure, safe means for protecting the teeth and gums at The Danger Line. Milk of Magnesia has long been recognized by physicians and dentists everywhere as the safest as well as the most effective product known for neutralizing the acids which attack both teeth and gums.

Squibb's Dental Cream protects the teeth from Acid Decay, and at the same time keeps them clean and attractive. It keeps the gum edges healthy by neutralizing the acids which otherwise would attack them. It strengthens the gums and aids them in resisting infection. Also it relieves sensitive teeth almost at once. It affords more real, lasting protection for your entire mouth than any other dentifrice available today. It is, moreover, pleasant to use, and entirely safe—even if swallowed by children.

Do not allow tooth and gum troubles to develop when it is so easy to protect yourself from them. Be careful in selecting your dentifrice. Remember, a protective dentifrice is far more desirable than a merely cleansing one. Keep on hand several tubes of Squibb's Dental Cream, made with Squibb's Milk of Magnesia. For better care and protection of teeth and gums, be sure every member of the family uses Squibb's. At druggists everywhere.

SQUIBB'S DENTAL CREAM

Made with Squibb's Milk of Magnesia

SQUIBB'S MILK OF MAGNESIA—The Standard of Quality—from which Squibb's Dental Cream is made—is recommended by physicians everywhere. It may be purchased in large and small bottles from your druggist. If you have not used Squibb's Milk of Magnesia, we urge you to try it and note its definite superiority—its entire freedom from earthy, alkaline taste.

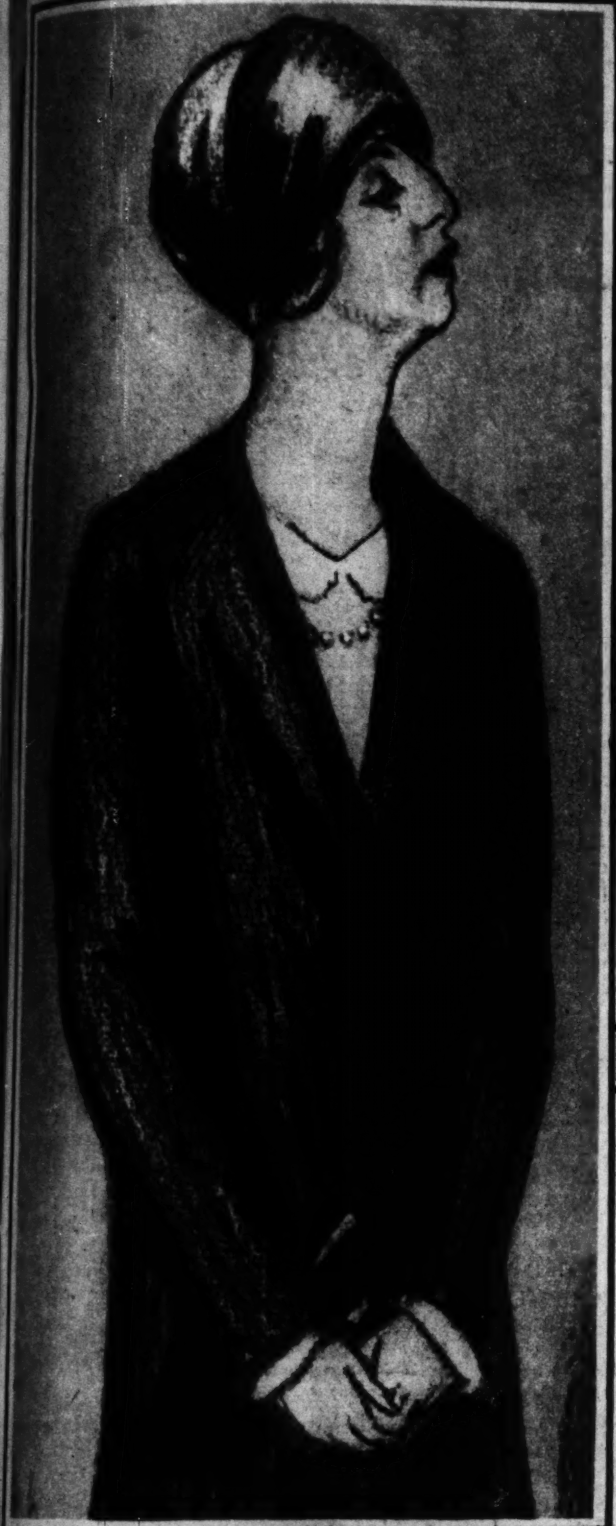
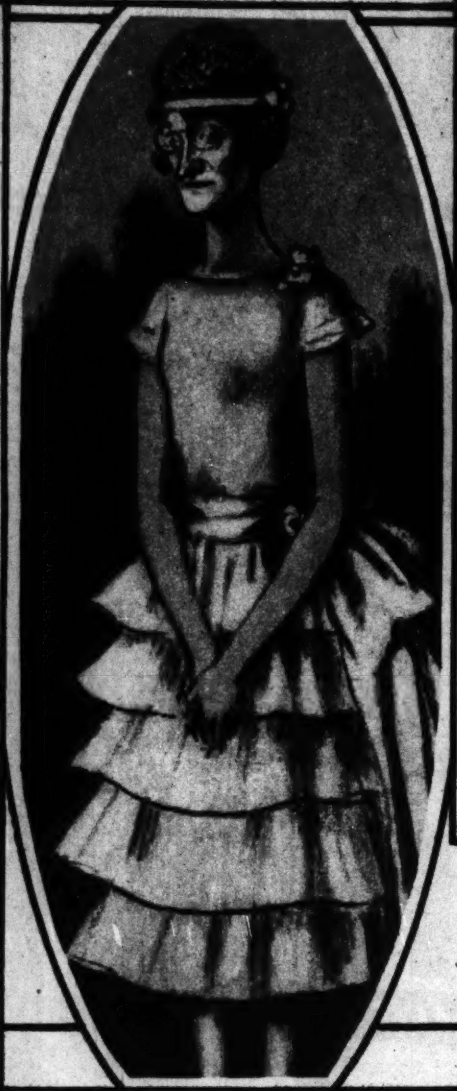
The Early Forties

By W. E. HILL

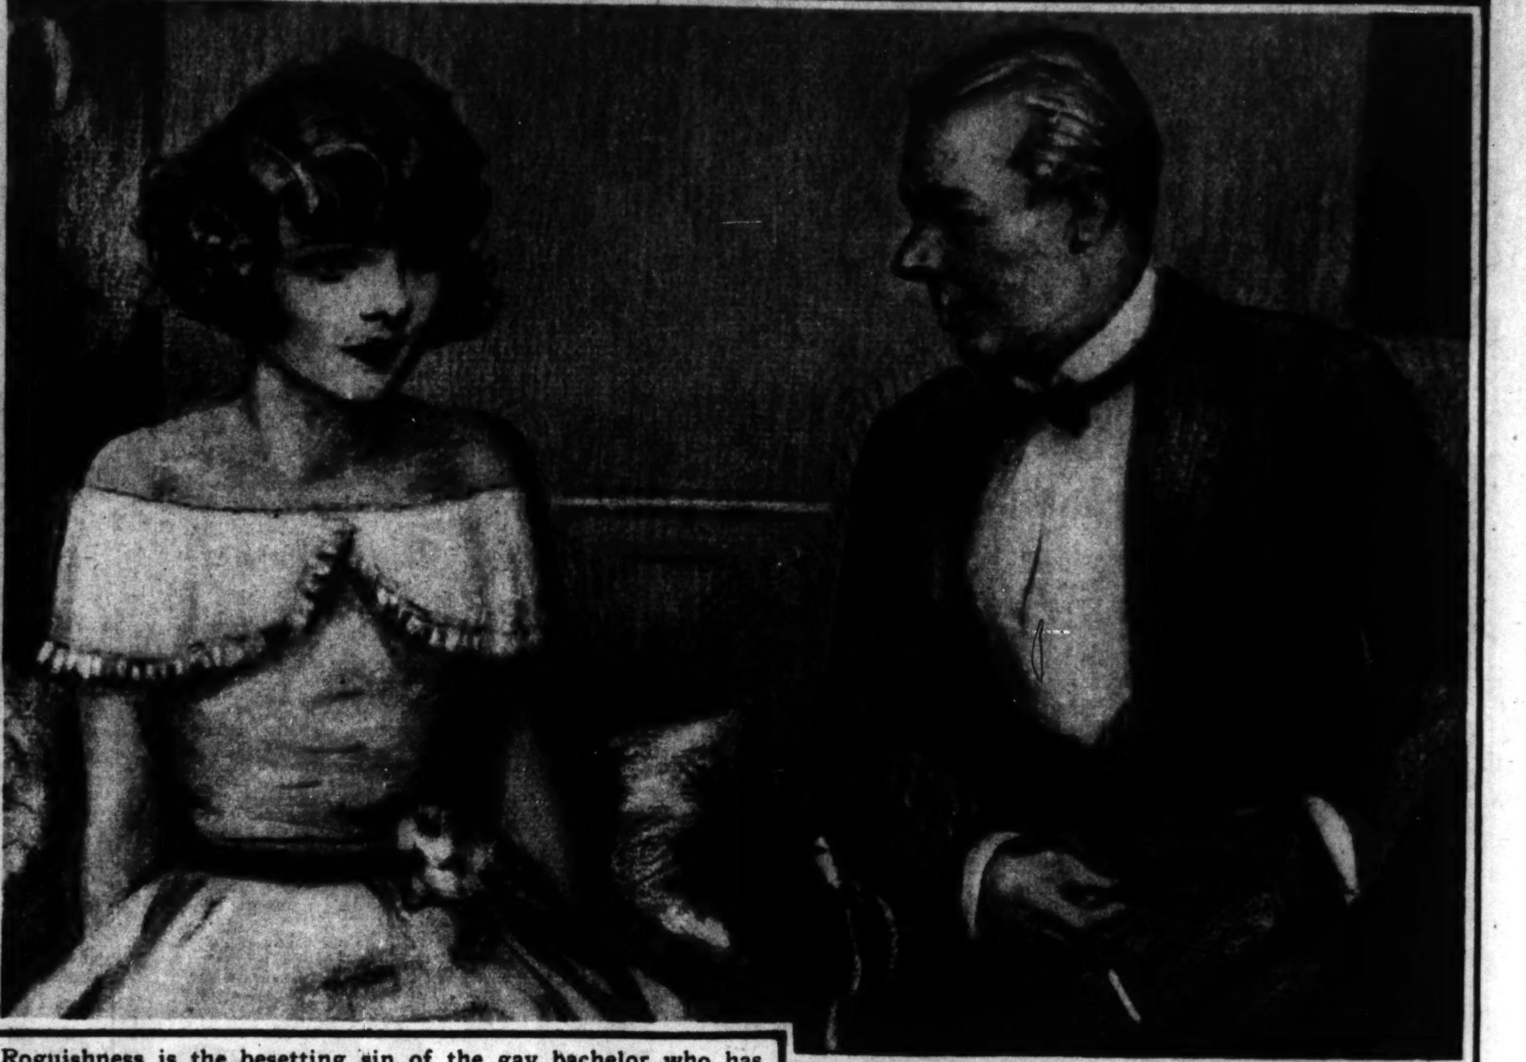
Copyright: 1925: by The Chicago Tribune.



After forty, the people with the feeling for grandeur begin to tone down a bit. They are just as grand, but it doesn't stick out quite so much. The grandeur is just as expensive, but more subdued. Rolls-Royces and diamond bracelets give place to committees and political aspirations.

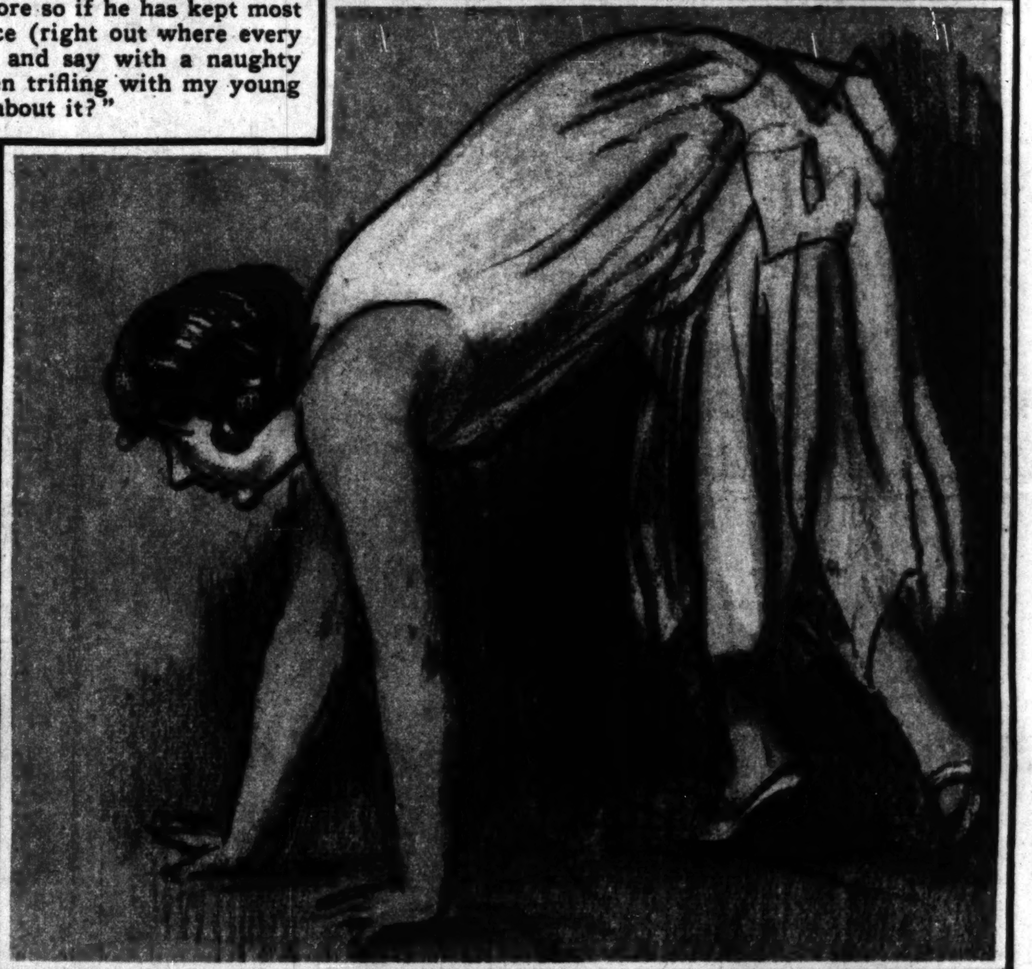


Erna has what the psychologists would call "a baby blue complex." She simply can't get over sweet, little taffeta baby blue ruffles and baby blue rosebuds, now that she's over forty.

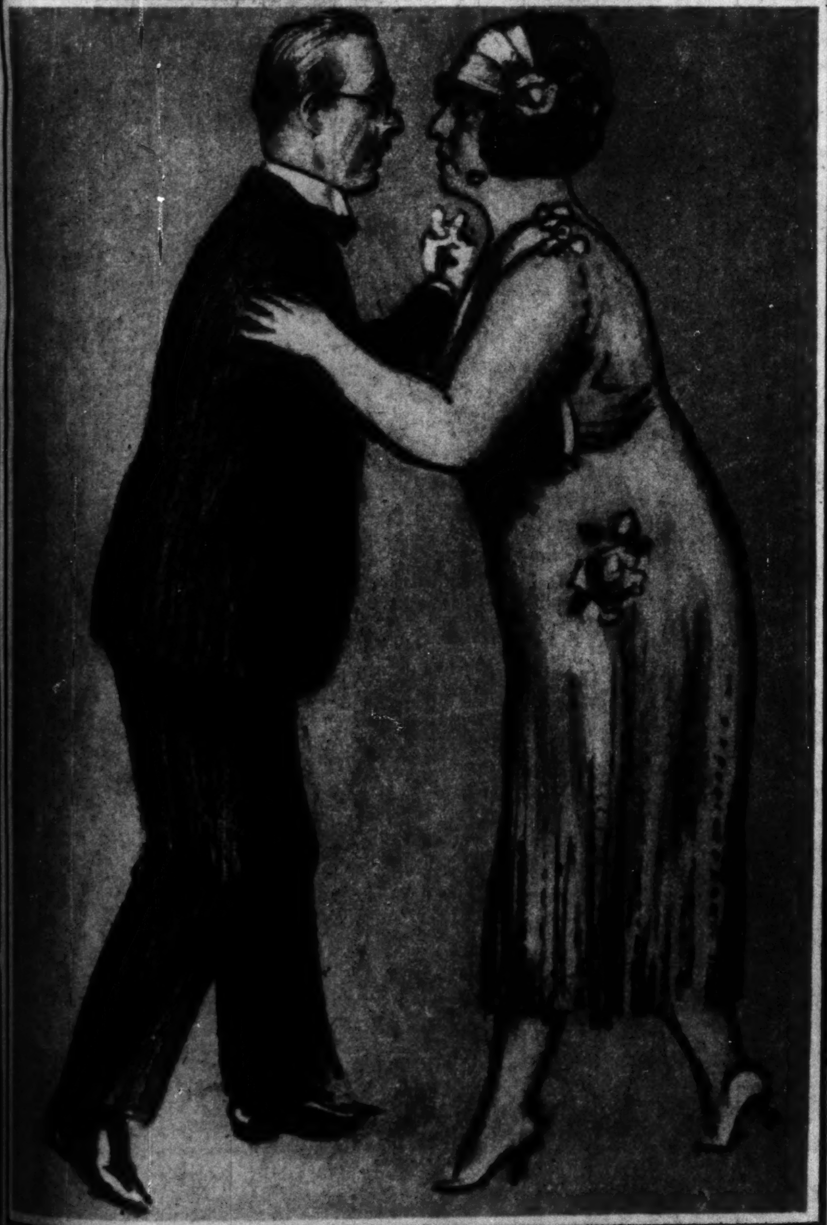


Roguishness is the besetting sin of the gay bachelor who has passed the forty-year mark. All the more so if he has kept most of his hair. He likes to sit out a dance (right out where every one can see, so she won't vamp him) and say with a naughty twinkle in his eye, "Gracie, you've been trifling with my young heart. Now what are you going to do about it?"

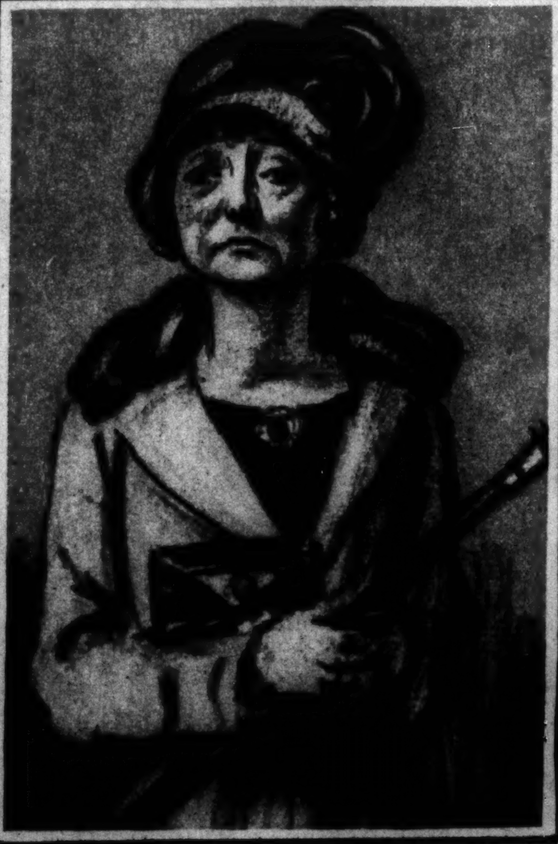
Though past forty, Joe is one of those great, big, jolly boys, always ready for a lark. Joe thinks he looks twenty-five, and won't play if you mention middle age. Joe's is a continual state of adolescence.



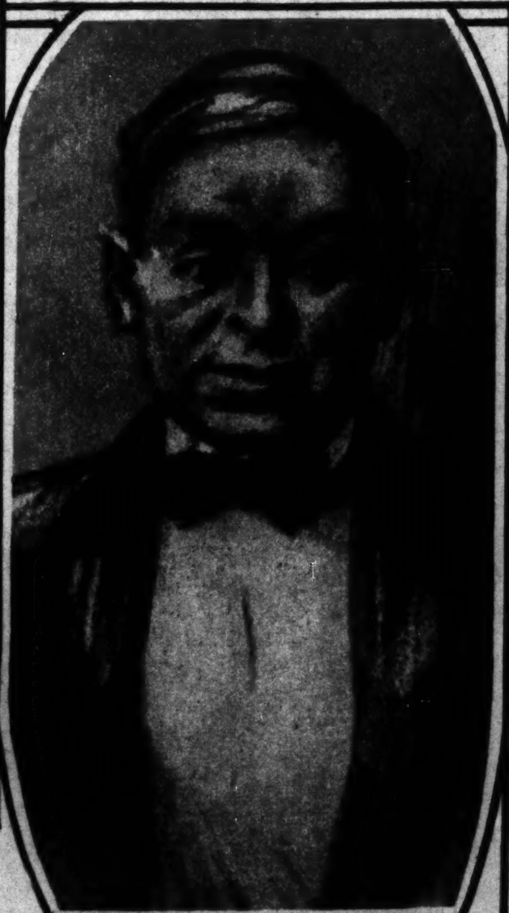
Matrons of forty, or a little beyond, love to show you right out in public how they keep their slim, girlish contours intact. They will try and get you to do their exercises along with them, if you don't watch out.



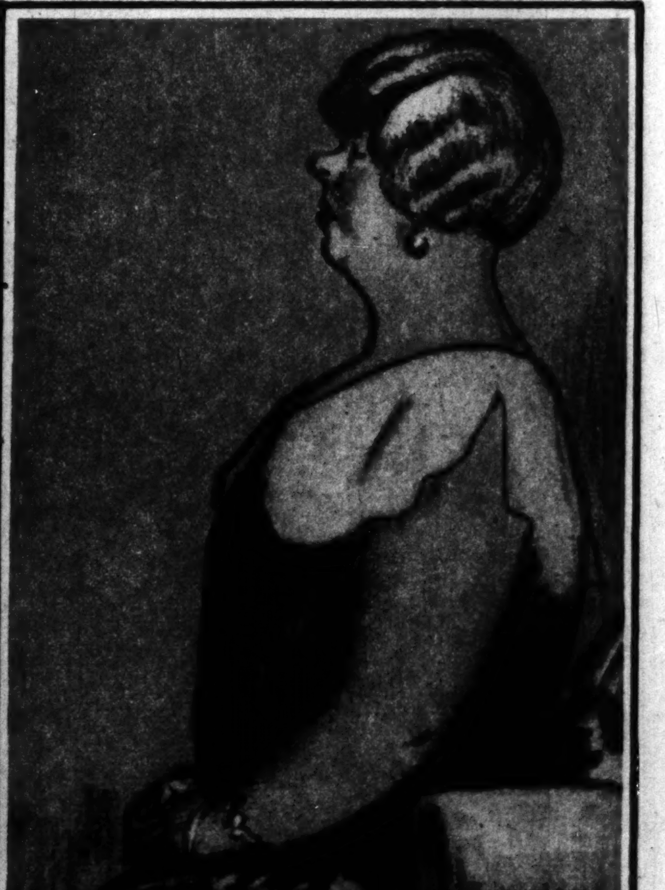
Married couples of the middle forties love to keep up with the modern dance steps. Not content, however, with simple things like the fox trot, they learn all sorts of frills. Steps called "the evil minded momma dip," or "the racketty, packetty pounce," or "the watermelon bound."



"My dear! The young girls of today! What will become of them!" Estimable ladies over forty are wont to brood despairingly over the younger generation. They will tell you terrible things that they know happened, for a fact. All about how a girl of eleven shot her entire family so she could go to a dance, and how two little boys aged five and seven cut their aunt and uncle into bits with a cleaver so that they could be sure of inheriting eighty-four dollars.



The non-visiting bachelor is a product of his fortieth birthday. When cornered he will admit brazenly that he won't go to places where they let the children out of the cellar during day hours, and where they have only one bathroom to the household.



"Day by day I am getting slimmer and slimmer. Soon I will be wearing misses' sixteens." New thought stuff is a great help to those over forty.

Puts Driving On Velvet

POLARINE maintains a film of oil between all frictional surfaces, sealing full compression, gives the action of your engine a velvety, resilient quality. This means marvelous motor flexibility and a frictionless response which makes driving a sheer delight.

This unbroken Polarine film, while it is tough and resistant to pressure and heat—yet acts as a cushion for moving parts—is the supreme achievement in modern lubricating science, accomplished after years of labor by technologists of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana).

The Polarine film means scientific protection of your motor parts—provided, of course, that you use the right grade of Polarine specified for your car, in the chart above, and drain and refill your crankcase every 500 miles.

RULE OF RUSSIA HANGS IN THE BALANCE with the return of Leon Trotzky to Moscow after a vacation in Georgia, which was practically exile for him. Trotzky, shown at the right, was banished because he confessed publicly that the experiment of absolute communism in Russia was a failure. He acknowledged the need of capitalism, to the utter rage of the ultra-Red leaders of the Soviet, including Kameneff, Zinovieff, Kalenin, and Stalin. These latter radicals not only have stood firmly for the communistic idea, but they also have spent fortunes spreading the Soviet propaganda over the world. The recent Bulgarian uprisings are laid to them. But the Red army is said to lean toward Trotzky's ideas, and though he was given only a minor government post on his return, his very presence in Russia is deemed a danger to the ruling government. In the picture above, marked by crosses, are Leo Kameneff, who succeeded Lenin as chief of the Soviet, and his wife.

THE RED BOARD OF STRATEGY, Bucharin, Gregory Zinovieff, and Leo Kameneff. The latter pair, with Kalenin, constitute the triumvirate that is flooding the world with communistic propaganda. Zinovieff and Kameneff were the men who drove Trotzky out of Russia after the death of Lenin.

(Photograph by Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service)

THE PEASANT PRESIDENT, they called Michael Ivanovitch Kalenin when he was made chairman of the Moscow soviet committee. In the present struggle, which may decide finally the battle between communism and capitalism in Russia, Kalenin has cast his lot with the Zinovieff-Kameneff extremists who cherish the idea of a world commune, with capitalism abolished entirely and forever.

PERFECT RHYTHM SHOULD BE EASY for these youngsters after they learn the essentials of the crawl stroke in swimming. They are the members of the noted Red, White, and Blue band, one of the rare attractions of the Panama Canal zone. Here they're taking a dry land lesson in the crawl stroke before trying it in the Balboa pool.

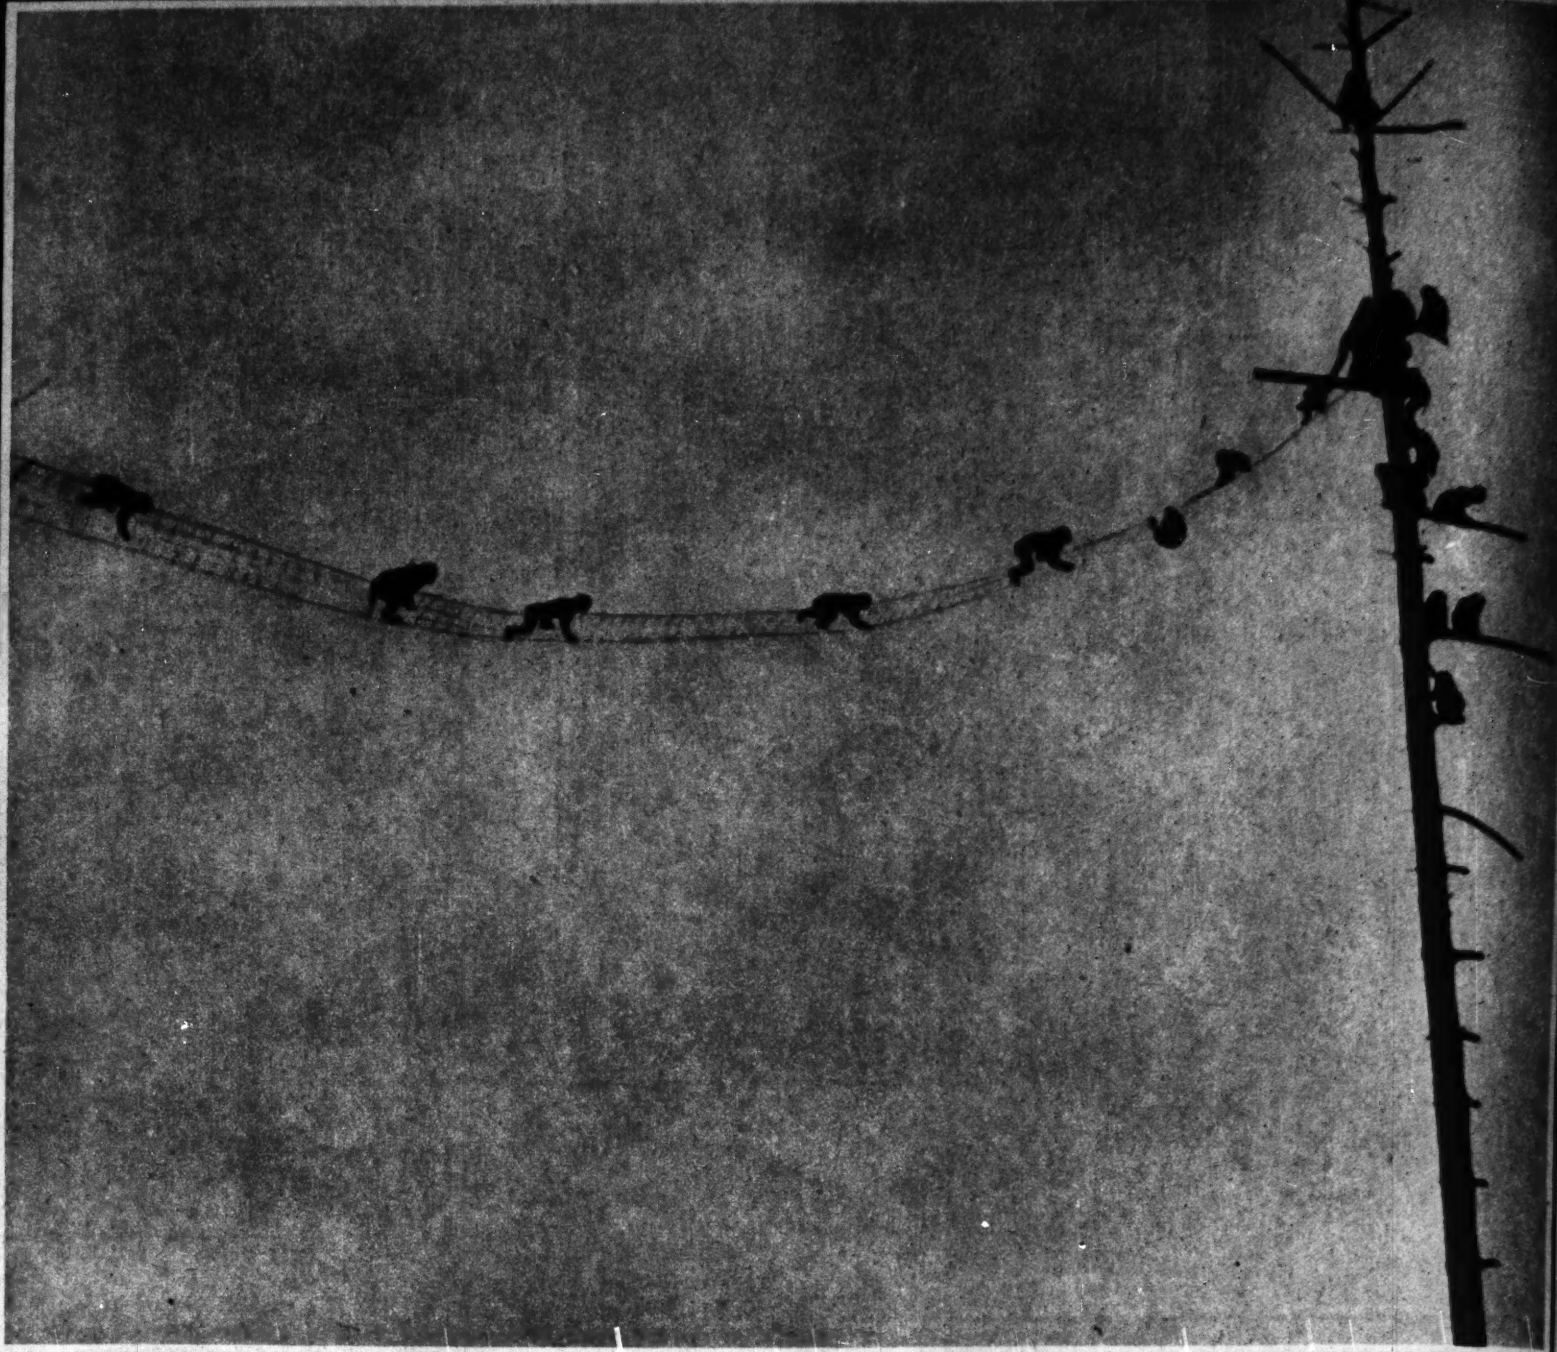
LONESOME AND YEARNING for the sharp crack of his home run bat against the flying ball, and for the joyous plaudits of admiring crowds, here's Babe Ruth getting the sun atop St. Vincent's hospital in New York. Babe is recovering slowly from the breakdown wrought by his great eating and over-strenuous training to cut down the resultant fat. He hopes to be ready for battle again by the time his Yankee teammates return from the west. (Photograph from Wide World.)



MONKEY ISLAND at the Milwaukee zoo provides a homelike setting for its lively inhabitants. Our camera found a bunch of them playing follow-the-leader, or some such game. A bridge network is stretched between two trees so Mr. and Mrs. Monk can teach the little monks all there is to learn about climbing. Every spring Milwaukee moves this colony to the island, after a winter in close quarters in the park. (Photograph from International.)

ENEMY TROOPS LAND IN HAWAII! Marines and sailors going ashore at Barber's Point for the attack on Oahu during the recent mimic warfare in the Pacific. TWO STAR JOCKEYS FACED DEATH in this double spill at the Jamaica track. Jockey Benny Martinelli's mount went down first, near the rail, and only its head is visible through the cloud of dust. Martinelli was so badly hurt his life hung in the balance for days. Jockey Mark Fator's horse thundered up and sprawled over its fallen rival. The horse is visible in an odd posture, at the right in the picture, and only Fator's arm can be seen in the dust. Fator suffered a broken shoulder. Are Relaxed Muscles Destroying the Youthful Line of Your Throat?

Have you discovered a line running from either side of your nose to your mouth? While this is the first indication of relaxed muscles don't be worried—try Dorothy Gray's Preparations for this need.

Have you developed a too full under-chin? Try Dorothy Gray's Patter to pat into the skin, her Tissue Cream to break up the fatty tissues.

Is there a slight droop under your chin? Miss Gray suggests stimulating creams and astringents and the use of her patter to prevent the slight droop from becoming a decided one.

DOROTHY GRAY recommends for relaxed muscles a combination of her carefully compounded creams and astringents patted into the skin with her rubber patter, which will stimulate circulation and help rejuvenate the action of skin, muscles and tissues under the skin.

If you are in Atlantic City or New York this Spring, plan to visit regularly the Dorothy Gray Studio. This is the time of the year when all nature is rejuvenated, the time when your skin will respond to attention as at no other time. After long winter days in over-heated homes the sluggish circulation must be stimulated, the skin nourished and relaxed muscles toned and strengthened.

If it is impossible to visit either of the Studios, read, check and mail to DOROTHY GRAY the card below and she will suggest preparations designated for your needs and the time and manner of their use in your own home, that will make you glad you are alive this Spring and happy to meet yourself face to face in your own mirror.

DECORATION DAY! . . . Veterans of three wars swinging down the avenue to pulse-quickening music. . . . Picnickers spreading their lunches in the cool recesses of a shady nook. . . . Golf . . . tennis . . . a sail! . . . Everywhere . . . everyone is celebrating . . . celebrating a glorious past.

Whatever you do on this glorious holiday—wherever you go—remember "Canada Dry." Because of its wonderful flavor! Because it quenches thirst! Because (and this is most important) it refreshes and invigorates! Because it is genuinely good for you!

This fine old ginger ale, which has been famous for so many years in Canada, is different from any other ginger ale you have ever tasted—different in quality—different in the way it is carbonated—different in the piquancy of its wonderful flavor.

Its sparkling paleness is like the mellow hue of a fine old champagne drawn from a musty bottle.

For "Canada Dry" is a real ginger ale, made from real Jamaica ginger. It does not contain capsicum (red pepper) in any form, and its quality and purity are so well recognized that it has been served for years in leading hospitals in Canada and now in this country.

Because "Canada Dry" is a real ginger ale, made from real Jamaica ginger, it blends delightfully with other beverages—it does not bite the tongue or burn the lips—it has none of that syrupy "too-sweet" taste that you associate with ordinary ginger ale—it is truly friendly to the stomach.

The lore that enters into its making is akin to the lore of the wine-makers of France—a formula and process handed down from father to son. Only three men in the world know the secret of the flavor of "Canada Dry."

For Decoration Day—for every day—there is no drink so completely satisfying—so delectable—so piquantly keen and cooling as "Canada Dry."

You will never forget its wonderful flavor!

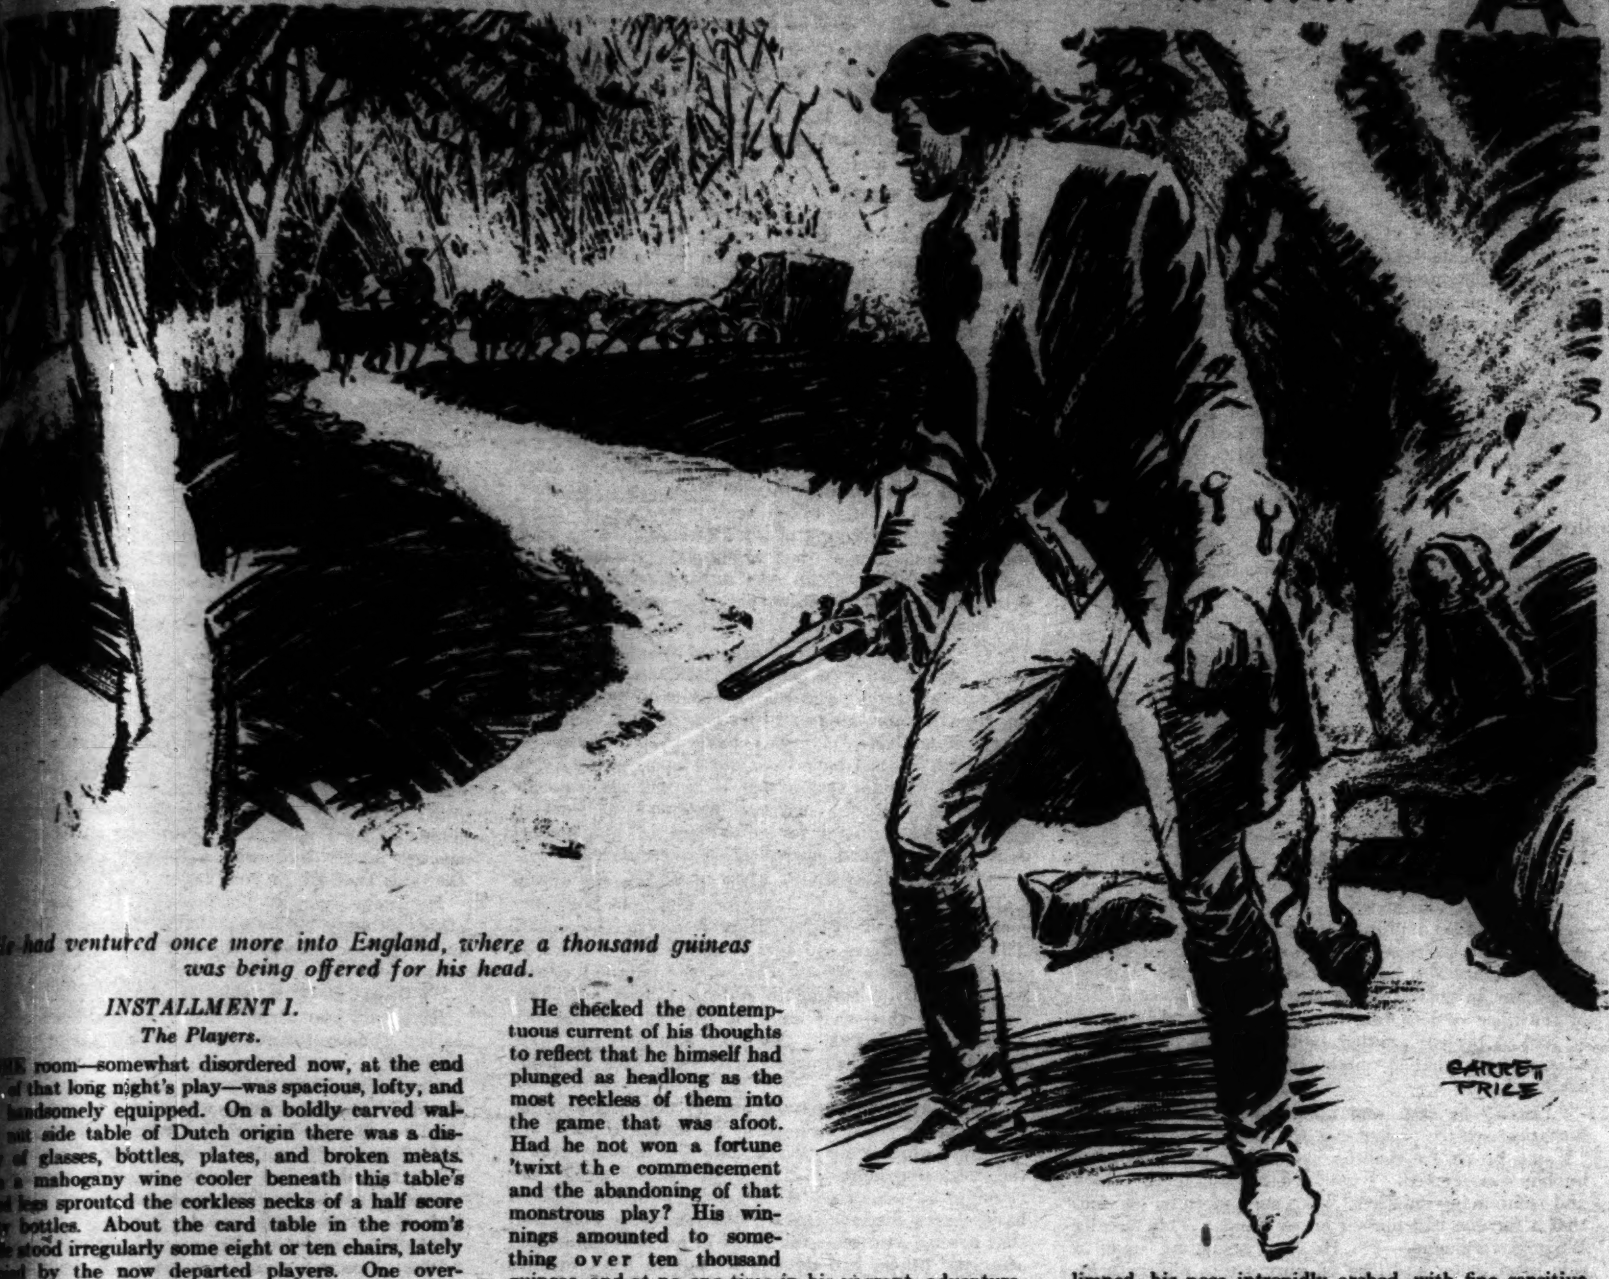
The GATES of DOOM

by Rafael Sabatini

Blue Ribbon Fiction



He had ventured once more into England, where a thousand guineas was being offered for his head.

INSTALLMENT I.

The Players.

THE room—somewhat disordered now, at the end of that long night's play—was spacious, lofty, and handsomely equipped. On a boldly carved walnut side table of Dutch origin there was a display of glasses, bottles, plates, and broken meats. From a mahogany wine cooler beneath this table's arched legs sprouted the corkless necks of a half score empty bottles. About the card table in the room's middle stood irregularly some eight or ten chairs, lately occupied by the now departed players. One overturned chair lay neglected where it had fallen. Cards were still strewn upon the table's cover of green baize and some few lay scattered on the scarlet Turkey rug that covered a square of the blocked and polished floor. Overhead in the heavy chandelier of ormolu and crystal the candles were guttering, caught by the draught from one of the long French windows which his lordship had just opened. In the gap he stood, gazing out into the chill gray dawn and the wraiths of mist that hung above the park.

By the carved overmantel, his shoulders to the shelf and the ormolu timepiece, which marked now the hour of three, stood Lord Pauncefort's only lingering and most important guest. He was a man of rather more than middle height, slender as a rapier is slender, of a steely, supple strength. He was simply yet very elegantly dressed in black, relieved only by the silver embroidery on his stockings, the paste buckles that flashed upon his lacquered, red heeled shoes, and the lace at his throat, among which a great sapphire glowed with somber fire. Enough remained, however, in his erect carriage, his Steinkirk, the clubbing of his hair, and the bronze of his face to advertise the soldier.

His keen blue eyes were upon the figure of his host, and in them was reflected the faint smile that softened the somewhat hard lines of his mouth. Yet the smile was scornful—of his host and of the night that was spent; scornful and something sad.

Was it, he mused, upon such as these that his king and master relied in his dire need? Was it to gain such support as my Lord Pauncefort and his precious friends could offer to that desperate cause that he, himself, had ventured once more into England where a thousand guineas was being offered for his head?

The play, he reflected contemptuously, they had urged as a wise measure of precaution: let them do their plotting about a faro table, had been their plea; thus should they pass for a parcel of idle gamesters, and none could dream that the game was a pretense, a mere mask upon their real business. Thus had they deluded themselves, but not him. He had seen, and knew, that the plotting was the pretense, the play the business. And what play! A gamester all his life, a man who had beggared himself a score of times in twenty different lands, never had he known such stakes as those which had been laid that night, never had he seen such sums change hands across the green baize of a card table.

He checked the contemptuous current of his thoughts to reflect that he himself had plunged as headlong as the most reckless of them into the game that was afoot. Had he not won a fortune 'twixt the commencement and the abandoning of that monstrous play? His winnings amounted to something over ten thousand guineas, and at no one time in his vagrant, adventureous life had he been master of half that sum. Yet it did not follow that he was quite as they. If he had risked that night certain moneys that he scarce dared call his own, so did he hesitate to call his own the vast sum which he had won.

Ten thousand guineas! Ten times the value set by the government upon his own poor head, he reflected whimsically.

And then Lord Pauncefort turned from the window and the sight of his lordship's livid, distorted countenance drove all other considerations from his guest's mind, brought a sudden cry of concern from his lips.

"My lord, you are ill!"

His lordship made a gesture of denial. "It—it is not that," he said, and his voice was husky with emotion.

He was a man of some thirty years of age, of a swarthy male beauty that was almost arresting. His large eyes were dark and liquid, his mouth delicately limned, his nose intrepidly arched, with fine sensitive nostrils. But the brow was alarmingly shallow and there was a cleft in the square—the too square—chin. He stood now, dabbing his moist brow with a flimsy kerchief that was not whiter than the hand that held it

"Captain Gaynor," he explained, abruptly, almost fiercely, "I am a broken man. I have ruined myself this night."

There was scarce one of the departed guests, Captain Gaynor bethought him, who had not left that house a winner, and in all his lordship's losses must amount to almost twice the sum of the captain's winnings.

None the less, his lordship's outcry jarred upon the captain's nice sensibilities. Such an admission made to one who was a heavy winner—and that one none so intimately admitted to his lordship's private confidences, when all was said—seemed to Captain Gaynor an outrage on decorum. He held that the man who cannot lose with calm and grace, no matter what the game or what the stakes—even though it should be life itself—has not the right to enter into play. And this was no abstract creed. It was the one by which the captain lived.

THE sight of the stricken man before him moved him to no pity. Rather it inspired in him a contempt that amounted almost to physical ill being, to disgust. His immediate impulse was to take his leave. If, indeed, he had lingered at all after the departure of his fellow guests, it had been in the hope that my Lord Pauncefort might yet have something for his private ear concerning the real business that had brought him to England and to that house. And perceiving now how idle had been this hope, observing his host's suddenly altered condition, Captain Gaynor's inclination was to depart.

But he reflected that to depart abruptly after that confession might be to offend. On his own account this would have troubled the captain not at all. But for the cause's sake, and for the sake of the service it might be Pauncefort's to render to that cause, he did not wish to give offense to his host if it might be avoided. He was in a quandary, and vexed thereby; for quandaries were not usual in the life of this man who lived by swift decisions and swift action.

He shifted uneasily where he stood, and his face assumed a mask of polite concern. His lordship had sunk into the nearest chair, like a man wearied to

The GATES of DOOM

The Tribune presents to its readers today a never-before-published novel by the author of "Scaramouche," "The Sea Hawk," and "Captain Blood." Sabatini's inimitable style and genius for producing novels of adventure and romance assures Tribune readers an unusual treat in "The GATES of DOOM."

exhaustion. There was a wildness in his eyes, and he continued nervously to dab his brow—that brow whose shallowness belied the general nobility of his countenance.

“You think, maybe, that I exaggerate,” he resumed presently. “But I tell you, sir, that I have played the knave this night. I have lost four thousand guineas to Martindale, another two to Bagshot, and I have lost my honor too, for I have forfeited all chance of ever being able to pay those losses.”

The concern in the captain's face appeared to deepen.

“They are your friends,” he said slowly. “Surely they will be glad to wait upon your convenience.” In his own breast pocket rested his lordship's draft upon his bankers for the eight thousand and odd guineas he had lost to the captain.

“My convenience?” cried Pauncefort, and his white face writhed in a spasm of mocking laughter. “I tell you, man, that in all the world I cannot claim ten guineas for my own. You are a gamester, Captain Gaynor?” he ended between question and assertion.

“So rumor says of me—I confess with justice,” the captain admitted, and the faintest of ironic smiles quivered on his firm lips. “I am engaged at present in a game wherein I have staked my head. Has your lordship ever played as deep as that?”

“Ay, have I. Do I not tell you, man, that I have staked my honor; and honor, surely, is more than life.”

“So I have heard say,” answered Captain Gaynor, like a skeptic.

He had little comfort for his host, little encouragement for the confidences that Pauncefort insisted upon thrusting on him. Indeed, it was his deliberate aim to stifle them. He desired them not. Although his acquaintance with Lord Pauncefort was considerable, it was not an acquaintance that had ever ripened, or promised to ripen, into friendship. The link that bound them was their common devotion to the Stuart cause, whose agent Captain Gaynor was. Beyond that they had no common interest, although, when all is said, that might be accounted interest enough to bind two men at such a time.

BUT, despite the captain's chill aloofness, his lordship was not to be repressed. In the nature of this man of so strong and noble seeming a countenance there was a strain of weakness almost feminine. He was of those who must forever be proclaiming griefs and grievances, finding it impossible to bear in silence and in dignity the burden of their woes. He was of those who in their trouble must forever be confiding in the hope of lessening their oppression. Moreover, he had at present another motive for his confidence: a faint hope that it might bear him fruit, as you shall see.

“Listen,” he said, and upon the heels of that exhortation swiftly poured out the tale of his condition. “I was broke six months ago, when the South-Sea bubble was pricked. I gambled heavily in the stock and, like many another, woke one morning to find that a fortune had melted in my hands. This rascally Whig government——” He was beginning upon a side issue, when he broke off abruptly to return to his main theme. “To buy that stock I raised heavy mortgages. I raised still more to clear myself after that cataclysm, and I mortgaged what was left to recoup my losses. Instead—— But there! Tonight I played for my immediate needs. I played to twice the extent of the losses I could meet, and in that I played the knave. But my need was very urgent, captain. Now—it is over.” He dabbed his brow again. His voice grew calmer with the dead calm of despair. “If I have the courage to be alive by noon tomorrow, the spunging house awaits me.” He shivered in his splendid garments, and the jeweled buttons of his salmon colored waistcoat twinkled roguishly as if conscious of the irony of their presence in the apparel of a pauper.

Captain Gaynor stood considering a moment, the expression—the mask—of studied concern upon his face, increasing contempt and disgust in his heart.

Was it upon such men as this that his master counted? And he recalled the eulogistic words in which his prince had spoken of this adherent.

“Pauncefort is powerful and loyal,” he had said. “He is ours body and soul and to the last penny of his fortunes.”

That was the dream of that august man of dreams. Here, confronting Captain Gaynor, was the reality—a broken gamester who whimpered over his losses.

“Surely, surely,” said the soldier slowly, “there is one thing you have forgot.”

Pauncefort looked up quickly, his black brows contracting. “If it be aught I can raise money upon, in God's name tell it me quickly,” said he, with a wry smile.

“I think it is,” replied the captain. “You have forgot Miss Hollinstone.”

The contraction of his lordship's brows grew heavier still, and the fine countenance assumed a something of haughtiness and of challenge. Undeterred, Captain Gaynor proceeded to make plain his meaning.

“Your betrothal to Damaris Hollinstone is known to all the world, just as it is also known that she is the wealthiest heiress in England, mistress of a fortune that is colossal. Surely, sir, with such a prospect before you, your creditors——”

He was interrupted by a sharp laugh.

“You have had no dealings, sir, with the tribe of Judah. That is plain,” said his lordship bitterly. “O, be very sure that I have attempted it—to be met with veiled derision and open insolence. You do not know the Jew. You do not know the hatred of the Christian that underlies his dealings, the vampire spirit that actuates him. Shakespeare, sir, knew his nature when he limned his Shylock.”

“Perhaps,” suggested Captain Gaynor, “the Christian has deserved no better at his hands.”

IT was a point of view so revolutionary, so subversive of all the notions upon which Lord Pauncefort had been bred, that for a moment it drove every other consideration from his mind, leaving his face blank with astonishment. But his own affairs swept back upon him in an instant to turn him from any disputing upon so wild a matter.

“You are a gamester, Captain Gaynor, and all gamesters are prone to come to such a state as mine tonight. Let me give—it is all that remains me to bestow on any one—a piece of advice upon the subtle art of raising money. See to it ever in such affairs that betimes you raise at least twice as much as you can ever repay out of your own resources. Then your creditors, for their own purses' sakes, will afford you every opportunity; they will handle you tenderly; they will nurse you with care; they will watch over you as never mother watched her babe at its first steps.

“Had I but had such advice given me and acted upon it, I should not be in such case as this in which you find me. Money would have flowed freely to my hands upon the prospect of my marriage, because upon the consummation of that would have depended my creditors' reimbursement. As it is, sir, I have fallen into the error of borrowing no more than my estates can bear.

“The chief of my creditors is a Spanish Jew, one Israel Suarez, an evil rogue of fabulous wealth and destitute of mercy; one who seems to draw a satanic joy from the torturing and breaking of such men as I. I tell you, Capt. Gaynor, I have abased myself to plead with him. I have besought him in terms I cannot recall without shame that if he will not concede me a loan upon my marriage prospects, at least to postpone his demand for settlement of my present debts until my marriage shall have taken place.

“My intercessions have been met with the sneers and insolent jests of this usurious dog. He holds my mortgages for everything that is not in the entail. That almost covers my debt to him. The balance he will recover from the interest on the entailed estates what time I am rotting in a debtors' gaol. Frankly he tells me this—that since he can retrieve his own he will run no risks. And so, tomorrow——” He spread his hands, shrugged, and sank back scowling again into his chair.

Capt. Gaynor understood, but he answered nothing. What answer could he make? He looked towards the windows, which were glowing now like moonstones in the increasing light. Again he thought of going, and vaguely he wondered why Lord Pauncefort should have chosen him for these confidences. He conceived that it was fortuitous—the result of his having lingered after the others had departed. But in his lordship's next words he had the correct answer to his unspoken question.

“Had I refrained tonight,” his lordship was saying presently in a small, unsteady voice, his fingers plucking nervously at a card which he had picked up from the floor, “all might yet have been well. By meeting a bill that is due tomorrow I might temporarily have satisfied the demands of that foul vulture, Suarez. I should have gained time, and with time salvation might have come. I have sunk money in a trading venture which may yet repay me. But for this, time is needed; time and—and the money I have lost tonight. I held it in readiness for this, but the cursed cards——”

He broke off with a bitter oath. But he had said enough. It would have been impossible to have asked more plainly for the help that it was in Gaynor's power to render him.

THE captain understood at last the reason of these confidences. Understanding brought with it some pity and more contempt. I fear me his nature was a little hard. He spoke out plainly, his voice crisp.

“You are inviting me, my lord, to return you this,” he said, and from his breast pocket he took Lord Pauncefort's draft upon his bankers.

He was, as I have said, a man of swift decisions, and here he had decidedly swiftly but not at all as his host conceived.

Pauncefort threw back his head under the goad of that voice. It seemed to him that it conveyed a deadly insult. For all that the matter was true enough; the manner could not, he thought, have been more outrageous.

“Sir!” said he, with a frosty dignity, and upon the word he rose, frowning darkly. “Sir, you affront me.”

“Forgive me,” answered the soldier gently. “Such was not my intent.” He replaced the draft in his pocket. “And yet,” he sighed, “I conceived I saw a way to assist you.”

The unexpectedness of this withdrawal scattered his lordship's fine dignity to the murmuring winds of dawn. His jaw dropped in sheer astonishment; his eyes stared foolishly; the card he had held fluttered from his nerveless fingers. He leaned against the table and looked at his guest.

“Perhaps,” he said, faltering on the word, “perhaps my refusal was churlish.”

“I understand it,” said Gaynor quietly. But be his imperturbable mask he was laughing at his lords

“How?” quoth his lordship, flung back once upon his dignity.

“Faith,” said the captain, “you'll agree, I th

“I—I, had not considered that,” his lordship

“I do not understand.”

“Pray consider further. I am a gamester, as y the odds that are in your favor.”

He spoke quietly, his face so calm, his glance steady, that none might have suspected the exc

length——

“I have talked in vain, it seems,” said he. “Y
I have told you plainly that I cannot claim so m as ten guineas for my own. What, then, have I

“Something that is hardly yours,” came the ge answer, “and something which, if I win from you, shall yet have to win another way and may altoge

the odds are all with you. It cannot be said th

“I do not understand you,” said his lordship blun
“What stake have you in mind?”

There was a perceptible pause before the sold answered him. He squared his shoulders; his fa became set and stern; his glance flickered a mom to the windows and the dawn, which, from the pal of the moonstone, was warming now to opalesc fires. Then his eyes returned to Lord Pauncefort impatient, questioning face.

“Damaris Hollinstone,” he said quietly.

LORD PAUNCEFORT fell back a pace, as if befo a blow. The reflections of a surge of feelings fro astonishment through contempt to positive anger s across his heavily featured face. He leaned agai the card table and surveyed his guest with eyes th

Captain Gaynor, cool, erect, with something of de its heels the sneering words:

“Blister me! You play strange games, Captai

“It is true,” Gaynor admitted, “and,” he adde

“Fore gad, yes!” the other exploded in a storm contempt. “I am glad ye have the grace to admit it

The Union Suit

"Heah's me," he announced. "Is you?" she asked, somewhat uncordially.

AND so the prodigal husband returned. He did it with jaunty confidence, and if there was a slight absence of warmth in the welcome vouchsafed him by Mrs. Jonquil Beek, the deficiency did not penetrate his armor of self-esteem.

He reëstablished himself casually—and at breakfast time. Jonquil heard the front door open. She turned to gaze into the smiling countenance of her spouse. As he stood in the doorway there was an air of smug complacency about him which engendered a surge of annoyance in the bosom of Mrs. Beek, but at the same time she mentally confessed that he was not unpleasing to the eye.

Jasper was a large man, symmetrically formed. At the present time he was well groomed, and if there were patches on the southernmost portion of his trousers, they were not visible to the comely young colored woman who stood regarding him through the haze of smoke which hovered appetizingly above the kitchen range. Nor did he permit the nature of his business to remain long in doubt.

"Heah's me," he announced.

She did not immediately bid him welcome. "Is you?" she asked, somewhat uncordially.

"I is."

She transferred a fried egg from the skillet to her plate, and dexterously surmounted it with a sizzling strip of juicy bacon. "You ain't aimin' to bum a breakfas' offen me, is you, Jasper?"

"Well—kinder. An' also dinner an' supper an' breakfas' tomorrow an' et cetery. I has returned home fo' keeps.'

"Keeps which?"

He injected the full power of an undeniably appealing personality into the sunny smile he bestowed upon her. "Sugarfoot," he suggested, "they ain't no sense of us gittin' divorced away fum each other."

"Hmph! Tha's what you says."

"Is they?"

"No sense in us stayin' ma'ied, is they?"

"Shuh! Always you gits pestimistic. I reckon the best thing us can do is to forgit we ever was foolish enough to staht a divorce—an' live happy ever after." He tossed his hat on the lounge, pulled a chair up to the table, and sat down. "An' now—le's eat."

Jonquil scrutinized her husband closely. He didn't appear seedy, but there was no denying the presence of a hungry look in his eye. The glance he directed toward the bacon was fraught with profound yearning. Mrs. Beek said something—and she said it most pointedly.

"You cut yo'se'f a slice of bacon," she invited coolly. "You useter could broil it real good."

RELUCTANTLY and impatiently Jasper arose and plunged into the cook's job. A few minutes later he returned to the table bearing a plate containing several slices of freshly broiled bacon and two pieces of bread which had been fried in the bacon grease. He attacked the meal with gusto, washing each mouthful down with draughts of steaming coffee, and whilst he ate, his wife regarded him through half closed eyes. Finally she spoke.

"An' now that you has ate yo' breakfas'—what do you crave?"

He looked up with well simulated guilelessness: "Want? Me?" He shrugged. "Nothin'."

"Tha's prezac'ly what you is gwine git."

"Now, honey, they ain't no use of you keepin' on bein' sore."

"Huh! Burnt dog never strikes twice in the same place, Jasper."

"Who's burnt?"

"I is."

"How come?"

"You know good an' well how come. You know you done me wrong; always has, since us gotten ma'ied the fust time. Then you goes an' wins a heap of money down to the Pool an' Ginuwine lott'ry an' you leaves me. Next thing I heahs fum you, you is aimin' to git a divorce."

"I was awful foolish in the head that day, Jonquil."

"You wa'n't so foolish that you forgot to work it so I would pay the fust fifty dollars on the divorce."

"Well—you said you was just as glad to git divorced away fum me as I was fum you."

"Yeh, an' I ain't so shuah I has changed my mind any since then, neither."

Jasper produced a battered packet of cigarets. From this he extracted one which he lighted. He threw back his head, puffed deeply, and exhaled three beautiful smoke rings which he gazed upon fondly. Jonquil's lips curled into a faint sneer.

"That," she remarked acridly, designating the smoke rings, "is the most work I ever seen you do."

Jasper smiled genially. "Gal! Ise just fixin' to staht to work."

"Who?"

"Ev'ybody. I an' you is gwine be partners; tha's how come I to return home. I has got a good scheme all schum out."

"All you lacks is the cash money, huh?"

"Well, Peaches——"

"On yo' way, cullud boy. I ain't got ary dime. Las' money I had was that fifty dollars I paid Lawyer Carter to staht our divorce fo' us."

"THA'S jus' ezac'ly it!" Jasper struck a triumphant attitude. "Ain't no use spendin' that fifty dollars when us needs it fo' other things, an' ain't gwine git a divorce nohow."

"Who says we ain't?"

"We ain't, is we?"

"I ain't said we ain't."

"Well——" desperately—"is we ain't or ain't we is?"

"That all depen's. What you want that fifty dollars fo'?"

Jasper waxed loquacious. He spoke swiftly and tensely and earnestly. There was a sandwich concession in an Eighteenth street poolroom which he could swing for fifty dollars. According to the facts as he gave them, it was certain of netting not less than a thousand per cent profit. The only trouble, he explained glibly, was the lack of fifty dollars. He was at the moment financially embarrassed.

"Huh! Way you been swellin' aroun' Bud Peaglar's place, you wa'n't so broke."

He grimaced with distaste. "Don't never mention that place to me again, sweetness."

"Why not?"

"'Cause it ain't no good an' it's gittin' mo' so ev'y day."

Jonquil knew the man. "Who won all yo' money playin' pool?"

"Florian Slappey."

"Serves you right fo' thinkin' you could beat that shark. Ain't I hearn you say lots of time he was a wizzid?"

"Yeh—but."

"But you is broke, an' you wants fifty dollars cash money an' so you returns back to the wife of yo' bosom which you departed away fum th'ee weeks ago. Reckon they ain't nothin' doin', Jasper. You is entirely too gay an' festival fo' a hard workin' gal like me."

Jasper frowned slightly. This was something which he had not anticipated. But he needed that fifty dollars, and he thereupon proceeded to unleash the full force of his latent histrionic ability. He made it quite clear to Jonquil that she was the single person in the world essential to his utter happiness; that without her there just wasn't no cosmic scheme worth the name; that his recent vacation from the marital roof had awakened in him keen realization of her wifely worthwhileness.

Mr. Beek was a persuasive orator, and Jonquil was merely a woman. Here was Jasper in a new rôle; his insufferable conceit submerged, his manner humble. And so, not entirely without premonition, she agreed that he might stick around awhile. Immediately his face brightened and he touched once again on the matter of the fifty dollars which had been paid by Jonquil on a one hundred dollar divorce.

"Us travels down to the Penny Prudential Bank buildin' an' gits Lawyer Carter to give us back them fifty dollars. Le's go."

Jonquil hesitated, but only for a moment. It was possible Jasper had determined to err no more. And, after all, he was her husband and she had agreed he could continue to be. Therefore it was downright foolish to permit Lawyer Carter to retain the fifty dollar installment on a divorce which was no longer desired.

TOGETHER they left the house and turned northward toward the welter of activity which marks Birmingham's civic center. They walked swiftly, crossed the L. & N. tracks, and found themselves in the heart of Birmingham's Darktown. They attained the lobby of the Penny Prudential, from whence they were whisked to the seventh floor. Within five minutes they were in the private office of Lawyer Pistach Carter.

Lawyer Carter was an impressive figure. He was about of a size with Jasper, but his demeanor was thoughtful where that of the husband was carefree. The attorney gazed curiously upon them. Jasper assumed the spokesmanship.

"Lawyer Carter," he announced, "I an' Jonquil has decided unanimous that we don't crave no divorce."

"Hmm," murmured Pistach judicially, his eye roving to Jonquil's face. "Does our mutual friend state the case correc'ly, Mis' Beek?"

Jonquil nodded. "Reckon so."

"Ain't you shuah?"

"Uh-huh. Guess I am. Reckon was I foolish enough to ma'y him in the fust place, 'taint gwine make things so much wuss to stay ma'ied a while longer."

"Attagal!" enthused Jasper. "She sho' is tootin' now, ain't she, Lawyer Carter?"

"I don't know nothin' 'bout her toot," responded the attorney with dignity. "An' as fo' her reconsiderment 'bout this heah divorce, tha's a matter betwix you an' her."

"An' you," stated Jasper significantly.

"Says which?"

"An' you also."

"How come I is in on it?"

"Ain't you in the divocin' business?"

"I is you-all's counsellor, if tha's what you mean."

"Hmm! Also you is our banker. You has got that fifty dollars us paid you."

A light of understanding dawned on the colorado-claro face of the lawyer. "You says words, Mistuh Beek, but they don't mean nothin'. I ain't got ary cent which ain't mine."

"Aw! G'wan! Di'n't us pay you fifty dollars down on a one hund'ed dollar divorce?"

"Yeh."

"An' is we gwine git the divorce?"

"You says not."

"Then how come us not to git the fifty dollars back?"

LAWYER CARTER did not care for his male client's manner and the lean face hardened. "You forgets, Mistuh Beek, the lawin' labor I has already committed. Di'n't we take all the testimony befo' the commissioner an' di'n't I do a lot of work preparin' the pleadin's an' such? Ain't that wuth somethin'?"

Jasper glowered. "No. Divorce is wuth one hund'ed dollars. Half a divorce ain't wuth nothin'. Gimme them fifty."

"I shall do nothin' of the kind," proclaimed Pistach quietly.

Across the room the two men stared at one another; between them flamed open hostility. Jonquil, looking first at one and then at the other, found her sympathies unaccountably with the lawyer.

"Lawyer Carter is right, Jasper," she said softly. "'Tain't his lookout that I an' you has made up."

"It ain't!" howled Jasper. "What you talks with yo' mouf, Jonquil Beek, is foolishment. This heah feller has got fifty dollars of our'n an' I is gwine see that he gives it back."

Pistach Carter moved suggestively around his desk. He looked large and formidable. "You ain't cravin' to take it out of my hide is you, Brother Beek?" he inquired sweetly.

Jasper eyed the man speculatively. Lawyer Carter was entirely too eager for physical combat to suit the divorce suit defendant. "I ain't said nothin' 'bout takin' it out of yo' hide, has I?"

"N-o-o. An' you better had not, 'cause I studied once to be a butcher an' I'se terrible handy with carvin' tools."

"But I craves that fifty dollars."

"Reckon they is a heap of other things you want which you ain't gwine git. On'y way you procures that fifty back is in trade."

"Trade?"

"Uh-huh. Mis' Beek paid me them fifty. You 'lowed you was gwine git me the other fifty. When you does, I gives you the divorce. Does you not do so you not on'y ain't got nothin', but you possesses fifty dollars less than that."

Jasper argued; he begged and pleaded and cajoled, but he could not budge the man of law. And eventually, decidedly disgruntled, Mr. Jasper Beek departed the lawyer's office in the company of his semi-divorced wife.

Jasper was distinctly unhappy. The trend of events did not at all dovetail with the scheme which obsessed him at the moment. Plus fifty dollars, Jonquil was perhaps worth keeping—temporarily at least. Minus the fifty, she wasn't nearly so delectable. And he knew that Lawyer Carter was not susceptible to argument; that gentleman owned fifty dollars which he intended to keep. The more Jasper reflected upon that the angrier he became. It appeared to him that Pistach Carter had received something for nothing. One hundred dollars for a divorce was all right; fifty dollars for no divorce seemed unreasonable.

JONQUIL walked at her husband's side. She, too, was busy with her thoughts, although the situation did not displease her as vastly as it did Jasper. A great deal of his enthusiasm for the resumption of the marital status appeared to have fled. She wondered what he was thinking, and finally she learned.

"Jonquil," he said, thoughtfully, "us is too poor to th'ow away fifty dollars."

"Yeh."

"An' Lawyer Carter says he ain't gwine give us back what we has paid. You reckon he means it?"

"Uh-huh."

"In other words, we has paid a heap of money an' we ain't got nothin' to show fo' it."

"'Cept each other."

"Shuh!" The exclamation indicated clearly to Jonquil that her husband considered this poor return for a fifty dollar investment. "We had that all the time. An' neither I don't like Lawyer Carter. I craves to put one over on him."

"How?"

"He thinks we is gwine let him keep that fifty dollars 'thout him doin' no work."

"You reckon?"

"Uh-huh. An' it's wuth fifty dollars fo' me to show him I ain't the kind of a man he can put somethin' over on."

She glanced at him from the corners of her eyes. "What you aims to do, Jasper?"

"Just this"—Jasper had the grace not to meet his wife's scrutiny—"seems like the on'y way us can git our money's worth is by goin' th'oo with the divorce."

"But you said this mawnin' you di'n't want no divorce."

"This mawnin'! That ain't now."

"You said you loved me an' aimed to git to be my husban' again."

"Dawg-gone it! That was this mawnin', wasn't it?"

"An' you has changed up?"

"Yeh."

"How come?"

"I craves to git even with Lawyer Carter. He's got me sore, an' when I gits sore, I gits sore all over. I say le's go ahead with the divorce."

Jonquil was silent as she reflected upon the matter. She was beginning to see light and the light was neither complimentary to her nor unwelcome. After all, Jasper was a pretty good husband not to have.

"So-o," she murmured, "what you wanted all the time wasn't me—it was that fifty dollars."

"Who says?"

"I does. Come you to find out you cain't git the fifty, you craves to go ahead with the divorce. Well, I asks you, where at is you gwine git the extra fifty dollars to pay Lawyer Carter fo' that divorce? His price was one hund'ed."

Jasper nodded sullenly. "Reckon I c'n git a hund'ed dollars if I c'n git fifty. An' I has got to git fifty or that suit goes back to Chicago."

Jonquil stopped short. One competently muscular hand went out and she spun her husband around so that their eyes met.

"What suit?" she snapped.

"M-m-my suit."

"What suit is you got besides a divorce suit?"

"Nemmin'. Reckon I c'n git me a suit if I wants."

Jonquil was commencing to understand several things which until now had been considerably beclouded.

"Where at is that poolroom you was gwine git the san'wich concession at fo' fifty dollars?"

"Tha's my business."

"Where at?" she repeated ominously.

EVER since the beginning of the interview with Lawyer Carter, Jasper's anger had been tumescing. And now it boiled over. A heavy sneer decorated his countenance and he spoke well, but not wisely.

"Nowhere," he blurted. "What you reckon I was willin' to come back an' be yo' husban' fo'? Don't you know you ain't no kind of a gal to hol' a wil' man like me? Ain't you got no sense a tall? Why, hot dam! They is heaps of live wimmin just rarin' to have me hangin' aroun'. What I come to you fo' was fifty dollars. An' tha's all. You ast fo' the truth—now there 'tis. An' I says to you what is you gwine do about it?"

"Nothin' now. Now, 'bout that suit you was mentionin'."

"Tha's my tuxedo."

"Whiches tuxedo?"

"Mine. I had mo' than a hund'ed dollars which I won down to the lott'ry, an' I sent off fifty dollars fo' payment on a tuxedo outfit. It was awful cheap—coat, pants, vest, shirt, collar, tie an' monical. Then Florian Slappey gotten me in that pool game an' skun me out of ev'ything I had—an' yestiddy the espress office tol' me they had my suit fum Chicago with fifty dollars C. O. D."

"An' so," she said softly, "you come back to be my husban' jus' long enough fo' us to git that fifty so you could take yo' suit out of the espress office! Hmm! What was you gwine do then?"

"Wear it!" belligerently. "A gemmun like I ought to have dinner clothes."

"Yeh, I reckon so. They would look awful good on yo' cawpse, too."

"An' tha's that," he snapped. "I an' you is finished. If'n you ain't wuth fifty dollars cash money to me, you ain't wuth nothin'. An' what busts my heart is that doesn't I take that suit out of the espress office in the next few days it goes back to Chicago an' I not on'y loses the suit but also the fifty dollars I has paid down on it. Listen"—his manner suddenly became pleading again—"ain't you got fifty dollars you c'n loaned me fo' a few days?"

The sheer effrontery of the man took her back for a moment. Then her face flamed a vivid lavender. "Goodness goshness Miss Agnes! cullud man—nerve is suttinly the one thing you ain't got nothin' else but. Don't you know that did I have fifty dollars I wouldn't spen it fo' no suit of dinner clothes to put on yo' figger? Trouble with you is that you is too uppity a'ready."

They walked southward in silence, but both were busy with personal thoughts. In the mind of Jasper was a great yearning for the tuxedo outfit, and Jonquil was telling herself fervently that this brief return to the matrimonial state was positively her last adventure with Jasper.

In fact, the more she thought of it, the more convinced she became that she had been a fool to marry him in the first place, a still bigger one to respond to his overtures that morning, and she had no intention whatsoever of permitting him to use her any further.

On the other hand, she was opposed to the idea of defraying the entire divorce expense. At the same time she wanted the divorce now more than ever. And there was another fifty dollars due Lawyer Carter. It wasn't that one hundred dollars was more than she was willing to spend for freedom from the perfidious Jasper—but she rebelled at the idea that the separation should cost him nothing.

AND then an idea came to her. She smiled benignly upon her husband.

"Jasper," she announced, "us goes by the bank."

"Fo' which?" he asked suspiciously.

"I aims to draw fifty dollars out of my savin's account."

Hope dawned in his eyes — hope and suspicion. "Whaffo' you draws out fifty dollars?"

"So as I c'n go down to the espress office an' git yo' tuxedo suit."

He clutched her arm. "Honeybunch—you ain't triflin' with me, is you?"

"Nossuh."

"You really means you is gwine git my tuxedo out of the espress office?"

"Uh-huh."

"Aw."

But further than that she said nothing. She stopped by their once happy home where she secured her bank book, and he trailed her downtown to the Birmingham Trust where she received fifty dollars in exchange for her check.

At the express office he secured the coveted box containing his tuxedo suit. And there, for the first time, Jonquil made a definite move which gave him some slight indication of the wind's direction. She firmly took the box from him and hugged it to her bosom. He stretched out a pleading hand for it, but she ignored the gesture.

"Ain't you gwine gimme, Jonquil?"

"Uh-huh."

"When?"

"Not yet."

"Ise willin'——"

"I know you is willin'—tha's why I is doin' what I is. Come along with me."

Dazedly he followed, one pace to the rear. His conversation had been superseded by a disturbing uncertainty; no longer did he doubt that things were not what they seemed. He knew it. He shook his head slowly. "Seems like I don't quite understan' all I knows about this," he told himself. "Jonquil sho' is pullin' some funny fumadiddles now."

NOR did he receive any measure of enlightenment when she led him again to the Penny Prudential Bank building and the offices of Lawyer Pistach Carter. Fortunately Pistach was unengaged at the moment, and his eye gleamed appreciatively at his second glimpse of the pulchritudinous Jonquil Beek.

Jonquil came straight to the point. In no uncertain terms she expressed her present opinion of Jasper and made it quite clear to Lawyer Carter that the one thing which meant most to her in the world was a divorce from that gentleman.

"I wants it quick," she announced, "an' I wants it complete."

"That is very easily arranged, Mis' Beek." Pistach spoke suavely. "A mere matter of fifty dollars."

Jonquil slammed the big box on Lawyer Carter's desk. "There's yo' fifty dollars!"

Jasper emitted a howl and leaped forward, but Jonquil pulled at his arm and Pistach stepped protectively between Jasper and the outfit.

"That's my suit," wailed Jasper. "My ve'y own pants an' coat."

"Exac'ly." Jonquil was speaking again in a flat, expressionless voice. There was no mistaking her grim countenance. "In that there box, Lawyer Carter, is the fondest thing Jasper is of in this world. Fo' that he is willin' to lie to me an' Lawsy knows what else. Right, he craves that suit an' I craves a divorce away fum him. You keep that suit until Jasper comes to you with one hund'ed dollars. Tha's fifty fo' his half of the divorce an' fifty fo' the suit. Minute he pays that hund'ed dollars he gits the suit—an' not one minute befo'. Is that salisfractory?"

Lawyer Carter explained unctuously that it was highly satisfactory to him, but Jasper's misery was unrelieved. "Where at is I gwine git me a hund'ed dollars?" he wailed. "Just answer me that, will you?"

Jonquil shrugged. "Go fool some other woman like you done me. Reckon you has got a heap of lady friends which would loaned you money. I reckon you want that suit 'bout as much as I craves to git shet of you, so the sooner you gits you a job of work an' earns them hund'ed dollars the quicker bofe of us is gwine be happy."

They departed; Jonquil more or less satisfied with the misery she had caused her miscreant spouse, and Jasper wallowing in the nadir of despair. And meanwhile, Lawyer Pistach Carter gazed intensively at the door through which Jonquil had disappeared. The bachelor heart of Lawyer Carter was touched.

"Some gal!" he murmured softly. "Ain't no sense of a man livin' alone c'n he git him a woman which has got the common sense Mis' Beek has got. Reckon she's a wife mos' any man would be glad to have proud of him."

As for Jasper, that individual gloomed around Darktown, pondering on ways and means for raising the money for his tuxedo. The more he pondered the more certain he became that Jonquil had been unreasonable. As he saw it, she was eventually due to be out of pocket one hundred dollars, the fifty paid Lawyer Carter plus fifty she had advanced on the suit. By evening he convinced himself he was a sadly abused young man, but that did not get him one nickel nearer the coveted clothes.

Nor did the day following present a method of escape from his dilemma. He needed one hundred dollars and he saw no prospect of getting it. Work was out of the question—but he found on investigation that his credit was severely limited. There were a few friends who were willing to trust him two bits' worth, but Jasper figured unhappily that it took entirely too many quarters to make one hundred dollars. The only solution he could see was work and Jasper was no more fond of work than a baby is of toothache.

But he wanted that tuxedo. He visioned himself in its austere embrace—a mahogany symphony of masculine elegance. "F'rall I know, I could ma'y me a rich widder quick did I have that suit."

He paid a despairing visit to the office of Pistach Carter. Mr. Carter was adamantine; Jasper could have clothes and divorce when he produced one hundred dollars and not one day before, and Lawyer Carter took occasion to express in no uncertain terms his opinion of Jasper Meek—"treatin' a good lookin' gal the way you done Miss Jonquil."

"Treatin' a which?"

"A good lookin' gal."

"Who says good lookin'?"

"I does."

"You is crazy in the head. Jonquil ain't good lookin'."

"Hush yo' mouf, Mistuh Beek. I ain't gwine 'low no man to straduce Mis' Beek in my presence."

"Huh!" warmly. "If'n a man cain't straduce his own wife, whose wife c'n he straduce?"

They parted warm enemies. Lawyer Carter was exceedingly peeved at the thought that any man could be so colossally unobservant as to be unaware of the obvious excellencies of Jonquil; in fact, Pistach admitted to himself he was more than a trifle impressed by the fifty per cent wife of the recently departed gentleman.

THAT night Lawyer Carter took home with him for safe keeping the tuxedo outfit of which he was the bailee. Curiosity mastered him and he opened the box. The sight disclosed was quite impressive. In the mind's eye of Pistach there arose a picture of Jasper Beek; he reflected that he and Jasper were about of a size.

The good things of life had come slowly to Lawyer Carter. He was a young, earnest, hard working man, and he had always coveted the habiliments of formal gentility, wherefore the temptation proved too strong for him, and within five minutes he was partially denuded.

He tried on the tuxedo outfit. The effect was irresistibly magnificent. He gazed at his mirrored self and marveled.

"Hot dam!" he murmured. "What I has got is some class. I suttinly wish Jonquil could see me as it."

For a single wild moment he entertained the idea of calling upon Mrs. Beek clad in her husband's clothes, but he was overcome by a surge of timidity and reluctantly removed the valiant garments and settled himself for a two hour perusal of "Greenleaf on Evidence." But the thought persisted.

The following day Jasper Beek secured a job. It wasn't much of a job as jobs go, but it did guarantee him fifteen dollars a week so long as it lasted. "Dawg gone!" mused Jasper, "I never did crave to chaperon no ice."

The ice was heavy, the work hard, Jasper inexpert. Throughout the warm spring days he struggled with huge blocks of ice; climbing the never ending stairways of apartment houses, struggling half-heartedly up and down the terraces of South Highlands homes, and he knew that by rigid economy he could save about ten dollars a week. In ten weeks then, the tuxedo, the freedom of divorce, and the elegance of a peacock!

Meanwhile Pistach Carter found it necessary to consult with Jonquil on professional matters. Their friendship progressed rapidly to an intimacy. Jonquil suggested that he call upon her, and he eagerly accepted the suggestion.

During the afternoon he was in a ferment. He entertained a grave suspicion that his heart had been pierced by a particularly virulent dart from Cupid's bow, and his thoughts of matrimony were linked up somehow with the vivid Jonquil. He desired to impress her—and therefore he fell prey to temptation. That night he arrayed himself in the dinner garments of his lady's husband.

THERE was small doubt that the clothes became him even better than they would have suited Jasper. Pistach had an air—a regal manner—a calm grace, whereas Jasper was strutty. And Pistach wore spectacles.

Jonquil was amazed at his magnificence. It never occurred to her to suspect the clothes. All she knew was that a handsome professional man thought well enough of her to dress to the ultimate for an evening at her house.

They got along famously. Pistach told her much about himself and she confessed to him her anticipated loneliness. She was a home body, she claimed, but she would be everlastingly dawg goned if she'd ever support a man again. He agreed with her that supporting was not a woman's appointed task, and mentioned himself as a gentleman who believed it was a wife's bounden duty to permit a husband to provide for her. Before the evening ended she was calling him "Pistach" and he addressed her as "Jonquil," and he had agreed to call again two nights later. He had been engaged to deliver an address the following night at the weekly meeting of the Sons and Daughters of I Will Arise.

HENRY C. ROWLAND

In forty-eight hours he reappeared, and once again he was magniloquent in Jasper's dinner clothes. But the shirt and collar were freshly laundered and fairly shrieked their purity. Thereafter his dress visits were a regular occurrence, and he fell into the habit of bringing flowers and candy and once a book, which she accepted rather doubtfully.

Certainly no dusky damsel in Birmingham had ever before been courted so superbly. Here were all the social trimmings of the finest movies. The night that Jonquil greeted him in an evening gown was a red letter one for both; it stamped them once and for all as considerably better than the ordinary herd for whom sack suits and street dresses were adequate.

Occasionally they touched upon the subject of Jasper, and their opinions of that gentleman were amazingly unanimous.

"How come you ever to make ma'iage with that wuthless, good-fo'-nothin' hunk of secon'-han' tripe, Jonquil?"

"I dunno, Pistach. Reckon I was in a marryin' humor an' he just happened to come along."

The man sighed. "Ain't figgerin' on gittin' in a ma'yin' humor again right soon, is you?"

"Aw, Pistach!"

"I'se se'ious."

"You talks so sugary." She gazed through the window. "Wonder where at Jasper is now?"

Pistach's face darkened. "Whaffo' you all the time in mentionin' yo' husban'?"

"Just wonderin'."

"Wonderin' which?"

"How come him to ever love anything so much he would tote ice all day to git it. Honest, Pistach, that cullud man is the uselessest pusson I has ever met up with. He never does nothin' an' he does it all the time. I sho'ly is gwine be glad when I is rid of him."

"You mean that, Jonquil?"

"I don't mean nothin' else."

"What you aims to do once you is a single lady again?"

She smiled demurely. "Hush yo' mouf, Pistach."

"Reckon you is kinder sore on ma'iage, ain't you?"

"Yeh—with Jasper."

"I mean with somebody else."

"Name 'which?"

"Name '——" the young lawyer leaned forward earnestly, so earnestly that his shirt bosom creaked protestingly—"name' Pistach Carter."

She inbreathed audibly. He rose and crossed to her side.

"Sugarfoot."

"Don't call me that Pistach."

"Why not?"

"Jasper used to."

"O! Li'l honeysuckle."

"Tha's better."

"Le's I an' you git ma'ied."

"You mean it, Pistach?"

"Cross my heart an' hope to die."

"But—but I ain't divorced away fum Jasper yet."

"You soon is gwine be."

"How 'bout that other fifty dollars?"

"Ise willin' to give you that divorce fo' a weddin' present, Jonquil."

"Ain't you the thoughtfullest man. An' Jasper's clothes?"

"He gits them," sizzled the attorney, "when he pays me those hund'ed dollars. That'll leave him payin' the whole fifty dollars which the divorce is gwine cost."

"Mmm! An' you c'n git the divorce any time?"

"Uh-huh. All the testimony has done been took an' I was just waitin' to git the decree signed until I gotten my fee."

She snuggled her hand in his. "You git it, an' right away us becomes engaged."

Pistach trod upon air when he left her house and the following day he went through the formality of securing the judge's signature to the decree of divorce. Then he called upon Jonquil, presented her with a white gold engagement ring, and set their marriage date for the sixty-first day thereafter; the wedding being prohibited until after sixty days should have elapsed.

THANKS to the keenly observant eyes and double action tongue of Sis' Callie Flukers, news of the engagement became bruited around Darktown in short order and it came to the ears of Jasper via Ella Dungee who was cook in a fashionable Mountain terrace home. Jasper was at the moment engaged in fitting a hundred pound block of ice into a seventy-five pound icebox. Immediately he secured an hour's leave of absence; boarded a Lakeview street car, and twenty minutes later burst into the office of Pistach Carter.

"I heah you is engaged to my wife."

"You ain't got no wife."

"I mean the wife I useter have."

"If I is," snapped the lawyer, "tha's my business an' her'n."

"Well—I craves my tuxedo."

"An' I craves the hund'ed dollars you owe me."

"Fifty of that was fo' the las' half of the divorce."

"Cullud boy, you says lots of words but they don't mean nothin'. Way things stan' now Jonquil has got her divorce fum you but you ain't got yours fum her. Nor neither you ain't gwine git it until you pays me them hund'ed dollars."

And eventually the wedding day of Lawyer Pistach Carter and Mrs. Jonquil Beek arrived. By dint of excrutiating labor Jasper Beek had succeeded in raising ninety dollars of the required hundred, but he was teetotally unable to get the missing ten. He was thoroughly miserable for he had planned to attend the wedding of his ex-wife clad in his new regalia, causing thereby comparison between himself and the groom which he felt sure would be invidious to Pistach. Failing to procure the needed ten dollars, he shunned the ceremony.

It was a truly regal affair. The lodge rooms of The Sons & Daughters of I Will Arise were urgent with color—human and floral. The uniform drill team of that organization was present in full pomp and pageantry and it evoluted to the jazzy music of The Over the River Burying Society Symphony Band. Lawyer Evans Chew, dean of Darktown's legal fraternity, acted as best man and the acid tongued Mrs. Lustisha Atcherson gave the bride away.

Pistach was a striking figure in the tuxedo suit which belonged to the bride's ex-husband; he chuckled over the irony of the situation. His courtship had been conducted and culminated in the clothes which made irreparable the breach between Jonquil and Jasper. He wondered what Jasper would think and say should he learn the true facts.

But Jasper didn't learn, and that night the bridal couple boarded the train for a two day honeymoon in Montgomery.

When they returned, radiantly happy, society welcomed them eagerly. Life promised much hap-

INSTALLMENT XIII.

THERE were three Pullmans on the Folkestone train, and in one of them Paule found the private compartment at the end disengaged. He ordered refreshments and closed the door. By this time the train was gathering speed, thundering its way across the network of signal lights towards the open country.

"How much exactly do you know?" Paule asked.

"I was at Fakenham when you passed through this morning," Rodes confided. "I have spent quite a lot of time lately in those parts. I was there amongst the crowd, facing the incomprehensible, the ridiculous, the impossible, when I saw Lady Judith's expression as the car passed by. Then I knew that so far as my twenty thousand pounds was concerned I was home."

"Why have you waited then?" Paule demanded.

"Because I hate to be beaten. The twenty thousand pounds is offered for the discovery of Lord Honerton, his son Ernest, and his nephew Samuel. Well, there they all are, selling patent medicines under the name of 'Klask'—their own name, by the bye, before they changed it. I've found them, all right, but it's an incomplete job, and I hate incomplete jobs."

Paule was looking a little anxious.

"Have you spoken to them?" he inquired.

"I spoke to them this morning, after your car had passed," Rodes admitted. "I can tell you I didn't get much for my pains. They wouldn't listen to me—abused me, seemed to think I was out to rob them. They chattered at me like a pack of monkeys, swore they'd never heard of Honerton Chase or the name of Fernham, and either pretended to think or really did think that I wanted to get at their drug business. Anyway, they packed up and drove off. I didn't bother. I know where they live in Norwich."

"I am sorry you spoke to them," Paule said with a troubled frown. "It may make things more difficult. What else have you found out?"

"Just what I have already disclosed to you and Lady Judith. You were only the adopted son of John Paule, the schoolmaster, although you took his name and he was more than a father to you. You were the son of Cecil Fernham and Margaret Heggs. Cecil was murdered, the girl died when you were born, and her father was hanged. It was a stormy entrance into life."

Paule nodded.

"My adopted father," he explained, "was a connection of the Heggses. He had no children and he lived a solitary life. Fortunately I had gifts which appealed to him. He kept my history from me until I went to college."

"This was all ordinary detective work," Rodes continued. "It was easy with the motive discovered. One by one they had disappeared, descendants of old Israel Fernham who, without a doubt, sent your grandfather to hang. There wasn't the faintest doubt but that you were responsible for their disappearance. What had you done with them? I worked at that. Somehow or other I never believed that you had murdered them. I expected to discover them somewhere in confinement, victims of some melodramatic passion for revenge on your part, and, as you know, I discovered nothing of the sort. I discovered them at last, living apparently in the greatest contentment and some apparent prosperity, as quack drug vendors. I have spent months of my time and of my ingenuity trying to trace a single occasion upon which you have communicated with them, and I can't do it. I can't even discover that you have ever been seen with one of them from the moment they left their homes. I can't associate you with their abduction or disappearance in any way. You have beaten me, Sir Lawrence Paule. I am going to get that twenty thousand pounds, and I shall hand in my report as to your origin, but arrest you I can't—even if I wanted to. There isn't evidence enough even for a Bow street magistrate to keep you for a night."

PAULE was thoughtful for some time. Presently he roused himself.

"Your natural course, I suppose, Mr. Rodes," he said, "is to return to Norwich, attach yourself to these three men, and bring them by hook or by crook into contact with either Lady Honerton or Lady Judith Fernham. That, at any rate, insures your twenty thousand pounds."

"It is the only finish of the business that I can see," Rodes admitted, "but there's something extraordinarily crude about it."

"There is also something extraordinarily dangerous," Paule assured him earnestly. "This affair has always been more or less a sort of duel between us. You may recognize the fact that, whatever faults I may have or however much of a criminal I may be, I am a teller of the truth. I will sign a paper at this minute, acknowledging that you have discovered the three missing people and are entitled to the reward. I give you my word of honor that you shall have the reward, but if you will bring the matter to an end my way you may save grave trouble."

"Go on," Rodes invited.

"You will get back to London tonight," Paule continued. "Motor down to Honerton tomorrow and prepare Lady Judith, but more especially her mother, for the return of the three missing people. Samuel, the old man, I know was expected there today for a month. You had better also drop him a hint. Then go into Norwich and keep your eye upon the Klasks, and on Wednesday morning read the newspapers."

"The newspapers!" Rodes repeated.

"Read my address to the congress at Paris," Paule enjoined deliberately. "You will understand in a minute. Then wait at the Maid's Head hotel until I arrive. It may be two days, it may be three. I shall come at the earliest possible moment."

"You give me an idea, of course," Rodes admitted. "I have been to every one of the scientists already, though, without any result. You weren't even present when two of them disappeared."

"Wait for the papers," Paule insisted. "You want them back sane and whole, don't you—not lunatics? Therefore do as I beg."

They were jolting along down to the docks now. The detective roused himself from a somewhat prolonged reverie.

"Well," he observed, "it's an amazing windup to what promised to be one of the most sensational cases in the world. You seem to have got just a little ahead of the law, Sir Lawrence—discovered a crime which isn't entered in the statute book."

Paule smiled grimly. He was handing his things out of the window to a porter.

"The money is yours, but wait until you understand," was his last injunction to Rodes, as the two men parted.

SAMUEL looked ruefully over the side of the car and turned to Reuben, who was sitting in front with him.

"We got to have a new outside cover before the autumn," he declared. "Maybe we last until then. I put a beautiful patch on last week."

"These tires are cruelly expensive," Reuben sighed

"You lads should worry!" Joseph intervened from the back of the car, where he reclined at his ease with Bessie by his side. "There's no one for saving more than I am, but if a new tire's wanted we can afford it."

"We don't need to spend money, dad, just because we can afford it," Reuben retorted.

"Quite right," Joseph assented, "but when the money's got to be spent then it's a comfort to know it's there. What about that advertising?"

"It's a lot of money," Reuben admitted, "but it pays. Did you see our column this morning?"

"It looked beautiful!" Samuel exclaimed enthusiastically.

"Did any of you understand what all this fuss is in the papers this morning about wireless 'hypnosis,' or something of the sort?" Bessie demanded. "Whole columns of it—'greatest scientific discovery of the age!' they call it."

Joseph shook his head.

"I didn't look for any news," he confessed. "I just read our advertisement. Fine!"

Bessie scolded her offspring, who showed signs of disquietude, and returned to the subject.

"That's all very well when there ain't any special news," she protested, "but this is a regular eye opener. It don't seem sense to me. There's a chap in Paris declared that he could give a drug to a person—any one—and let 'em go away wherever they like in reason, and then threw 'em into a state of hypnosis, or whatever the word is—numb his memory and make him do what he wanted. He did it to two chaps who were at the Congress. They drew lots who it should be. Two of them took a little drink and went out without saying where they were going, and for the next hour they did exactly what the English doctor or professor, or whatever he was, said they would. He never went near them, either"

JOSEPH stroked his beard and looked doubtfully at the beautiful lodges and handsome iron gates of Honerton Chase. He brushed the cigar ash from his waistcoast and sat a little more upright.

"We doing right, eh, Reuben?" he asked. "There ain't no mistake about that letter?"

Reuben shook his head.

"Couldn't be," he assured his father. "Plain as posh! The butler or some one here writes that so many of the servants have bought our medicines in Fakenham market that if we pay 'em a call today on our way there they'd make it worth our while. I've got the letter with me. There's a P. S.—'Sale of twenty bottles guaranteed.' Worth starting half an hour earlier for. I'll say so!"

"What a beautiful place!" Joseph murmured reverently. "Think what a lot of money it must have cost."

"Think what a lot of money any one must have to live here!" Reuben exclaimed with a note of awe in his tone.

"Everything very well kept, too," Samuel observed as they neared the house. "Plenty of money even amongst the servants, I should say. No need to cut the prices. I wonder which way goes to the back of the house. We'll ask this chap."

An amazed gardener, reading the notices with which the car was besprinkled, directed them. They passed through some smaller iron gates into the beautiful courtyard. Almost immediately Rodes, in butler's undress, issued from the door and appoached them.

"The famous Messrs.. Klask, I believe," he said urbanely.

All three raised their hats.

"You got it right," Joseph assented. "We got all our medicines here. There are two cases fitted on the back. Now, my dear," he added to Bessie, "better let me get out and talk to the gentleman."

The cases were speedily unstrapped and Reuben produced the stand.

"What do you think?" Joseph asked, addressing Rodes confidentially. "You get the servants out here, eh, and I tell them all about what we make and what we cure. Then if we sell a lot we do a little business with you afterwards."

"Not a bad idea," Rodes acquiesced. "Spread the things out just as you please. There's none of the family about to interfere. Hullo, what's this?"

He turned around. One of the indoor servants was approaching with a tray on which were a jug, a decanter, some tumblers and glasses.

"These country servants," Rodes explained indulgently, "give us a lot of trouble. I told them to offer you refreshments after the business was over. P'raps they're right, though. You've had a warm ride. I'm sure the lady would like a glass of wine," he concluded anxiously.

"It's a trifle early," Joseph reflected, as he watched an amber stream of liquid being poured into a tumbler, "but its a warm morning. What do you say, lads?"

The two young men smiled. The idea of refusing a free drink was too ridiculous for discussion. Rodes, who had taken the tray from the servant, served each one of the three. Then he poured out some wine for Bessie.

"I don't know if I wouldn't as soon have the beer" she said.

Rodes shook his head.

"You'll excuse me, madam," he begged. "We don't offer beer to ladies here."

BESSIE sipped her port with much content, and the three men drank their beer. It was a lazy summer day and there seemed to be scarcely any movement about the back of the great house. From a window high up a man stood looking down, his hands gripping the back of a chair, his face white and set. Round the corner of the house, a bath chair drawn by a little pony had slowly made its appearance. A curious brooding silence reigned everywhere. Rodes had collected the empty glasses and placed them on the tray The other servant he had motioned back into the kitchen. Joseph made no movement towards the stand which he loved. Reuben was sitting perfectly still, with his eyes half closed. Samuel was murmuring inaudible things to himself. Suddenly Joseph shook himself and stepped out of the car. He turned and shouted to Martin, who was standing in the shadow of the garage. His voice had lost all its cringing quality. He appeared to be violently angry.

"What the hell are you about, Martin," he cried, "to let me come out in a rig like this? What do you mean by it?"

"I'm sorry, your lordship," Martin answered, coming forward bravely. "I had a bilious attack and overslept this morning."

"For God's sake, put some clothes out and turn on a bath," Joseph directed. "That's all right! I'll come in the back way."

He stumped off. Bessie looked after him, clutching the child, with her mouth wide open.

"Sakes alive!" she exclaimed. "Reuben, what's got the old man?"

Reuben sat up and laughed quite pleasantly.

"I can't think what's got us all," he rejoined, "sitting out here in the sun! Where's the nurse?"

"Where's the what?" Bessie gasped.

Samuel sprang lightly down from the car and started to follow his uncle.

"I say, I'm going to play singles with Joyce this morning!" he told them. "I'm off to change."

Reuben seemed for a moment to falter. Then he turned away.

"I'm going to put on some flannels," he declared. "I can't think what made me get up so early."

Bessie looked helplessly around.

"Crazy!" she muttered to herself. "All three of them! Absolutely crazy! We shall get the chuck from here jolly quick!"

The pony and bath chair drew up by the side of the car. Rachel leaned over.

"My dear," she said to Bessie, "you are Reuben's wife, aren't you? We used to call him Ernest. I am glad to see you. And this is your baby? May I hold him for a minute, please?"

Bessie, wide eyed and astounded, descended from the car and handed the child over. There was something very sweet but also very compelling about this elegantly dressed, white haired woman, with her beautiful eyes and kind voice.

"Those men of mine, ma'am," Bessie complained, "you saw them? They've all gone off. They've beat it into the house. I'm afraid they're crazy. I never heard such talk!"

Rachael Honerton was living in a world of her own. She was holding the baby tightly in her arms, gazing at him with a rapt expression.

"So this is Reuben's—Reuben's and yours," she murmured, with a sudden instinctive apprehension of the mother standing bewildered by her side.

"What do you know about Reuben?" Bessie demanded.

"My dear," Rachel told her, "Reuben is my son. So this baby is my grandson."

"Your son!" Bessie faltered. "But what is your name?"

"Lady Honerton. You are my daughter, and I am sure we are all going to be very happy together. Wait one moment."

A nurse who had been hovering in the background hurried forward. Rachel handed her the baby.

"You don't mind for a few moments, do you?" she begged, turning to its mother, with a delightful smile. "You see we have to talk. Will you walk by the side of my carriage? I am going to take you to the house."

"You don't mean that you live here?" Bessie asked incredulously.

"Certainly, I do," was the smiling reply. "So are you going to for as long as you like, Bessie, dear. You see I know your name. You look as though you had so much common sense, so much strength. Will you please try to understand?"

"I'll try," Bessie promised. "I'm pretty well dazed, though."

"You must have heard," Rachel continued, her left hand holding Bessie's as they moved slowly towards the avenue, "of the wonderful disappearance of Ernest or Reuben Fernham, and then Samuel Fernham, and then Lord Honerton. Well, those are your three men. My dear. The doctors will explain it some day or other. Just now, we have to be very careful. You see they remembered that this was their home when they got here. We shall have to humor them when we see them again. Don't speak of Norwich, Bessie. Don't seem surprised to be here."

Bessie suddenly began to tremble.

"Reuben may have forgotten that he is married to me," she faltered.

Rachel's beautiful fingers tightened upon the girl's.

"Leave that to me, my dear," she begged. "Reuben will never forget. That is just one thing—one great thing—about all my family and my race. For all our faults, we have fidelity. Reuben's feelings for you and the child would conquer anything else. Only we may have to humor him. You will trust me, please. You will believe me when I tell you that I am very happy to have you for a daughter, and more happy than you could ever imagine about your baby. . . . Now, my dear, I am going to take you indoors for a little time."

AN intense and almost unnatural silence from all human sources seemed to hover that morning over the great front, the terraces and gardens of Honerton Place. There were birds twittering on the lawns, some pigeons in the nearer of the two little woods, and a whole colony of rooks in the elm trees at the commencement of the park. From the tennis courts came the monotonous sound of the mowing machine, and once a peacock on the terrace lifted his head and indulged in his unearthly screech. Judith, who, with Joyce and her Uncle Samuel, were reclining in chaises longues under a clump of cedar trees, suddenly caught the former's fingers.

"It is just as though this were the empty stage and the curtain had rung up for the first act of a play or drama," she murmured. "There is something unreal about it all—the silent house, the emptiness out here, while we wait, you and I with our hearts throbbing. He says—Lawrence says—that it all depends upon the next few minutes."

"Lawrence?" Joyce, who was of more phlegmatic temperament, murmured curiously.

"If you didn't know as much as that, you're an idiot," Judith declared. "Sit still, dear. There's some one coming!"

Through the wide flung doors, opening into the hall, the nurse appeared, wheeling a perambulator. On either side of her were Rachel and Bessie—the latter in a cool white gown of Judith's, which by some miracle fitted her, and a large garden hat. They came slowly down to the terrace, and made for the shade of the cedar trees.

"The woman's all right, anyhow," Judith pronounced. "I like her. She still thinks that either we're all crazy or that she's gone off her head herself, but she's settled down to make the best of it while it lasts. Joyce, here's one of them. Now we shall know!"

Reuben, dressed from head to foot in white flannel, his hands in his pockets, came strolling down the steps. He called out to Judith as he crossed the lawn. Bessie began to shiver. He had not once looked towards her.

"I say, Judith," he suggested lazily, "do you feel like a set? If so, we could have a four to start with and let Joyce and Samuel fight it out afterwards."

Judith rose to her feet and closed the pink parasol she was holding over her head. Her fingers were trembling, but her voice was perfectly steady.

"Yes, I'll play, Reuben," she acquiesced.

He turned towards his uncle, who was sitting upright in his chair, his hands clasped upon the ivory handle of his stick.

"Feeling all right this morning, Uncle Samuel?" he asked kindly. "This sunshine ought to do you good."

"I am well," was the hoarse reply. "I am waiting to see Samuel."

"He'll be out directly," Reuben observed. "He began to change before I did."

A servant issued from the house with rackets under his arm. Reuben turned around.

"Just tell Martin to send some cool drinks down to the tennis court in twenty minutes or so," he directed. "And you might let Mr. Samuel know that we're waiting."

HE strolled deliberately across towards the little group gathered round the perambulator. Rachel gripped the back of her chair. It seemed to Bessie that, notwithstanding the sun, the color was all ebbing away from her cheeks. Surely there was something strange about this young man, suddenly more debonair, suddenly free from a dozen small affectations. He seemed to have slipped back with such amazing ease into the consciousness of his altered position.

"New gown, Bess," he remarked approvingly. "Jolly sensible, too, this weather!"

"I——"

He looked at the nurse, and for the first time the slightest trace of surprise showed itself in his face. It passed, however, almost at once.

"Can I have the kid for a moment, nurse?" he asked. "I won't take him into the sun."

The child sat up and crowed. Reuben took it into his arms, a bundle of white swansdown and indefiniteness. He talked absurdities for several moments, and they listened to him, the two women, as though he had drawn aside the veil before paradise

"Hullo, here's Samuel!" he declared, looking back towards the house. "We'll have to start. Are you coming down to watch us, mother? You must come anyhow, Bessie. Put the child back, nurse," he added, handing him over.

Samuel had paused on the top of the steps to light a cigaret.

"I say," he shouted, "some one's taken my racket out of the press. I put it in myself the last time I used it. Foul play, I suspect. Hullo, dad!"

Samuel opened his lips, but no sound came. His eyes were riveted upon his son. There was wonder in his gaze and an amazing tenderness. The young man crossed the lawn and leaned over his chair.

"You're looking fine this morning, dad," he declared. "Being here always seems to do you good. Are you coming down to watch us play tennis?"

"Presently—I'll come presently," was the subdued yet eager reply. "You're looking better, my boy—much better!"

"I'm tophole!" Samuel answered frankly. "'Neurota' must have done the trick! I'm rather thinking of writing a testimonial for the firm. I must go and talk to Joyce."

He approached her chair, smiling but without undue excitement.

"Forgive my going to speak to dad first," he begged as he held out his hands to lift her from her chair. "Come on down to the courts before the others. I want to hear from your own lips that you haven't changed your mind."

"I can tell you that before we start," she laughed. "I wish I could think that being engaged is going to have the same effect upon me as it has upon you," she added, studying him wonderingly. "I never saw you look so well!"

He passed his arm through hers.

"Don't hurry, you people," he called out, glancing over his shoulder. "Remember we're young and that sort of thing! How ripping you look in tennis clothes, Joyce," he continued. "I thought you could never look sweeter than you did in that blue gown you wore at dinner last night, but I like you even better in this white kit."

Reuben stepped back to meet Bessie, and drew her attention to the two.

"I say," he asked, "were we ever so bad as that?"

THEN, through the open doors, came Joseph, also in flannels, with a long cigar in the corner of his mouth.

"Any one seen Martin?" he demanded. "Where the devil is the fellow?"

Martin hurried across from the tennis courts, and Joseph held out the top of his trousers for inspection.

"Look here!" he exclaimed. "You must have put out some one else's trousers for me. They're all too large. Rachel, look at this! I haven't lost six inches in the night, have I?"

Martin was speechless. Judith came up, laughing softly.

"Why, my dear dad," she declared, "you've been getting thinner and more sylphlike all the summer. I wondered when you'd notice it. Those are your trousers all right. You'll have to have them taken in and another hole made in your belt."

Joseph surveyed his decreased dimensions with obvious pleasure.

"To think I never noticed it!" he muttered. "I had an idea I was getting thinner, too. What do you think of this, Rachel?" he went on, turning again towards his wife. "I shall have to go and see my tailor the first day I'm in town!"

"You will indeed, my dear," she assented.

Bessie, to whom he had not yet spoken, glanced at him anxiously. He returned her gaze, and removed his cigar for a moment from his mouth.

"Hullo, what's wrong with you, Bessie?" he inquired. "Kid not been behaving? You little rascal!" he proceeded. "Hold my cigar for a minute, nurse."

There were more amenities with the baby, after which Joseph returned it to the nurse and took up his cigar again with satisfaction.

"These Laranagas improve every day," he confided to Samuel. "Never tasted anything better than this one. I wish you smoked, old chap. I'm going to sit here and enjoy it. Keep little Reuben on the other side, nurse. There isn't must wind, but I don't want the smoke to get in his eyes."

Judith suddenly raised her head and listened. From somewhere in the stable yard there was the sound of the soft purring of an engine. She turned to Reuben.

"I'm going into the house for a few minutes," she announced. "We must give Samuel and Joyce a chance!"

"They've gone into the chalet to look for balls," Reuben grinned. "All right, don't hurry so far as I'm concerned."

Judith skirted the side of the house rapidly and passed through into the courtyard. A car was standing there with Futoy at the wheel.

"Are you waiting for Sir Lawrence?" she asked.

Futoy signified his grave assent. Judith turned back into the house. She met Martin in the hall.

"Can you tell me where Sir Lawrence is?" she inquired quickly.

"In the front library, my lady," Martin replied. "He is writing a note.

JUDITH breathed a sigh of relief as she opened the door of the room and found him there. He rose form the table almost at her entrance, a letter in his hand.

"I have just been writing down a little advice," he explained, "to help you to deal with any emergency."

"And I have come to give you a little advice," she retorted, closing the door firmly behind her. "The first part of it is——"

"Well?"

"That you come and kiss me at once."

He threw the letter on the table. She moved a step towards him. There was something absolutely steely in his demeanor, forbidding in the gesture with which his whole being seemed to stiffen.

"You are a very emotional person, Lady Judith," he said curtly, "and you are carried away just now by a tide of feeling. You see the end of all your troubles and you are grateful. You forget that it was I who was responsible for those troubles."

"Go on, please," she invited pleasantly. "Say it all."

"You have to remember," he continued, his tone becoming harsher, "who I am—Heggs' grandson, the man who was hanged. You have to remember that it was I who in a spirit of vengeance deliberately risked the lives and the reason of three members of your family."

"I understand all that," she assented. "I should be inclined to forgive a great deal, though, for the simple reason that you have shown such excellent taste in avoiding melodrama. You might easily have made lunatics of all three, or have killed them with scarcely any fear of detection. Then you could have revealed your identity and gloated. I should have hated that!"

She paused. For the moment he had nothing to say.

"As it is," she went on, "what have you done? As a family when you found us, we were a decadent lot. Israel, my grandfather, was the prototype of all that was best in us, and there wasn't one of us who was fit to hold a candle to him. Ever since his passing we have sucked up wealth and luxury until our men were becoming rotters and I—well, I am not proud of the life I lived for a few years. Remember what they were, those three, when you drove them out! Dad hadn't a thought but for his money. He ate too much, he drank too much, he smoked too much. Look at him today. He looks ten years younger. He has done some solid work. He may forget it, but the good it did him is there, written in his face. Look at Reuben! He has a touch of my grandfather Israel in his expression already. He's harder. He'll never fall back. And Samuel! He's as much improved as any of them. A year ago I couldn't have pointed out a more selfish young man. Yet his first thought when he arrived here was not for Joyce but for his father. You haven't done any one any harm, Lawrence. We're really all very much obliged to you. I'm the only one you seem to treat badly."

"You?" he queried.

"Yes, you're keeping me waiting such a long time."

"For what?"

"For everything!" she murmured, with upstretched arms.

"OF course, if you're going to be this kind of a lover," she declared a little later, "I shall have to give up wearing these ethereal sort of clothes. Please pull yourself together now and come out on the lawn while I make the great announcement. After all, it's much better to have you in the family. If anything goes wrong at any time, you will be on the spot. Tell me," she went on, passing her arm through his affectionately and leading him towards the door, "what happened to the great prescription which numbs the brain and makes the subject so amenable to hypnosis? I tried to read the whole account of the proceedings, but it was terribly difficult."

"The president of the society," he told her, "has locked it up with two other formulae which scientists have evolved at different times, and which we have decided are too dangerous to be of practical use to humanity at present. One, I may tell you, would make war at any time absolutely impossible. The other would protect us in case of unexpected attack from the possible inhabitants of one of the planets we have been watching. Mine is the third of the discoveries which it has been decided are too dangerous to be given to the world. In the words of the president, 'the publication of this formula could lead only to confusion and distress.'"

"That's all those stupid scientists know about it!" she murmured as they passed out into the hall.

THE END.

THE GATES OF DOOM - - - - - - - - - - By Rafael Sabatini

lady of surpassing wealth. I know her in no other way and in no other way do I desire to know her."

The contempt, the disgust on the nobleman's face was overwhelming.

"By God, Captain Gaynor!" he cried, in a voice thick with passion, "I have welcomed you to my house. I have sat at table with you. I have deemed you a gentleman."

"Ah! And you find me?" quoth the captain, entirely unruffled, yet with a challenging note in the question.

But the other answered him undeterred. "I find you a—a jackal. You have spoken of yourself as an adventurer, a soldier of fortune. I did not dream what depths of degradation the term could imply. You have put an affront upon me in making me this proposal. 'Twas to consider me your equal in baseness. It is an insult for which you shall give me satisfaction. Fore gad, you shall!"

THE soldier of fortune stood a little pale before that onslaught. His lips were set, and in his steely eyes there was a cold glitter before which men of bigger heart than Pauncefort had quailed in their time. He moved at length from his position before the empty fireplace, and sauntered, a graceful, supple figure, to the windows. There he stood a moment gazing out upon the breaking day, what time his host's eyes followed him, angry and impatient.

The captain was revolving something in his mind, debating something eminently distasteful. It went against his wayward, imperious nature to explain himself to any man. Many had misunderstood his motives aforetime; and he had left them in a misunderstanding, for which they had not infrequently paid dearly. Yet here was a man whom that night's business had taught him to despise, and he found himself urged to offer explanations of his conduct to such a man. It was repugnant to him; yet it must be done if he were to have his way in this, if he were to carry through this thing upon which, with his characteristic swiftness, he had determined.

He turned at last, and with his back to the window he faced his host.

"If I apprehend you aright, my lord," said he, and the calm and dignity of his voice and mien, the force of his singularly compelling personality, impressed the other into lending him an ear, notwithstanding the disgust and impatience that possessed him, "if I apprehend you aright it is not with my proposal so much as with my motives that you quarrel. If I had been able to say to you, 'I love Miss Hollinstone,' you would have viewed my proposal differently?"

His lordship flung out an arm in anger. "Perhaps," he rasped. "What matter?"

"O! A deal," replied the other. "Had I been able to say that, then, indeed, would my proposal have been base and ignoble; then, indeed, would you have been right to deem yourself affronted and to demand of me satisfaction. You are surprised at my point of view, my lord? I do not think we are like to see eye to eye in many things; but I would you could see eye to eye with me in this, that you could understand—as you are very far from doing—the true motives out of which I am acting."

Lord Pauncefort bowed, not without irony. "Proceed, sir," he invited his guest. "If anything you can say will mitigate the judgment I have formed——"

"I care nothing for your judgments, my lord," came the sharp, almost passionate interruption. "When men have lived such lives as mine, believe me, they are very far from being touched by the judgments of those whose lives have been smooth and sheltered. In all this world there is but one thing I care for, one cause in which were I not prepared to lay down my life tomorrow I should not be tonight in England. None knows that better than your lordship. If I have a hope of personal fortune, it is a remote and distant hope, to follow upon, as it is bound up with, the fortune of another. For ten years have I waited, acquiring knowledge in foreign service, steeling and tempering myself for the great service that is to come. I am in the twenty-ninth year of my age; the first flush of my youth is over, spent without regrets, consecrated like a novitiate to fit me for my task. The cup of youth's pleasures is one that my lips have never touched. The love of woman has passed me by. The money that has come to me in the course of services that I have hired to others has gone, most of it, to the cause on which my heart is set. If it please Almighty God that my hopes bear fruit, that my labors yield return, I shall have my reward and I shall rest me at last. If not," and a shadow crossed the face and dimmed the almost fanatical glow of the blue eyes, "I shall still have my reward within myself—in the glory of the memory of the service rendered to that exiled one in Rome.

"You know of whom I speak, my lord, to what service I refer. Tonight I sat down to play here with money that I scarce dared call my own. Had I lost, it would have been so much lost to the cause; as I have won, it is but just that I count it still money to be devoted to this sacred enterprise, and under no circumstances, sir, would my honor have permitted me, as for a moment you supposed, to return you the draft and await a convenience that may never come.

"My lord, you know full well that our cause is most desperately in need of funds. His majesty lives almost upon charity." There was something akin to a sob in his voice. "Think of it, my lord! You count yourself one of his servants, one of his loyal adherents. You plot and scheme and pray for his return because you believe and are loyal to the rightful king. Can you, then, contemplate his straitened circumstances without feeling yourself humbled and ashamed? Consider how the money you have dissipated here——"

HE broke off suddenly. "But let that be! I am speaking of myself, I think. I have said that this money I have won from you I scarce consider mine. Yet will I adventure it again as I adventured that other. I will adventure it to win more—to win the fortune of Miss Hollinstone, that I may turn it to a like sacred purpose.

"Now, sir," he ended abruptly, "you are informed of the precise height and depth of my baseness; you have the precise measure of the insult I have offered you." And he turned again to the window swiftly, that the other should not see the scalding tears that welled to his eyes, man of iron though he was.

My lord sank to a chair and took his head in his hands, beaten down by the storm of that man's fervor—that man whom he had dubbed in scorn and disgust a self-seeking fortune hunter.

Something of the soldier's enthusiasm had stirred him, and in its wake had come a burning, searing shame at the reflection of what were Gaynor's motives, what his own. The small voice of his conscience whispered mockingly that it was he was the fortune hunter, he that was vile and base, he that, without faith or loyalty, had lent himself to a cause whose prevailing was his forlorn hope, the last perceptible means by which to mend his shattered fortunes.

"Captain Gaynor," he said at last, in a hushed voice, "I ask your pardon for my misapprehension of you."

The captain swung round and faced him again—master of himself once more, calm and self-contained.

"It is your pleasure, then, that we play?" he asked.

But here his lordship's face again grew dark, reflecting thought of which the soldier could have no knowledge, else he would not have insisted as he did.

"Consider, my lord," he cried, "that all the odds are on your side. On the one hand you stand to win; on the other, to lose nothing that is not lost already."

My lord threw up his head, something between amazement and anger in his eyes. "How?" he cried with extraordinary vehemence. "What is't you mean?"

To himself Captain Gaynor cursed the fellow's dullness. He proceeded to explain.

"You have said that, unless you have this money tomorrow, a debtors' gaol awaits you. In such a case will not Miss Hollinstone be lost to you? Do you dream that her uncle and guardian, Sir John Kynaston, will permit this betrothal to continue? It is your only chance that I am offering you, my lord. For your own sake, no less than for mine, you should consent."

It was so clear and plain that Pauncefort for a moment turned the notion over in his mind, and something else—a further unsuspected advantage that must lie with him in such a game, an advantage, indeed, which made a mock of it and himself no better than a cheat did he consent. He frowned in doubt and perplexity. The perplexity he voiced at last.

"How do you look to profit by my loss?" he asked.

Captain Gaynor considered a moment. He came forward and leaned upon the table opposite to his lordship.

"The conquest of a woman so wounded in her pride and vanity should not be an insuperable task. Under the urge of pique she may welcome a suitor who at another time might be disdained. That is my opportunity; none so great, as you may judge; so that here again the odds are all with you. Given the opportunity, however, I am not unpersonable; I have seen the world, and I could no doubt, upon occasion, develop the antics which delight a woman." He spoke quite coldly. "For the rest, not only is her uncle on our side, not only does he expect me at Priory Close on Thursday, but he holds me in some affection; so that the way lies open to me."

"You speak of wounds to her pride and vanity."

"Those consequent upon your lordship's withdrawal of your suit," said Captain Gaynor crisply, his steady eyes full upon the other's.

But his lordship was not dominated by the glance. He smote the table with his clenched hand.

"No!" he roared. "Sink me into perdition, no!"

It was a cry of conscience; the repudiation which common honesty demanded. But Captain Gaynor rated it at a still higher value. Slightly he inclined his head. He spread his hands a little. "Be it so," said he. "We will say no more. I think, with your permission, I will take my leave. The sun is rising."

But the alternative gaped before Pauncefort like a yawning chasm upon whose brink he tottered. He clutched the soldier's sleeve.

"Stay!" he cried. "When a man has lost all else, what matters honor?"

"There are some causes to which one may sacrifice honor and remain honorable. You will remember that should I win, and should all speed thereafter as I desire it, you will have done the cause perhaps the best service that lay within your power."

"Should you win?" said the other. His face was ghastly. "Ah, but, should you lose——" He broke off abruptly. "How shall we play?"

"What would you propose?" quoth Captain Gaynor, controlling the exultation that strained within him like a hound upon the leash.

My lord rose, his dark face was almost sinister now. He passed a white, jeweled hand over his long, slim chin.

"Such a game as this," he said, "should be played, I think, with other tools than dice or cards. Honor is here involved, and with honor should go life as well."

"That," said the captain composedly, "depends upon the point of view, and you and I, my lord, again do not see eye to eye. I do not count this game dishonoring, else you may be very sure I should not engage in it."

"You do not—true!" His lordship winced as he realized the difference, dependent upon their respective motives. "But you do not think of me."

"If I did not," said Gaynor sweetly, "I should accept the game with the tools you have in mind. But those, my lord, are the tools of my trade, and they should place the advantage too heavily with me."

He uttered it as a commonplace; there was no scintilla of boastfulness in his cold statement of an irrefragable fact. His lordship laughed, short and bitterly.

"In that case," said he, "we had better use the tools of mine." And he gathered up the cards that were spread upon the table. "You are, as you have insisted, the incarnation of generosity, Captain Gaynor."

"I am glad that at last you begin to perceive it," said the soldier amiably. "Shall it hang upon a single cut?" He placed my lord's draft upon the table as he spoke.

His lordship glanced at it, and then at the soldier. "Will you not give your generosity a free rein?" said he. "Will you not add to that the other two thousand that you have won from my guests tonight?"

Gaynor, masking his contempt, drew from his pocket another note of hand and a heavy purse. These, too, he placed upon the table.

"Shall I throw in my head as well?" he asked. "It is valued at a thousand guineas."

Pauncefort looked at him with hostile eyes, resentful of the sneer that underlay his words. "I am content," he said.

Capt. Gaynor smiled, took the cards from his lordship, shuffled them with steady fingers and placed the pack upon the table.

"A single cut," he repeated, and by a gesture invited his lordship to go first.

piness for both, but the ultimate thrill of exultation for Pistach came the day following their homecoming, when Jasper Beek appeared at his office and placed ten crisp ten dollar bills on the desk.

"That," grated the ex-husband of the present Mrs. Carter, "is fo' my tuxedo."

Pistach smiled as he took from the corner a carefully wrapped package. He placed this on the desk beside the hundred dollars, and while he counted the bills Jasper inspected the garments.

They were all there—linen freshly laundered and clothes thoroughly cleaned and pressed. In the mind of the one time husband there was no faintest suspicion of the use to which his escrowed wardrobe had been put.

"One hund'ed dollars even," pronounced Lawyer Carter. "An' now you can consider you'se'f divorced fum my wife."

Jasper glowered. "I reckon you think tha's funny."

"I don't think nothin' about it," responded Pistach genially, "I know it!"

As they glared at one another, the idea occurred to Mr. Beek that he had come off sadly second best in the matter of disentangling his marital snarl. His wife had passed into the possession of this other man along with the sum of fifty dollars cash for which Jasper had labored arduously for many torrid weeks. Mr. Beek felt he must not retire from the scene without some Parthian shot which would establish once and for all the impression that he had not been worsted. He conscripted a disdainful expression and placed it upon his countenance.

"Well," he announced, "heah is where Mistuh Jasper Beek gits dolled up in his new clothes an' goes sheikin' around a bit. These is somethin' swell, Lawyer Carter; there ain't no tellin' where they might git me. I kinder reckon I might even git ma'ied to some rich gal with money. I believe these clothes would look awful swell at a weddin'."

Pistach Carter smiled.

"Yes," he agreed earnestly, "they sure do!"
